VOL. I. CLANTON. ALA., THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1910. NO. 1.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES.

The Woodmen of the World at Clanton have taken on new life. Within the past ten days they have initiated twenty-four new men into the secrets of the order and have eight additional applications for admission. These will be introduced to the mysteries of Woodcraft during the present week.

Mr. Clyde Davis, now connected with the Clanton Press, paid Verbena and Mauntain Creek a visit last Saturday in the interest of this paper. On Monday he left to visit the good people of Maplesville and Stanton to impress upon them the benefit of having the CLANTON PRESS visit their homes regularly and the benefits they would derive by giving their job work to the PRESS office. By the way, Mr. Davis secured the names of merchants in these localities who are to handle our piano contest certificates. Look over the list of these, in the several localties, who are distributing these tickets and when trading with them call for the certificates.

Mr. Horace Fulton and wife of Montgomery spent Sunday with the parents of the latter, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Pyron. Mrs. Fulton will remain for some days but Mr. Fulton returned to his work as flagman on the L. & N. railroad Monday morning.

Mr. J. A. Sample of Riderville spent Monday in Clanton on business, returning in the afternoon.

Clanton now has a first-class photographer, Mr. Scott, who was in Birmingham for twelve years. He has opened a gallery in the Reynolds building. For artistic work call on him. tf

Mrs. Tipton Mullins returned Monday from a visit to friends in Birmingham.

Dr. T. M. Martin of Plantersville was a pleasant visitor to Clanton on Monday last.

Miss Aimee Dunn, a beautiful young lady of Greenville, is on a visit to her aunt Mrs. Watts. Miss Dunn is quite an accomplished young lady and has made many friends during her stay in Clanton who will be glad to learn that she contemplates remaining here during the summer months.

The Chilton County Medical Society will have its stated meeting at Clanton on next Tuesday night at the office of Dr. P. I. Hopkins. After the regular business of the Society is transacted a banquet will be tendered the visiting physicians at the Palmer House. Several visiting physicians of distinguished ability are expected to be present and address the society. Dr. Dennis is president of the society and Drs. N. S. Johnson and P. I. Hopkins are the committee of arrangements which is a guarantee that those fortunate enough to be present will have a most elegant time.

The office of the PRESS will be in the Chandler building on the south side of Main street. The friends of the paper are cordially invited to call and inspect our new quarters which are being fitted up especially for the Press. We will be glad to see you at all times. Come in and see our new presses operate.

Nyals Liver Regulartor, the best on earth, for sale by Upchurch Drug Company. Money refunded if it is not satifactory. tf

Carter the Furniture man, is moving things rapidly because he is selling at COST. If you have need of anything in his line you had best call while you have an opportunity to make selections. tf

Mr. I. Gordon made a flying trip to Columbiana on Sunday last, going down to see his best girl.

Mr. F. A. Gullege, of Vebena, one of Chilton county's substantial citizens, was a visitor to Clanton on last Monday. During his stay in the city he took occasion to say a kind word to and about the Press.

When in need of eye glasses call upon us. We guarantee a fit in every respect or money refunded. Upchurch Drug Company. tf

The Court of County Commissioners was in regular session on last Monday and Tuesday, transacting the routine business of the county. Accounts against the county were taken up and allowed, and other business received attention.

Messrs. Woodyard, Kicker and Carey left last Tuesday for a several day's outing on Coosa river. They expect to return laden with fish and other good things.

Mr. Johnson, of Montgomery, the Victor safe man, was in town circulating among the merchants on last Tuesday.

The smiling countenance of Mr. Sims, of route Three, was seen on the streets this week. In conversation with Mr. Sims he said that while the meeting of the Democratic Club of his neighborhood was not so largely attended the enthusiasm manifested by those who were there argued well for the success of the party.

At the Methodist church last night instead of the regular prayer meeting service a missionary rally was held at which addresses were made by several interested in the work of missions. Rev. J. D. Dismukes of Verbena and Rev. E. B. Paul of Deatsville, were present and made addresses. Altogether the occasion was a most pleasant one. Those who attended report having enjoyed the several addresses very much.

The State organizer of the Columbian Woodmen was in Clanton several days last wek perfecting arrrangements for the institution of a lodge of that order. On last Saturday night at the Odd Fellow's hall he organization was put into successful operation with a membership of fifteen. There are several additional candidates to be initiated at the next meeting of the lodge.

The county court met in regular session on last Monday morning with Judge Reynolds presiding. There were six cases set for trial, in each case the deefndant was charged with violation of the prohibition laws. The cases were set over for trial on next Saturday.

The rain came just in time to satisfy the farmers and to put the water wagon out of business for the time being. The dust had become almost intolerable but thanks to a first class rain we will be able to make it up the streets for a few more days without having to shovel the dust aside as the advance is made.

You ought to lay in that lot of kitchen utensil now while you can get them at cost from Carter. He's selling out and he gives piano certificates with each cash purchase.

Oh, for a light or two along the streets when Lun, pale moon, hides her beaming face! Just one or two at intervals along the business street would add greatly to the appearance of the town and to the safety of pedestrians. Can't we have just three Mr. Mayor? Please do!

Contestants for the Grand up right Piano to be given away by The Press will have an opportunity to examine the handsome instrument in a few days by calling at Upchurch Drug store where it will be on exhibition. If you are not already in the contest you had better begin now. We have the names of more than ten handsome young ladies who are competing for this elegant prize.

Remember that with every cash subscription you are entitled to five hundred votes and with every one cent of advertising or job printing you are entitled to five votes. In addition you will receive one vote for each one cent of cash trade done with the several merchants whose names appear in our big advertisement. Next week the names of those who have received votes in the contest and the number of votes received will be announced.

NEWS OF MAPLESVILLE.

The same merry crowd gathered at the hall Saturday night and enjoyed a few hours dancing.

It being such a beautiful afternoon Sunday a crowd of young people were out boating.

There was a good congregation at the Baptist church Sunday and Sunday night. Brother Mitchell delivered two interesting sermons.

Mr. Charlie Strawbridge was nowhere to be found Sunday, though we believe if we had gone out about five miles from the "city" it would not have been hard to find him.

Mr. Huggins spent Saturday and Sunday in Montgomery, visiting his parents.

Mr. J. C. Dardis and Mr. T. R. Morris took their usual trip down the road Sunday.

Mr. S. R. Morris, took his first degree in the Masons last week.

PANSY.

Mr. Carter, the Furniture Man, is making preparations to leave Clanton. He is selling out his entire stock regardless of cost. He will not have opportunity to ecchre furniture or house furnishings at public sale, therefore you, the people, will get the benefit of his loss. He gives piano certificates with every cash purchase.

JEMISON JOTTINGS.

Jemison is forging to the front. The merchants seem to be doing a fine business and the different saw mills situated in and around Jemison give the town the look of pioneer days when there were great forests of virgin pine abounding in the southland.

Mrs. J. B. Crysell is convalescent after a two weeks illness.

Mrs. L. H. Reynolds and Mrs. C. W. Reynolds were pleasant visitors to Jemison last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Gentry entertained at progressive flinch Monday evening. Those present were the Misses DeVoe, Misses Annie Lee Cross, Jim Paine, Mae Hunnicutt, and Ida Patton, Messrs. Henry and Clarence Shaw, L. C. Wilson, Arthur and Robert Hunt, Frank Chesshat, and Stanley McNeill.

Miss Roselle Burns is again at home much to the delight of her many friends.

There was quite a large crowd at the Methodist church Sunday night. Rev. Mills seems to know how to draw the crowds with his forceful way of speaking.

The prayer meeting at the Presbyterian church is growing in numbers. On last Wednesday evening a choir was organized which will prove an addition to the prayer meeting. This choir hopes to be in good practice by the time the Presbyterian meeting begins, which will be on the Third Sunday in this month.

There will be a missionary rally at the Methodist church Thursday evening.

Prof. Strock from Verbena was in town Saturday.

Mrs. Paul H. Skaggs of Birmingham is the guest of Mrs. D. Langston.

On April 1st our town people were entertained at the school house with a reproduction of the old time Punch and Judy. The show proved a good "April fool" to every one present.

Mr. Barfield, one of Elmore's prominent men registered at the Caines hotel the past week, also Mr. and Mrs. Haites from St. Louis.

Mr. W. T. Hand is at home after a trip through the timber districts of Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reynolds visited Montevallo Sunday.

Mr. J. H. Patton made a flying visit to Birmingham on last Thursday.

Mrs. Allie Cooper of Clanton is visiting relatives here this week.

Mrs. Bertha Johnson has quite an interesting music class. Her pupils show that they are in the hands of a skilled musician.

Our popular milliner, Miss Rosa Adams, is showing a beautiful line of spring hats.

Much success to the Press and au revoir till we come again.

NOTES FROM THORSBY.

The Spring term of the Thorsby Institute begun on last Monday morning under most favorable conditions; prospects for a large increase in the enrollment is bright indeed. The instructors are looking forward to a larger increase in the enrollment of those who are to take advantage of the normal course afforded at this elegant school for making preparation for the examinations before the state board of examiners.

The students of the institute are now busily engaged in rehearsing their annual play which gives promise of great success, and enjoyment to those fortunate enough to attend. The title is "Mrs. Briggs, of the Poultry Yard," a catchy little farce-comedy with the following cast of characters: Mrs. Briggs, a widow, Miss Hilda Anderson; Silas Green, a near relative, Serene G. Norton; Ralph Briggs, Edward Callen; Jimmie Briggs, Sloughton Rice; Alvira Briggs, Lorrine Short; Melissa Briggs, Wilma Burson; Virginia Lee, Lois Hubbard; Mr. Lee, Tom Horthorne; Dulcy Thornton, Helen Groves, Mandy Bates, who studies, Mary Morgan; Mrs. O'Connor, Rosa McClain. Mrs. Clara A. George will have charge of the stage and direct the performance of those taking part, which is a guarantee that everything will go off in the most perfect manner. Watch for further announcements.

On last Friday night the Ladies Guild of Thorsby entertained their friends at Bate's Hall with an "April Fool" sociable, which was greatly enjoyed by those fortunate enough to attend. Quite a number of young folks gathered with their friends of the guild at the hall and an evening of rare pleasure was had. It is such entertainments as these which advance the social welfare of a community and we indulge the hope that during the coming warm season others of like character will be inaugurated.

The political atmosphere of Thorsby is still bright and crisp. So far we have had no candidates handshaking with our people, but we are looking forward to the coming week as one of aggressiveness on their part. The democrats here are making ready for a great campaign when the political hurdle is begun. Tell some of the candidates that we would like to see their familiar faces upon our streets again.

The strawberry crop promises to be unusually large this season. The acreage has been increased somewhat over former years and the plants are looking vigorous. Soon the cry will go out for pickers and packers and those who enjoy this delicious fruit will be satisfied.

Thorsby is fast forging to the front as a fruit and dairy market; our people have learned that these things pay handsomely, and are devoting much of their time and attention to smaller fruits, milk, butter and cream.

Keep your eye on Thorsby; her people being thrifty, her homes hospitable and her advantages above the average she is bound to forge to the front.

Much success to the new paper—may it live long and prosper; we hail it with delight as a medium through which we can hear democratic news and in which we can give expression to matters that pertain to our community and our common good.

Note by Editor—Thanks for your kind expressions of good will. The abject in publishing the Clanton Press is to further the interests of the democratic party in the county and to strive for the upbuilding of every section of our county. We are always glad to hear from you and want you to use our columns whenever you have anything of interest, either local or otherwise.

FALAKTO.

Mr. H. A. J. Harris went to Montgomery on Saturday last when his daughter, Miss Bessie, underwent an operation at one of the local infirmaries for tumor. This estimable young lady has been a sufferer for severaly years and it is sincerely hoped that the operation will prove entirely successful and that she will be restored fully to health.

BARACCA CLASS 'CUE.

A most enjoyable event for Clanton young people was the chicken barbecue given by Mr. Tipton Mullins and his Baracca class in compliment to the Philathea class of the Baptist Sunday school on last Friday evening.

The scene of the festivities was the beautiful grove adjacent to Mr. Mullin's home which was brilliantly lighted with incandescent lights.

Here, the boys and girls, with their chaperones, gathered about 5 o'clock in the afternoon preparatory to broiling the cickens, a goodly number of which had been brought from the country especially for this occasion. A long barbecue pit, of modern design, cemented and arranged with wire screens, to prevent the scorching or burning of the meats, was ready for the use of those gathered in the grove. Pleasantness and good cheer prevailed as by turns they stood around the pit and shared the pleasures of preparing the feast. None could have been indifferent since the prize for the most skilled in the cullinary art was said to be "a happy home."

After the process of barbecuing was completed the merry makers, seventy-five in number, were seated at the tables, where during the first course they were served with pickles, olives, broiled chicken, broiled course consisted of delicious cream and cake.

After this sumptuous repast those present enjoyed an hour or more in jokes and quips and pranks and merry making after which they repaired to their several homes, well pleased with the entertainment and with the knowledge of having contributed to the success of a worthy cause.

OLD BETSEY IS DEAD.

On last Friday just across the river in Coosa county Deputy Marshals Kelly and Sheehan accompanied by Deputy Collector Winters effectually put Old Betsey out of business. Betsey had seen better days, but, notwithstanding his merfortunes and hardships was doing business at the same old stand when the government officials made their appearance. Hearing that "something was doing" in the neighborhood where Old Betsey was stationed the above named lynx eyed government officials made a visit to the territory in which old Betsey held sway. There they found her of feminine cognomen busily engaged in converting the juice of the corn into the cup that cheers—and inebrates. Around Old Betsey, in her last hours, stood four stalwart men doing all within their power to assist the old lady in her efforts. From her nostrils boiled volumes of black smoke showing that she was on to her job with full vigor. Old Betsey, as you have discovered, was once a mountain dew distillery that came under the ban of the government laws. She was operating without the advice or consent of Uncle Sam and the officials were sent down to ascertain why it was done thus. Together with Old Betsey was captured about six hundred gallons of carn beer and two shot guns. The operators were carried to Montgomery and bound over to await the action of the United States grand jury. Old Betsey was once before captured by government officials and badly disabled, being cast into the bottom of Coosa river, but she was fished out by enterprising individuals, patched up and made to do efficient work again.

This time, however, she was so badly mutilated and distorted that it will be well night impossible for a second operation to put her in condition for work.

We want the friends of The Press to bear in mind that we have ordered and will install within the next six or eight days one of the most modern printing presses that can be bought and a full line of display type, and other printers' materials and supplies. We can and will do the very best work in all departments of the job printing trade known to the art.

Our plant will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Clyde Davis which is a guarantee for neat work. Call on us when you wish job printing.

The Press is expecting to be severely berated for having its paper printed in a first class printing establishment rather than undertake in the beginning to impose upon the people a sheet that can scarcely be read as is the case in some instances in order that we may claim to be both edited and printed in the same office. We think that it matters little to the average read whether their paper is prined in a China shop or a millinery store so long as it gives them the uews and furnishes them with first-class service. We believe that the people want a clean, readable paper and will not stop to inquire so much where it is printed as what does it print?

We expect to give the people the news at all times and print it in a readable form and wish clear cut type; we intend to give our first class services and do not be led away from the main issue by the dwaddle that "other" papers are printed and edited at home. That is a matter of little consequence and merely serves as a weak peg on which to hang an excuse.

Then, too, we are expecting an attempt to make The Press the butt of ridicule because the paper heretofore published did not continue in business.

If this were not such a silly matter we might point to other great institutions which have met with temporary embarrassment but which have afterward forged to the front and became powers in their particular fields of activity. The test and proof of manliness is not in never falling but in rising after the fall.

We might say to those who are disposed to criticise us that it is altogether unseemly to make light of another fellow's misfortunes, but to do so would be a waste of time for those who do not already know this and those who attempt to make capital out of the misfortunes of another scarcely pay any attention to the amenities of polite life or the engaging graces of chivalry.

We rather look forward to direful predictions of an early demise on the part of the Press but there is a great difference in making prophecies and in being a prophet. It is perhaps best, however, to await these people's sad attempts. When they come to duty Clanton will have already gone to sleep, and best wishes attend to take care of themselves, nevertheless

From the way the Pope seems to be treating Americans of exalted political station in recent times it seems that he thinks himself the whole cheese. But there is another phaze to this affair it appears to The Press.

The Pope feels that if he could succeed in making Fairbanks or Roosevelt bow to his demands in one particular instance he would then hav the entering wedge for further and greater political demands upon the American people. The struggle for recognition is not confined to the lowly altogether; even those in high places sometime covet more power and greater notice.

All honor to both Fairbanks and Roosevelt for not complying with the demands of the Pope of Rome.

The Press is requested to announce that on next Saturday mornin at 9:30 there will be public speaking at the court house. Hon. Robt. H. Mangum of Selma and perhaps several other distinguished orators, will be present to address the people of Chilton county. It is the desire that as many as possible come to this meeting—the ladies are especially invited to be present.

Mr. Mangum is an orator of distinguished ability and a rare treat is in store for all who turn out to hear him.

The public speaking will in no wise conflict with the meeting of the Fair association at the coure house as the two meetings come at different hours in the day. Let all who can make it a point to be present at the court house at nine thirty Saturday morning.

Matters are fast taking tangible shape in the political affairs of Chilton county. With a little more activity on the part of those who have the real welfare of the party and of the county at heart the democrats can assure themselves of victory in the fall election. There is no reason why Chilton county demorats should not elect every one of its nominees to office. It can be done and it will be done if we will but pull together, uniting our sternght and working systematically. With the advent of democrats into the various county offices old Chilton will shake off her lethargy and march forward to better and the greater things. Arouse yourself democrats and get to work!

Readers of the Press are reminded that we have installed an up-to-date Job Printing Office at which you can secure the very best work at the most reasonable rates. We print circular letters, dodgers, posters, banners, and notices. We make a specialty of letter heads, envenolpes, statements, announcements. In fact we can do anything in the Job Printing line that ay other job office ca do and we guarantee you perfect satisfaction. When you have need of any work in our line give us a trial. The job office will be under the persnoal supervision of Mr. Clyde Davis who has devoted his life to the printer's trade and who is a skilled workman. Remember that Clyde is a Chilton county boy and will greatly appreciate any work you may give him to execute.

Mr. Guy Higgins is fast completing his arrangements for the installation of a large planing mill just to the south of the railroad station.

Mr. Higgins proposes to equip his plant with the very latest improved machinery which will enable him to place upon the market the finished product in large quantities. The plant will employ about thirty-five men in the beginning and this number will be increased as the out-put of the mill is increased. Already great racks and piles of lumber are being placed near the sight of the planer so that it can be seasoning and in order to have a large stock on hand to keep the operatives busy when once the steam whistle announces that work has begun.

It is such enterprise and such institutions that go to make a city. Clanton stands badly in need of more of this kind. They bring in more industrious citizens and dispense weekly pay rolls all of which goes toward the material and industrial advancement of the town.

All honor to Mr. Higgins for his enterprise; may Clanton soon see more of his kind. Mr. Higgins proposes to utilize almost every inch of the timbers gotten out by him. In addition to the rought material used for farming and for railroad purposes he will utilize the full capacity of his mill in turning out finished boards, mouldings, ceiling, hardwoods, railings, cornices and all other products of a modern planing and turning mill.

A Visit Home.

Harmon's Education.

What It Did For Him and What John Gregg Learned.

W. R. Rose, in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The local bumped its way to a full stop alongside the little railway station. The few passengers rapidly scattered, the frantic appeals of the barker for the Hooper House 'bus falling on unheeding ears. One passenger was a little slower in his movements. He had cast a quick glance at the loungers on the platform, and then turned back to the truck that was drawn up beside the baggage car.

He pointed out his trunk to the baggage master as he handed over the claim check, and just then a voice hailed him.

"Over here, Harmon," it said.

The young man looked across the platform.

A bearded man in a farm wagon drawn by a restless team had hailed him from the highway. The young man waved his hand and picking up his trunk carried it to the waiting wagon and put it in behind the seat. Then he reached up his hand to the bearded man.

"How are you, father?"

The older man ignored the proffered grasp.

"Get in," he hastily directed, "this team ain't none too easy to hold. Th' nigh horse there is likely to bolt if the engine toots." The young man swung himself into the seat.

"Let me drive them, father."

"Forgotten how, haven't you?"

"No, father."

"Wait a minute." The engine hoarsely tooted and the nigh horse went up in the air. "What did I tell you—whoa there, whoa!"

The team clattered up the main street, the driver finally bringing them down to a safe pace. As they struck the highway beyond the village, the gray eyes turned toward the younger man.

"Well, son, you've got an education."

"Yes, father, and a very good education it is."

"An' you're through college for good and all?"

"For good and all."

The older man clucked to his team.

"Well, I've done what I promised your mother I'd do. I've sent you through."

"I'm very grateful, father."

"Just grateful in words."

"In every way."

There was a little silence.

"An' you think the education pays?"

"Yes, indeed. No matter what I may do my education will be a help to me."

"Even if it's farmin'?"

"Yes, father."

"That sounds all right." He gave the young man another quick glance. "You know this schoolin' of yours pinched me a good deal."

"I know, father, and I did my best to make the expense as light as possible."

"But it pinched just th' same. An' you feel as if you were in debt to me some, eh?"

"I owe you a great deal, father."

"That's th' right spirit. An' you've come back to work it out, eh?"

"Yes, father. I've come back to do my best to show you that I appreciate your kindness and your self-sacrifice."

"Prove it," said the older man tersely.

He turned the team into a driveway that led beside an old gray farmhouse.

"Let me put up the horses, father."

He leaped down lightly and put the trunk on the back porch of the farmhouse, then drove the team across the yard and into the barn.

The older man looked after him.

"Seems strong an' good-natured," he said. "I wonder how long his good-nature will last." He turned abruptly and entered the house. When he had informed the old housekeeper that his son had come home, he came out on the porch and washed his hands and face in the tin basin.

"Th' boy takes after his mother," he murmured. "I never noticed it so much before. Well, I did what I promised her I'd do. The boy's got his college education—an' thinks well of it. Though how it's goin' to help him in farmin' I don't quite see." He looked toward the barn. The young man had come out and was just closing the doors. "He's quick enough," muttered the old man. "I'll get out to th' barn a little later an' see if he's fixed things right. Hullo, what's that?"

A cry from the broad pasture at the left had startled him. Across it he saw a little girl running. Her hat was off and her hair flew about. The young man heard her, too. He ran to the fence.

"What is it?" he cried.

The older man could not hear the child's reply. But the young man leaped the fence and started across the field at a remarkably rapid pace. As he passed the girl she turned and followed him. Almost in a moment he had dipped into the hollow beyond the pasture and disappeared from the older man's view.

"Harmon!" he cried, but it was too late.

The old man growled beneath his breath and crossed the yard, scowling angrily.

"That was Jim Parker's little girl," he muttered. "I s'pose Jim's on one of his tantrums. But th' boy had no business to mix in it. Jim is likely to hurt him. I'd go half a mile out of my way to avoid Jim when he's drunk. I wonder what's happening?"

It was nearly a half hour before the boy came back. He was walking briskly with his hands in his coat pockets.

"Sorry to have kept you waiting, father," he said in his easy way.

The old man looked him over.

"Where have you been?" he demanded.

The young man laughed.

He filled the tin washbasin at the pump and the old man noticed that the knuckles of his left hand were bleeding.

"See here," he cried roughly, "you mustn't mix in matters that don't concern you."

"But this did concern me, father," said Harmon, lightly. "Our neighbor was drunk and ugly and was shamelessly abusing his poor little wife."

There was a brief silence.

"Well?" demanded the old man.

"He is sorry he abused her," replied Harmon, gravely, "and I don't believe he will abuse her again."

The old man stared hard at his son.

"Did you learn that at college?" he asked .

"Yes, father."

"Come in to supper."

They ate in silence.

"Son," said the old man presently, "I'm sorry I couldn't come down to th' school th' day you got your papers. I was too busy to get away."

"I was disappointed," said Harmon, "but I knew it was a considerable journey and that you have but little time."

"You got through all right?"

"Yes, father."

"Guess we'll go up to the north woods to-morrow an' cut some winter wood."

"All right, father."

So Harmon Gregg's life on the farm began. He was a steady worker and a great help to the old man. When the day's work was ended he ate his supper and tramped down to the village. Once the old man remonstrated.

The boy laughed.

"I must have a little variety, father. All work and no play makes Jack a much poorer worker."

"No carousing, boy."

And the boy laughed again.

It was like the old man to make no inquiries concerning his son's doings in the village. But one day he was at the foot of the driveway when Abner Simmons drove by.

"Hullo," said Abner, as he drew in his horse, "how are ye, Gregg?"

"As well as usual," the old man responded.

The neighbor leaned down.

"That's a great boy of yours," he remarked.

"Th' boy's all right," said the old man sharply.

"Both my boys think he's the finest thing that ever walked." Abner chuckled. "I s'pose you know what he's up to?"

"I know pretty well what he's up to in th' daytime," said Harmon's father.

"Don't he talk to you about it?"

"He talks to me about things he knows I'm interested in."

"Well, mebby you'll be more interested in learnin' it from me. First, he's got a sort o' literary club goin' down there. It's really more of a school. He gets up an' gives little talks on interestin' subjects, an' the room's crowded every Tuesday night. I went down with the boys las' Tuesday an' it was just wonderful th' way he handled things. Never had no trouble but once. Pete Mullins an' a couple of his Inlet gang came up to hoot an' break up th' meeting an' your boy went out an' got Pete—you know how big he is—an' fetched him in an' made him sit in th' front row all th' evening. Your boy's been reorganizin' th' fire department, too. It was a good deal run down, but he's got th' broken engine tinkered into shape, an' the two companies recruited up, an' he's run a telephone wire from th' hotel to th' engine house. Th' boys wanted to make him chief, but he wouldn't take it. An' there's a lot o' talk about 'lecting him school director. It 'pears as th' way he's gone [illegible] he stands a good show [illegible] he wants. Better [illegible] an' have [illegible] night—his subjec' is 'The Advantages of a College Education.' Well, so long."

He lifted the reins and clucked to the horse. As he passed beyond earshot he growled under his breath, "Derned ol' grouch, he don't deserve to have a son."

And Harmon's father turned and slowly walked up the driveway. He was thinking deeply. Of course he hadn't asked his boy's confidence, but the lad might have told him something about his work in the village. It wasn't right that the information should come to him from Abner Simmons, a man who had never liked him. He even fancied Abner took a special delight in giving him the news—a delight born of dislike.

It was the college education that was to blame for it all. To blame for what? For his boy's being helpful and popular?

And then he suddenly contrasted Harmon with Abner Simmons' simple but well meaning lads, and a chuckle came from his tightly drawn lips.

The next Tuesday night he went down to the village. He waited a half hour before he followed his son. When he reached the little hall over the postoffice he found it filled. He went up the stairs part way and stopped and listened. He could hear Harmon's clear voice and then a quick burst of applause.

He waited a moment longer and then went down the stairs heavily and slowly walked home.

It was like the man to say nothing to his son concerning his village connections. But there were times when he sorely wished his boy would show a little more confidence.

And then one day in the late fall he had a surprising visitor.

Harmon had gone to the grist mill six miles away. The trip would take the entire morning. The old man was in the driveway when an automobile stopped in the highway and an elderly man alighted. He was an elderly man of distinguished appearance, gray bearded and spectacled.

"Is this the home of Mr. Gregg?" he asked.

"I am John Gregg."

"The father of Harmon Gregg?"

"Yes."

"I congratulate you, Mr. Gregg. I am Dr. Endicott, president of the college your son attended. Is he at home?"

"No. He will not return until late in th' afternoon."

"I am sorry," said the visitor. "I hoped to meet him. We think very favorably of your son at our school, Mr. Gregg."

"I am glad to know it," said Harmon's father.

"No doubt you know, too, that his fellow classmates voted him the most popular man in his class?"

"No," replied Harmon's father, "I didn't know that."

The keen gray eyes of the college head studied the farmer a moment.

"I'd like to have a little talk with you, Mr. Gregg," he said.

"Come up on the porch," replied Harmon's father.

He led the way and offered his visitor a chair.

"I want to say to you frankly, Dr. Endicott," he suddenly remarked, "that I don't believe in a college education."

"So much the more to your credit," said the college president lightly, "for letting the boy enjoy its advantages."

"I had promised his mother," said Harmon's father, on the defensive.

The visitor gravely bowed.

"Have you found that his education has harmed your son?"

"No," replied Harmon's father. "I'll admit that it hasn't changed him any. The boy came home and went right back to farming as if nothing had happened. He's a good boy and a useful boy."

"We can agree on that, Mr. Gregg," said the visitor with a quick smile. "But I must talk fast. My friends are waiting for me. They made a little detour in order to give me a chance to meet Harmon's father. I will ask you to convey two messages to him. Tell him, if you please, that I saw the President one day last week and he sent your son his regards."

"What! President!"

"The President of the United States."

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. CHARLES D. TREXLER.

Theme: The Christian Stadium.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Charles D. Trexler, pastor of the English Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd, Bay Ridge, preached Sunday morning on "The Christian Stadium." The text was I, Corinthians, 9:24: "So run that ye may obtain." Mr. Trexler said:

The life of a Christian is portrayed by many magnificent metaphors. He is represented as a mariner crossing the sea of life, subject to storms and tempests that frequently cause the shipwreck of faith and the collapse of a good conscience. Again, he is a warrior, putting on the armor of God, fighting not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. The epistle appointed for this day characterizes his life under the figures of a runner and a combatant. "I therefore so run," says Saint Paul, "as not uncertainly; so fight I, as not beating the air; but I buffet my body and bring it into bondage; lest by any means after that I have preached to others, I myself should be rejected."

The former of these figures is especially helpful to the Christian today, even as it was suggestive to the Corinthians in the days of the apostle. To them it was replete with meaning. Every two years the Isthmian festival was held within full view of the city. Each citizen of Corinth attended the games connected with the festival. They had seen the stadium with its seats crowded with eager and excited spectators. They knew the rigid requirements made of the runners before they were allowed to enter the race. They had witnessed the runners straining every muscle, and running with patience the race, each one striving to be the first to reach the goal. They had cheered the victor as the crown of pine leaves, the reward of his efforts, was placed upon his head. All these points Saint Paul seizes that he may enforce the lessons of the Christian life and encourage men to put forth as great an effort to win an incorruptible crown. The runner has endured a season of severe training; he has strained every muscle to achieve success, and what has he received? A twist of pine leaves that will wither and fade in a few days. So run that ye may obtain a crown of righteousness which fadeth not away.

But before a man was allowed to compete he had to meet the requirements of the race. At the opening of the Isthmian festival each athlete who desired to enter as a candidate for the crown was called into the arena. The crier, having commanded silence, laid his hand upon the head of each in succession and demanded of all the assembly, "Is there any one here who can accuse this man of being a slave or guilty of any moral wrongs of life?" If any stain was found, he was excluded, but if his character was clear, he was led to the altar of Jupiter, there to make a solemn oath that he would conform to all the regulations of the race.

A similar demand is made of him who wishes to enter the Christian stadium. Through the fall of Adam the whole human race has come under bondage. Man in his natural state is a slave of sin. He cannot compete for the crown; he is not a free man. Here is the graciousness of the gospel. Jesus Christ has instituted a sacrament, the sacrament of holy baptism, through which we are made heirs with Him and sons of God. Who dare question the privilege of any man to enter the race when he has received this sacrament, for he is now, not a servant, but the son of God and an heir of eternal life.

After the eligibility of the candidate has been proven he must make his vows to observe the rules of the race. These vows are made by the Christian through his sponsors in holy baptism. They are renewed at his confirmation. But preceding the confirmation there is a season of spiritual training. The Scriptures are studied, spiritual faculties are developed, and knowing the demands of the races and the resources there are to meet them, the Christian is prepared to make the last requirement —stripping for the race. This part of the preparation is graphically described by the apostle when he says. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us and run with patience the race that is set before us." An athlete could not consider the possibility of success who should enter the race wrapped in his tunic. Nor can the Christian, hindered by weights and sin, successfully compete for the crown. There are many weights that hinder, obstacles that in themselves are not wrong, but which impede the progress of the runner. Perhaps you strive to achieve success as a scholar or an orator; perhaps you wish to see your name written among the famous: it may be that you desire to become a great financier or a statesman, or a leader in some other walk of life.

In none of these ambitions would I discourage you for a moment. To acquire greatness, to amass riches, to achieve fame—none of these is sinful, but each may be a weight that will hinder you in the heavenly race. Never become so imbued with the spirit of the world that you forget to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness. The order becomes reversed; ambition first, then the kingdom of God. Under these conditions ambition becomes a weight and a sin.

One of the greatest difficulties of the present century is the fact that we place entirely too much emphasis upon the sordid successes of this life. If there is anything that will bring our country to ruin and destruction more rapidly than another, it is that a majority of men are selfishly striving to further their own purposes as far as worldly gain is concerned, and after all, having been successful in the various fields of activity, where do they stand? They have merely taken upon themselves a greater weight, burdened themselves more grievously and have not reached the goal. The words spoken twenty centuries ago have not become antiquated, they will stand: "For what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Wherefore lay aside every weight—and sin. For a man to strip himself of sin is not a great task. The penalty of sin has been paid and he needs only to repent of past offenses and look to a Saviour who is ready to forgive, and he will be pardoned of all his iniquities.

Thus having met all the requirements, the Christian is prepared for the race, in which the exertion was so violent and yet so short as the Greek race. This is a fitting emblem of the Christian life; it begins with the Cross and ends with the Crown. It may cover a period of many years, but viewed in the light of eternity the course is very short.

In the Greek race only one of the competitors could win the prize; in the Christian race all may receive the crown of life. This makes the exhortation of the text still more emphatic, "So run that ye may obtain."

A great deal depends upon the beginning. Notice the runners at the games. The signal to start has been given—they are off with a dash. If there is one who has failed to make a good start his chances to win are few. So with the Christian. Not all, but a great deal depends upon a good beginning—a beginning with determination and decision. Keep the object of the race before you and allow nothing to hinder you in the course.

We need more men to-day who, like the Reformer of the Church, stand firm upon their convictions. Had he not decided with so much determination that the church needed cleansing, had he not stood so firmly at Worms before the papal prelates and declared, "Here I stand. I cannot do otherwise, God help me," his mission might have failed and his effort spent in vain. Set about any task languidly, half heartedly and failure is inevitable. When General Grant determined that the course he was about to pursue was the proper one, and said, "I shall fight it out along these lines if it takes all summer," his battles were half won. So is the life of a Christian. Confess Christ, not half heartedly, not weakly, but with determination that come what will you will always be a faithful follower. This is essential; make a good start, and having started, concentrate all effort. "This one thing I do," says Saint Paul. "I press toward the mark." Concentration, like decision, is essential to success. The difference between the amateur and the artist is that the one pursues his art only occasionally and subordinately, the other continuously and primarily. There are too many amateurs among Christians, too many who are religious only spasmodically. Make your Christian life your highest aim. It does not demand that you remove yourself to a monastery or a cloister or wander alone in the wilderness. It does not need to interfere with the legitimate aims of life, but in them all we may be striving for the one end—to mold our lives that we may please Him. Concentrate your effort: it is very essential that you should run with all your speed. How ridiculous a sluggard would have appeared lounging about the ancient Stadium, professing to be a runner, but never progressing beyond the starting point. Why shall he enter the race if he does not determine to run and run hard?

The secret lies in filling our lives with good acts that we have no room for evil. "Walk in the spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh." Ours is a positive life, a life of creating new desires rather than the crushing of old ones. It must be a life of progress.

It is also essential that one keep to the course. To leave it may demand a return to the starting point. The prodigal son had traveled far from home, but he had left the course and had to plod wearily back to his father's home step by step. It is not difficult to know the course. The first Victor has gone before us and we need only follow Him. The Word enlightens the way for us. The chief requirement is that we obey it.

Again, having begun the race, it is essential that you persevere to the end. The competitors in the Olympian games had only short distances to run, consequently they put all their effort in one short spurt. Our life is not so as viewed from the finite standpoint. We cannot put all our effort into a few moments and then, weary and enfeebled, be forced to relinquish the race. Let us run with patience the race and not start at such a pace that we will be exhausted before we have finished the course. There are some Christians who, in their first enthusiasm, spend all their effort and then become disheartened. Realize that the race of a Christian requires one continuous effort, and strive accordingly. Persevere to the end. Then what is the result of all this effort?

The reward—It has its recompense upon earth. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is and of the life to come." The man who lives the life of the Christian athlete profits physically, for it inculcates temperance, self-respect, industry and cleanliness. It helps him mentally. All other things being equal, the man who follows the rules of the Christian will be capable of the highest mental results. His mind has not become clouded with sin. But above all this, it is profitable now in a spiritual sphere. It gives to him a quietness of conscience, a sense of security under the fatherly protection of God, the assurance of pardon for sins and the joy and helpfulness of prayer. This is but the earnest of a greater and grander prize.

In the Stadium the prize, like all earthly honors, was perishable. But the faithful Christian wins an incorruptible crown. A proud moment it was when the successful racer had the chaplet placed upon his brow amid the applause and admiration of the multitude. A grander moment for the Christian conqueror when, amid the shouts of rejoicing myriads, the pierced hands of the Saviour place upon his head the crown of glory, and he hears the words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy reward."

No man can believe in the Fatherhood of God and doubt immortality.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 10.

Subject: The Mission of the Twelve, Matt. 9:35; 10:15, 40, 42—Commit Verses 9:37, 38.

TIME.—Spring, A. D. 29.

PLACE.—Galilee.

EXPOSITION.—I. Jesus Sending Forth Those Who Have Learned of Him to Minister to the Spiritual and Physical Needs of the Masses, 10:1-8. Jesus made choice of these twelve men after a night spent in prayer (Lu. 6:12, 13). There was great diversity among them in temperament, previous history and native ability. They are an impressive illustration of the different types of men Jesus can use for His work. Matthew is the only evangelist who in his list of apostles records the fact that he belonged to a despised class, the publicans. The other three cover this fact up. Matthew humbly writes the fact, and thus magnifies the grace of God in calling him. In each of the lists Judas Iscariot is mentioned last, and his disgrace as "the traitor" is noted in each. The apostles are grouped in twos in the lists. The method followed in the grouping is worthy of study. The most difficult question that arises in regard to the choosing and sending of the twelve, is why Jesus chose and sent out Judas Iscariot. It seems hardly sufficient to answer that it had been predicted in the O. T. that one of His immediate circle would betray Him (Ps. 41:9; 55:12-14), and that, therefore, Jesus chose Judas, whom He knew to be a devil (John 6:70, 71), in order to fulfill this prophecy. The simplest and most natural explanation seems to be, that Judas had qualities that would have admirably fitted him for a place in the apostolic company and the leadership of the early church, if they had been sanctified. Grace gave him the great opportunity, but he hardened his heart and brought upon himself the greater condemnation and infamy. The twelve were prepared for the work by the Lord's imparting to them power to do it (cf. Acts 14: 5, 8). The commission was at this time to Israel alone. The middle wall of partition was not yet broken down (Eph. 2:13-17). After the cross the commission widens (Acts 1:8). The apostles had a five-fold commission—preach, heal the sick, cleanse lepers, raise the dead, cast out demons. This is substantially the business of the missionary of Christ at home and abroad to-day. Our mission is to soul and body, but Christ puts the spiritual need first. But the church has a manifest mission to the sick, etc., but it is moral "lepers" that it is our first duty to cleanse, and those "dead in trespasses and sins" that it is our most important mission to raise. It is to be noted that this work of healing was to be "free." Any "divine healer" or "Christian Scientist" who charges a fee for his services, thereby shows the cloven foot. And how about the preacher who will declare the glorious gospel only on condition of being paid so much? Jesus must have been divine if He could bestow such powers upon others (v. 1). It is evident that demoniacal possession is something more than a mere form of disease; for Jesus carefully distinguishes between casting out demons and "all manner of diseases" and "all manner of sickness." Every kind of disease and sickness was to yield to the power of the Apostles. These powers were not confined to the twelve Apostles (Luke 10:9-19; Mark 16:17, 18; 1 Cor. 12:9; Jas. 5:15). We do not hear much of most of these men after Christ's death, but that does not at all prove that their work was insignificant. Most of these men were called from the lowliest positions in society. The substance of their teaching was to be "the kingdom of heaven is at hand." John and Jesus had begun their ministry with the same message (ch. 3:2; 4:17). And Jesus gave the same message to the seventy (Luke 10:9).

II. How the Twelve Were to Conduct Their Ministry, 9-15. The twelve were to make no provision for the necessities of their journey. They were laboring for God, and the laborer is worthy of his food, and the One for Whom they were laboring would see that they got it. They were to go light weighted; many an ambassador for Christ to-day is impaired in efficiency by the amount of baggage he carries (2 Tim. 2:4). The exact letter of these instructions is not binding upon ambassadors of Christ at all times (cf. Luke 22:35, 36), but the spirit is. Though they carried so little with them God never suffered them to lack nor go hungry (Luke 22:35). The obedient, faithful servant of Christ will always be provided for. They were to seek out diligently worthy persons (not rich persons) with whom to stop, and there they were to abide. They must not squander time in going from house to house to eat. The fare might be plain, but they must not look for fine fare. They need not feel like beggars, for they were worthy of their hire (cf. Luke 10:7). Their first thought on entering the home should be for the good of the home, and not for the comfort of self (v. 12; cf. Luke 10:5, 6). Their benediction would be full of power; if the house was worthy, their peace would come upon it. If the house was not worthy the benediction would not be lost, for it would come back again and bless them. True prayers are never lost. It was their own peace that the twelve were to impart (v. 13). When they were not received in any city they were to go out into the streets in the most public, expressive and impressive way show their utter separation from it and its impending doom. They were not even to let its dust adhere to their feet. Thus were they to [illegible] (Luke 9:5) [illegible] and [illegible] (Luke 10:10-12). [illegible] (Luke 10:13-15). [illegible] (Luke 10:16).

THOUGHTS FOR THE QUIET HOUR

BENEDICITE.

BY M. J. WEATHERBEE-RICE.

Where'er thou art that once was mine,
Close as the tendril to the vine,
God's peace be with thee, sweetheart true
As ever soul of human knew.

God's love so measureless be thine,
Like armor bright may it enshrine,
So every chilling wind of doubt
By loving trust be put to rout.

Whate'er I do, where'er I stray,
The thought is with me day by day:
What can I wish thee, sweetheart, still,
The dear Lord does not more than fill.

God and the angels for thy part,
Scarce can thou need my weakling heart,
That loves too feebly for a prayer
For one embosomed by such care.

And so, dear love, 'twixt thee and me,
While rolls the everlasting sea
Of God's abiding love, I wait,
Content to meet or soon or late.

Self-Control.

He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city.—Proverbs, 16:32.

According to the Christian conception of human nature every man is a king, deriving his prerogatives directly from the Almighty Himself. Like a king, he is expected to rule his limited domain in harmony with the laws which God has laid for the universe, as each separate municipality frames its ordinances in accordance with the supreme law of the land.

Because we are kings the quality proper to sovereignty should characterize us, namely, self-control, home rule. We should have as absolute control over our ambitions, aims, passions and desires as the engine driver over his locomotive, the general over an army, a captain over a battle ship. Marvelous as a battle ship is in its construction, intricate as it is in all its parts and adapted to its various duties, it is not so wonderful as the human organism. The body is a machine composed of myriad minute parts, each performing certain definite functions, possessing as no other organism does the power of repair.

Moreover, it is a much more valuable mechanism commercially than is generally appreciated. If a man's income is $2000 annually this is five per cent. on $40,000. If that sum were put into your hands would you not think that you ought to exercise considerable care in its investment and use? But when we consider that this physical organism is the seat of all our hopes and joys and fears, more than that, that it is the temple of the indwelling soul, freighted thereby with eternal interests of weal or woe, how precious does its well being become, how important its guidance and control!

How shall we gain control of ourselves? Something is gained when we realize the extreme importance of self-control and how fraught with danger the lack of it is here and hereafter. Something can be done by direct resolve, by the direct exercise of the will. Take command of yourself. Be a king in your own realm, a limited one perhaps, but yours to rule. The human will is the grandest power in the universe outside of God Himself. There is little that can stand before a determined soul's resolve "I will." Such a decision has been the turning point of many a character.

True self-control is, however, called by St. Paul a "fruit of the Spirit," for so "temperance" is to be translated. True self-control comes by submitting ourselves to God, putting ourselves in the grasp of and in allegiance with a Power that is stronger than we are. Such was the method of the Master. Because He lived in closest communion with the Father His life was the embodiment of all spiritual and heavenly grace. We can all follow His method. As Lowell says, "We are all tall enough to reach God's hand, and angels are no taller." By living in communion with God as Jesus did we shall be able, like Him, to still the voice of anger, check the hot spirit of revenge, cool the fevered torrent of ambition, curb the threatening ascendancy of passion, as a master curbs his dog—attain, in short, true self-control.—Rev. DeWitt L. Pelton, Ph. D., in New York Herald.

"Many Will Say Unto Me, Lord, Lord!"

Remember, many go far on and reform many things, and can find tears as Esau did; and suffer hunger for truth as Judas did; and wish and desire the end of the righteous as Balaam did; and profess fair and fight for the Lord as Saul did; and desire the saints of God to pray for them as Pharaoh and Simon Magnus did; and prophesy and speak of Christ as Caiaphas did; and walk softly and mourn for fear of judgments as Ahab did; and put away gross sins and idolatry as Jehu did; and hear the word of God gladly as Herod did; and yet all these are but like gold in clink and color, and are watered brass and base metal.—Rutherford.

Why?

Why does God, who loves us and takes account of needs, suffer them to exist? It is assuredly that we may learn to feel our dependence on Him and may experience His most gracious and most perfect succor. It is that we, who are apt to think mostly of our material needs should develop and become sensible of still greater needs—spiritual needs—and should look to God to supply those also abundantly.—Reformed Church Record.

The Sovereignty of Will.

Christ is sovereign of the will. To will to do a thing is almost to do it. But we must have a renovated will. God helps a man who helps himself. You can [illegible] and [illegible] by and [illegible] from [illegible]

THE GREAT DESTROYER

SOME STARTLING FACTS ABOUT THE VICE OF INTEMPERANCE.

The Song of the Wine Cup.

Oh yes, I am fair, and my sparkling wave
Is quaffed by the young and the gifted and brave,
And I gladden the hearts of the gloomy and grave.
With my gushing and joyous tide;
Men seek me in youth in the heyday of life,
And seek me in manhood to arm for its strife,
For each bubble with daring and strength is rife.
But list what I give beside!

My rosy brim to your lips you'll bear
And quaff with a glee that will mock at care
And you'll dream for a while there is naught so fair
As the blushing and merry bowl;
But the dancing tide that your veins shall fill
Shall leap with a hotter and wilder thrill,
And deeper, and deeper, and deeper still,
Shall burn in your very soul.

And your brain I will madden, and spectres fill
Your fancy shall borrow from depths of Hell,
And you'll tremble and groan at their fiendish yell
As it rings in your throbbing ears;
And red-hot serpents their folds shall wreathe
Through your tortured brain that shall hiss and seethe,
And dread shall convulse till you scarce can breathe
For the weight of your choking fears—

And soon I will laugh at my triumph won
When your howling soul from its foul clay wrung
By my ruthless grasp to the depths is flung
Of a yawning and waiting Hell.
And when it shall part with a demon shriek
That'll curdle each heart's blood and blanche each cheek,
When a voice to me from the Pit shall speak,
"Aha, thou hast served me well."

A Tradesman on Proverty's Causes.

I have noticed discussions of the question of the advisability of installing a free lunch system in the public schools, and would like as an ordinary citizen to tender my opinion as to the causes and the remedy for this, in my opinion, little needed charity.

I have for many years been a tradesman, mostly in the poorer sections of Manhattan and Brooklyn; have been thrown into close contact with the poorer classes there, and am nearly able to give an accurate account of a poor man's income and expenditures.

I am now located in the poorest section of Brooklyn, where I have large holdings of real estate, and perhaps 150 tenants of various classes —such as shopkeepers and private dwellers.

To begin with, there would be no want, nor need for free lunch depots, were poor parents willing to invest a large percentage of their earnings in staple goods and meats. As it is now the lion's share of their earnings goes toward maintaining saloons and liquor stores. It is whisky before breakfast, beer and crackers for breakfast, and beer again for early lunch; with beer twenty cents, and bologna five cents, for midday lunch; beer twenty cents and stew meat five cents for supper; and a continual beer and cracker feast for the entire family till bed hours. A fair share of the poor children are fed on free lunch in easy reach on counters of saloons, where parents send them for their beverage. Of course, there are exceptions; but among the most needy ones these foregoing facts may easily be verified. Yes, indeed, not rarely a family with four or more children, where the man's wages vary from $10 to $15 per week, subsists upon bread, jelly, bologna and crackers. The balance of the wages, excepting perhaps $1.50 per week for rent, goes to saloons. Clothing is a third consideration.

To emphasize this, I will here give an illustration:

I am the owner of ten store properties, comprising nearly all the business outlet on one block: Included in these I have four corners, two of which are occupied as liquor and beer saloons. Of the other properties, six stores are butcher, barber, dry goods, grocer, baker, tin and stove store, and two stores are idle. The two saloons, one on each corner, bring me a larger annual revenue than the remaining eight properties, including the two other corners. Furthermore, the saloonkeepers are prospering, whereas my other store keeping tenants in the various lines, arranged without one competing with another, are barely making their living. The meat market in particular is now and again closed for lack of business.

Neither high license nor any other scheme can be put in force to obliterate the making and sale of intoxicants; but people can manage and should be compelled to properly feed and clothe their children. My illustration would, I feel satisfied, be corroborated by general statistics, for were we to canvass the so-called poorer districts we would find two prosperous saloonkeepers to each vender of daily necessities.

I would suggest the planning of a few compulsory establishments, where delinquents and "don't cares" could be placed, and contribute there work enough to satisfy their children's proper wants. Perhaps by such a method man would be brought to a better habit of disposing of his hard-acquired earnings. It would put an end to free lunch systems, and alleviate many charity abuses. What is more, our future generations would not be built upon the foundation of pauperism, and it would improve society morally.—G. Martin Jargerron, Brooklyn, in The American.

EDITORIAL.

The Clanton Press makes its first appearance this morning conscious of the fact that it is going to have opposition among its own people and that it must make a fight to win, yet we believe that we have the enthusiastic support of a large majority of the democrats of Chilton county.

In the beginning we desire to say that we have entered the journalistic field with no desire to crowd others out or to antagonize any one; our first and foremost object is to furnish the people of Chilton county with a newsy newspaper; one of which we and they alike shall be proud. We are going to strive at all times to give to our patrons all the news that is fit to print.

We want the friendship and support of every man, woman and child in the county and are going to exert our very best efforts to deserve it.

While we propose to be strictly democratic in principles, supporting at all times the nominees of the democratic party, we shall strive to conduct the Press with perfect fairness to all persons. Our fight shall be made in the open; all will be able to tell at a glance just where we stand and whose cause we espouse. Because a man happens to differ with us in political faith shall not be made a cause for not esteeming him as a friend or in assisting him in any worthy undertaking, either public or private, that will tend to the betterment of this county and its people.

We firmly believe in democraic principles of government and shall be found striving to enforce these principles at all times and upon all occasoins. We believe that this county would achieve greater success under democratic administration and we are firm in the opinion that democratic officers can be elected if those who have the party welfare at heart will but get together and bend their energies for party success.

Whatever is worth doing is worth doing well and to the end that our political party may achieve that degree of success to which she is entitled, and which is of right her own in this county, democrats should be willing and we believe they are willing to lay aside personal preferences and personal desire to be reckoned as leaders and place themselves in the hands of those who have the management of party affairs.

The Press does not aspire to be a leader; it is content to work in the ranks of the lowly and to execute such orders as those in authority see it to issue. Personal desires and choices shall be subverted to party success.

But if democracy is to become victorious in Chilton county there must be a cessation of bickerings and contentions among democrats. We must cease to call each other "names" and get in behind those who have announced themselves as party candidates. Whether they be our personal preferencis or not they are our party candidates and as loyal party men we must support them. We are not of the "yellow dog" variety who thinks that any democrat is entitled to our votes but we do believe that any democrat, who, in a fair democratic primary or convention receives the nomination or endorsement of the democratic party, is worthy of and entitled to our enthusiastic support.

If we have differences of opinion these differences should be worked out in the primary; when the party has spoken and the standard bearers are selected we should one and all, render unto these standard bearers our hearty support. It shall be so with the Press. We reserve the right to select our candidates in the primary but we do not reserve to ourselves the right to reject any candidate after he has been fairly chosen in a democratic primary.

But there are some other things for which the Press shall stand, and foremost among them is the betterment of the public roads of Chilton county.

We have heard no unusual complaint of the condition of the roads, but we feel confident that the best investment a county, as an organized unit, or the people of a county as a whole, can make is an investment of money, time and brain in the upbuilding of its thoroughfares.

We know from experience and from observation that the wear and tear on the live stock and the vehicles of the people who are compelled to travel over rough and uncertain roads is greatly more than is the expense incurred in taxes to build first class roads, thereby prolonging the life and usefulness of live stock and vehicles.

We have made the matter a subject of study and research and our observation has been that a few thousand dollars spent on each of the public roads of the county saves many times the amount spent and saves it in several different ways.

If we can so impress it upon the minds of the people and encourage them in the building of better roads for the use of all the people we shall feel that our mission has been accomplished.

There are yet other things for which the press stands but we shall be content to go before the people of Chilton county on these two issues and let the others work themselves out gradually.

If you are a democrat we want your support and encouragement; we have come to stay; our energies and time and talent are to be put into the Press to make it a success. If we succeed, and of that we have no sort of doubt, our success will be your success. We need you and you need us. We do not wish the leadership, but we do wish the friendship of the leaders; we desire to be a worker and we want the enthusiastic support of every worker.

If you are a good roads man we want to strike hands with you and work with you for the betterment of the public highays.

The Press is not going to be so extremely partizan or so pronounced in its policies as to make it an unwelcomed visitor in other households.

In fairness to ourselves and to them we announce where we stand but we wish it distinctly understood that while our policies may not meet with their approval we shall at all times strive to so labor for the material advancement of Chilton county and her people that our paper shall be their friend and a welcome friend in every household and with every citizen.

There are two candidates in the field seeking the democratic nomination for the exalted office of governor of Alabama—Col. Mallory and Col. O'Neal. The Press shall support the cause of the former. We do so for several good reasons, not the least of which is that we have known Col. Mallory from childhood's days, and have never in all these years heard one word against him, while we have heard multiplied hundreds of commendatory and laudatory expressions. He is a man of high moral character, a gentleman of rare ability and strong personality. He is a man on whom you can depend at all times. When he issues a promise he does not require a guarantee to have that promise fulfilled; his word is the only guarantee necessary. He is capable; he is learned in the law and a profound thinker. His intimacy with public policies and public necessities fits him eminently for becoming the chief magistrate of the state. He is conservative, and just at this time when the party is torn by conflicting opinions, he is the logical candidate upon whom all the people can and ought to unite in order that strife and contention may come to an end. While he stood with the amendment forces in the recent engagement and does not seek in anyway to cover his stand or to recede from the position he then took nevertheless his attitude toward that question was one which enables those of both sides to center upon him as the leader who shall bring us out of that contention a re-united party and a re-united people.

His opponents do not question his great ability nor do they undertake to reflect upon his strict party loyalty or his moral integrity. They know that they cannot do this and maintain their argument. He has never been charged with leaving the party candidates at any time or under any circumstances. He has ever been found in the forefront fighting democracy's battles.

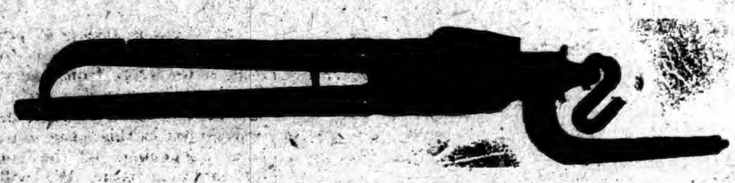
His moral integrity, his eminent fitness and party loyalty all commend us and brand him as a man in every way worthy of the high honor which he seeks. If we did not know him personally, and love him because of his manhood, we wold be inclined to support him because of his record; but, knowing him as we do, having been associated with him more or less intimately for a quarter of a century, and having the welfare and the success of the democratic party, both now and hereafter, deeply at heart we unqualifiedly announce for Mallory and bespeak for him the ballots of Chilton county democrats.

The solicitorship it seems, will fall to some one of another county, but it will require democratic votes in Chilton to assist in the nomination. Notwithstand the candidates live in another county we are inclined to believe that they are going to come out before the people of Chilton and say that they want the office. Perhaps in the next issue of the Press their announcements will be found.

Press readers will find the announcement of Judge W. W. Pearson as a candidate for circuit judge in another column. This elegant gentleman and learned judge has served the people of this circuit by appointment and he needs no recommendation at our hands. The people of Chilton know him, perhaps as well as we do, and knowing him they esteem him for his ability and his impartiality. The people of the circuit will make no mistake in returning him to the judicial office which he seeks. A learned judge and a high toned gentleman, he will adorn the judiciary of the state and reflect credit upon the circuit which he represents.

We call attention to the page advertisement of the Clanton Press on the pag advertisement of the Clanton Press on the last page of this issue. Read it carefully, then start into the race with the determination to win. Someone is going to secure a fine piano free of all cost; why should it not be you? If you do not understand the operation of the plan ask us about it and we will be glad to render you any assistance possible. Do not reserve your tickets and wait to "cast them in a bunch"—that might be well at the end of the contest, but you wan to get the name of your favorite prominently before the people in the beginning, so that you may enlist the aid of others in helping you to land your nominees. The contest is open to all citizens of Chilton county. Clanton had best keep its eyes open for there are certain ones in other sections of the county who are going to make things particularly lively. Read the list of merchants handling the contest tickets and be sure to call upon them for the number of votes to which you are entitled when you do any cash trading with them.

The Press takes pleasure in presenting to the people of Chilton county Judge E. B. Deason as a candidate for the offiec of judge of probate.



Judge Deason has heretofore filled this office with eminent satisfaction to the entire people of the county. He is a Chilton county man by birth and preference. His knowledge of county affairs, and especially his knowledge of the affairs of the office which he seeks, fit him peculiarly for the judgship. In the late election he was a candidate for the office on the democratic ticket and though defeated by the present encumbent the vote between them was so close that neither felt safe till the last ballot was counted—Judge Reynolds' majority in the county over Judge Deason being onlyl eighty votes. Judge Deason possesses peculiar qualifications for the place and it is now up to the democrats to rally around his standard and place him in office. Action strong and energetic action on the part of democratic cohorts will accomplish the desired end and we confidently believe that with Judge Deason as the standard bearer of the democracy our people will rally around the leader and give him the office.

The Senatorial race in this district promises to be a lively one. Word comes to us that the opposition proposes to put up a man in the hope of defeating democracy's choice in the district and landing a republican in the upper house of the legislature. It occurs to the Press that these misguided people are reckoning without their hosts. Thos. A. Curry, the democratic candidate for the senate from this district will represent the district in the next upper chamber; of this there is no doubt. Mr. Curry is a man who has the courage of his convictions and will make the district a representative of which it can be proud. He is the choice of the democracy of the district and as such will be overwhelmingly elected. The fact that he has no opposition is a distinct compliment to him. However this fact may lead some democrats to feel that their votes are not necessary in the primary election. This is an erroneous view to take of the situation. While there is no doubt of his election it is highly necessary that he should receive every party vote in the district and the Press indulges the hope that the vote accorded this faithful servent of Democracy will be so large that the opposition will hesitate to offer any man for the slaughter.

The race for sheriff seems to be the only one into which any zinger has been injected so far. There are three candidates in the field whose announcements will be found in another column of this paper. All three are come forward and ask the democrats of this county to again place them in office; all are worthy of the honor which they seek at the hands of the people. During the encumbency of each the duties and responsibilities of the high office were discharged with courage and ability. Mr. Hayes was the sheriff of this county in the eighties, and was a terror to lawbreakers. He took great pride in the conduct of the office and by his gentlemanly bearing and unswerving devotion to duty earned the commendation of all. Mr. Morgan was an appointee to office to fill out the duties unexpired term of another official and so well did he discharge the duties devolving upon him as the chief executive officer of the county that his friends have decided to again enter him in the contest to use every laudable means for elevating him to office the duties of which he has so acceptably filled. Mr. John S. Catts is the third candidate for the office. He is now serving the people of the county to their entire satisfaction. Mr. Catts has made a most magnificent officer and the people will make no mistake in again placing in his hands the affairs of the sheriff's office. He is a terror to evil doers and in the discharge of his duties shows no favoritism.

Taking it all in all democracy presents to the people of the county three most efficient men from whom to select an executive officer of the county; in making the selection no mistake will be made should either one of the three be chosen.

We notice that Mr. Stallings in his speech at Dadeville the other day in defending Mr. O'Neal against the charge brought against him that he voted for Palmer and Buckner, denies the charge and states that Mr. O'Neal says he did not vote for monkrel ticket. We also notice that the Advertiser and certain other papers have been particularly quiet on this subject since the evidence was brought forth that the vote of Mr. O'Neal was to cast. But whether he did or not the suspicion is rather tsrong that he did; in fact his home people say that the evidence is indisputable that Palmer and Buckner received the O'Neal vote and where there is doubt or suspicion it is always best to take the other man. As to how Mallory votes and for whom there has never been any doubt or speculation. No one has ever suspected him of casting any but a DEMOCRATIC vote. Perhaps O'Neal never thought back in those days that he would ever run for Governor and that his vote on that occasion would be questioned. But be that as it may, a DEMOCRAT has no business casting his vote for any other than Democratic candidates whether he ever expects to run for office or not, particularly if he appres to be a leader in the party councils.

To avoid all doubt on the matter it is wise to vote for a man who has always stood four square by the party rather than to be supporting the cause of a Palmer and Bookwrite. That may not be to our liking sometimes, but it is nevertheless wholesome DEMOCRATIC doctrine.

It is scarcely necessary for the Press to make mention of the candidacy of Mr. Hugh M. Simpson for clerk of the Circuit Court of Chilton county. Mr. Simpson has no opposition and it goes without saying that he will discharge the duties of the office with credit to himself and to the democracy of the county. He is now the chairman of the county executive committee which is an assurance of his party loyalty. With him as your circuit clerk and Judge Pearson as the presiding judge the records of the court will be kept strictly according to law and to the entire satisfaction of the people of the county.

That the amendment fight has been buried was evidenced on last Monday in the primary election in Jefferson County, Walter McAdry, an amendment man, was overwhelmingly nominated for Sheriff of the county against one of the strongest anti-amendment men in the state; a man who was elected mayor of Birmingham and who it was thought by many had a "dead easy thing" of it in his race. Thus it seems that Democrats are awaking to the fact that the recent fight has had its day and that it is now a part of ancient history.

We are not to judge a man's democracy by the way he thought or voted on the amendment issue. It was not a party question and all attempts to drag it into party politics is merely an admission of weakness on the part of those who do so. It is not, and cannot be, a test by which party loyalty is measured. The sooner Democrats cease holding the amendment question up as a standard by which the quality of a man's democracy is to be measured the better it will be for the party and the sooner will Democracy's triumphs be achieved.

Speaking of the Jefferson County election the Age-Herald says:

Amendment Fight Figured.

It is quite notable that the amendment fight figured very little in this primary. The amendment was not mentioned on the streets or around the polling places yesterday. Ward and Reid were both anti-amendists, and their vote, taken together, will total the vote of McAdory, who was an amendist, but McAdory's strength was drawn to a great extent from the anti-amendists, while Ward received a strong amendment vote.

Over in our sister county of Bibb they had a warm election among the Democrats. Mr. Oakley, brother of Jim Oakley, the present sheriff, by his opponents is accused of speaking disparagingly of the Democratic party and its nominees. Mr. Oakley's supporters and friends are Mallory men and will cast their votes for him in the coming primary. That's the way it should be done. They have gotten together in Jefferson and Bibb, now let's get together in Chilton and roll up a majority for the DEMOCRACY that will make our friends, the enemy, "set up and take notice."

The Press notes with pleasure that not a few counties of the state are making preparation to begin road work under modern systems. On all side our people are awaking to the fact that good roads are synonymous with progress and prosperity. Money spent in making the roads permanent is money put into the pockets of the farmers and toilers for it saves their livestock, their vehicles and their time. It enables them to draw greater loads with less power, helps them to get to and from market crops. Good roads are not luxuries, they are actual necessities.

Mr. G. D. Retherford makes his announcement in this issue of The Press as a candidate for County Commissioner from the First District and submits his claims to the action of his party at the primary next May. Mr. Retherford is a young man of energy and intellect. He is a stalwart Democrat and has never sought office at the hands of his party before. Her law has been his marching orders and her welfare has been his ardent desire. By persistency and labor he has accumulated quite a nice little property and is a man of strict integrity and business sagacity. The interests of the county would be well subseved in his hands.

It has been a long time since Palmer and Buckner and their associates attempted to disrupt the democratic party but there are not a few who remember those days, and remembering them they ecall vividly the denunciations made of men who claiming to be democrats deserted their standard and bearers in the hour of peril and went over to the Palme and Buckner camps. Certain candidates who now aspire for high political office will have to explain their movements on that particular day before Democrats will believe them worthy of nomination to political office at the hands of true and tried Democrats. This applies to applicants for governorships as well as to preciuct offices. Mr. Mallory in those days voted the Democratic ticket and worked for its success. Of course the opponent of the Democratic nomee will question this assertion.

PERSONAL POINTERS.

Clanton regrets exceedingly to give up as citizens Mr. L. E. Gullihorn and his interesting family. They have removed to Pelham where Mr. Gullihorn is engaged in the saw mill business. The departure of this valuable citizen and his family from our midst will be sincerely regretted.

Mrs. Anna Lou Tanner of Birmingham spent a few days last week with her grandmother, Mrs. A. E. Evans.

Mr. E. M. Pinckard went to Montgomery on last Thursday on a business trip.

Mrs. Monroe and Miss Isa Monroe, mother and sister of Prof. W. W. Monroe, who have been spending the winter months with the family of the latter, left on last Saturday for their home in West Virginia. Before returning home, however, they will visit friends in Columbus and Atlanta, Ga., and in Washington City. During their stay inClanton these two ladies endeared themselves to everyone with whom they came in contact and many were the expressions of regret at their departure.

Mr. R. H. Gaines, mayor of Jemison, was a pleasant visitor to Clanton on last Saturday.

Mrs. J. C. Sewell and little daughter returned to their home in Montgomery last Saturday from a pleasant visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Luckie.

Miss Nettie Williams, who is attending school in Montgomery, has been spending a few days at home, much to the delight of her many friends.

The pupils of the Clanton High school took advantage of April Fool's day and gave Prof. Monroe and his corps of teachers a holiday on the first. They had arranged a picnic and general frolic for that day and without a word to their instructor went off to some pleasant place and enjoyed the day, returning late in the afternoon.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Alred will be glad to know that their little son who was operated upon some days ago in Montgomery is doing well. The little fellow stood the operation like a veteran and will soon be ready to return home.

Dr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson and little daughter, Miss Sallie, were visitors to the Capital City on Saturday last.

Quite a jolly crowd of young folks spent last Saturday shopping and taking in the sights of Montgomery last Saturday. The party was chaperoned by Prof. and Mrs. Monroe who accompanied the mother and sister of the former that far. The party was composed of Misses Stanley, Sample, and Robinson of the High school. They returned on the afternoon train and report having had a most enjoyable visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Pyron of Verbena spent last Sunday in Clanton with the parents of the former, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Pyron.

Mr. H. M. Martin, an old resident of Clanton, but now residing at Robin Bullock county, was a visitor to Clanton one day last week. Mr. Martin came up to conclude the sale of a tract of land, the trade having been negotiated some time ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Blassingame of Mountain Creek were guests of Mrs. Fannie Hannon ,the mother of Mrs. Blassingame, on last Sunday.

By invitation of the Calera Masonic Lodge Messrs. W. H. Sartor, T. Pines, John W. Stanfield, M. C. Broadhead and J. P. Van Dever went up to Calera Wednesday night to witness the raising of two members to the master's degree.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McDaniel came up from Montgomery on last Sunday and spent the day pleasantly with the parents of the former, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. McDaniel.

Mr. P. D. Wilson went down to Montgomery Saturday last on a flying business trip.

Don't forget the public speaking at the court house on next Saturday morning; you are cordially invited.

Mr. P. D. Wilson as the administrator of the estate of W. M. Wilson deceased, received on last Monday a check from the Woodmen of the World covering the full amount of insurance carried by his brotehr in that association. Mr. Wilson died about thirty days ago. Stops Lameness

Much of the chronic lameness in horses is due to neglect.

See that your horse is not allowed to go lame. Keep Sloan's Liniment on hand and apply at the first sign of stiffness. It's wonderfully penetrating — goes right to the spot — relieves the soreness — limbers up the joints and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. G. T. Roberts of Resaca, Ga., R.F.D. No. 1, Box 43, writes:—"I have used your Liniment on a horse for sweeney and effected a thorough cure. I also removed a spavin on a mule. This spavin was as large as a guinea egg. In my estimation the best remedy for lameness and soreness is

THE TINTING OF FOODS.

Coloring Matter Applied to Meet Tastes in Shades of Viands.

The impressions which the public have in regard to the color of food are interesting, but their instinct in this matter may easily be deceived by modern tricks. For some not quite clear reason there are many people who look upon the brown egg as necessarily a new laid one, and hence a fair demand for brown eggs has arisen, which is easily met, not by the honest brown egg, but by the white egg which has been steeped in dye which renders it visually indistinguishable from the real article.

Again, when milk happens to be of a buff tinge it is commonly held to be richer than white milk. Of course, nothing can be easier than to satisfy this preference for a milk of a creamy shade. White looking butter is disliked as looking too much like dripping. The remedy is simple: it is artificially colored.

Vegetables must be bright green to make them look fresh, the consumers of them being quite willing to ignore the fact that copper does not make them fresh or wholesome. On the other hand, curiously enough, bread must be white, and not the slight brownish color natural to the flour from which it is made.

It is, of course, perfectly natural to take color as a criterion of the dietetic value or flavor of food, and the attractive or unattractive appearance of food may make all the difference as to whether that food is or is not assimilated properly. The deceit which is practised by artificially coloring food may thus serve a useful purpose so long as the coloring matter is harmless, but as a rule the proceeding is an immoral one.

It does not follow that because food is unattractive its value as nutriment is nil, while every form of sophistication is open to commercial abuse.

A correspondent last week submitted to us a brown shelled egg which on opening displayed a gorgeous red coloring scattered chiefly through the white. On analysis the coloring proved to be an aniline dye. The dye had deposited a nice brown on the shell, but an excess had permeated its parts and meeting with the slightly acid contents, was changed to a port wine color inside. Until the egg was opened, therefore, it appeared perfectly attractive, but an opening it the zest to eat it quickly disappeared.

There is practically no control over the coloring of foods in this country, and it is obvious that in some instances protection is desirable. If color is used to give a false appearance of quality there can be no doubt about that being fraud, but whether it is a mischievous fraud depends on particular circumstances.—The Lancet.

The Lack of Farm Labor.

Secretary Wilson's belief that the high prices of foodstuffs are due to the scarcity of farm labor has been strengthened and confirmed by his observations during his recent journey through the West. It is to be doubted, however, whether the troubles of the consumer are due entirely or even mainly to the conditions which Mr. Wilson assigns as the cause of these troubles, since the monopolies which have been effected in practically every important industry are certainly largely responsible for the high prices of the necessaries fo life. Nevertheless, the evil which Mr. Wilson points out is evidently a real one, and one which is becoming a more and more serious menace to the country's prosperity. We cannot exist without our farmers. We must have men to till the land or we will come to grief. At present the young men who grow up in the country will not remain there. They feel the lure of the cities, and in increasing numbers they turn their backs upon the fields and drift into those centres of population where they believe there is a better chance for a man to make his way. They find work, most of them, but most of them would have lived happier lives and would have died richer had they stuck to their ploughs.—Charleston News and Courier.

Though other powerful lights may be used, gas, with special high-pressure burners and incandescent mantles, has been found to give the steadiest and most penetrating beam. The operation of the high-pressure gas system costs about half a cent an hour, specially prepared slides are not needed, the colors and details of the reflected pictures are shown vividly on th screen and magnified as required and book pages of letterpress printing may be exhibited as well as all kinds of pictures.

London has still its vacant spaces or Alsatia, in spite of ground landlords and unearned increment. If you know your way about you can "squat" in London, as the woman did who has just explained her situation to the Lambeth guardians. When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 31 stamps.

For weak women, who suffer from women's ills, there is a standard medicine of proven merit—CARDUI, the woman's tonic. Cardui has been helping sick women for more than half a century, and has come to be recognized as the first aid for woman's troubles.

Mrs. Nellie Duncan, 1917 So. 11th St., St. Joseph, Mo., writes: "If it will help some other woman, I am glad to send you my testimony about CARDUI. The Lack of Farm Labor.

Secretary Wilson's belief that the high prices of foodstuffs are due to the scarcity of farm labor has been strengthened and confirmed by his observations during his recent journey through the West. It is to be doubted, however, whether the troubles of the consumer are due entirely or even mainly to the conditions which Mr. Wilson assigns as the cause of these troubles, since the monopolies which have been effected in practically every important industry are certainly largely responsible for the high prices of the necessaries fo life. Nevertheless, the evil which Mr. Wilson points out is evidently a real one, and one which is becoming a more and more serious menace to the country's prosperity. We cannot exist without our farmers. We must have men to till the land or we will come to grief. At present the young men who grow up in the country will not remain there. They feel the lure of the cities, and in increasing numbers they turn their backs upon the fields and drift into those centres of population where they believe there is a better chance for a man to make his way. They flee work, most of them, but most of them would have lived happier lives and would have died richer had they stuck to their ploughs.—Charleston News and Courier.

In a mountain near Montalban, Luzon, there is a large cavern, with many branching chambers, and a central dome 200 feet in height, perforating the mountain top, from which, in December, 1907, Hugh M. Smith saw issue a solid column of bats, which flew rapidly in a straight line for 15 mnutes, disappearing over a mountain range in the direction of Manila, without a single bat having left the column. American engineers stationed there told Mr. Smith that the flight of bats had occurred, at practically the same time each day, during two years. From other sources it was learned that the phenomenon had been observed for at least 30 years.

The Fifax reflectoroscope, an English apparatus, is claimed to be the best solution so far of the problem of reflecting post cards, photographs and other pictures or designs so that they may show as sharp and brilliant as the views projected by the ordinary transparent lantern slides. The new magic lantern resembles the ordinary one in general appearance, but the picture is placed at the back, where a 3000-candlepower beam of light is concentrated upon it by two reflectors; the image is retransmitted through the lens to the screen. Though other powerful lights may be used, gas, with special high-pressure burners and incandescent mantles, has been found to give the steadiest and most penetrating beam. The operation of the high-pressure gas system costs about half a cent an hour, specially prepared slides are not needed, the colors and details of the reflected pictures are shown vividly on th screen and magnified as required and book pages of letterpress printing may be exhibited as well as all kinds of pictures.

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. THE NEWSPAPER GRAVEYARD.

Beneath the stones they sweetly sleep,
The humble toilers of the press;
No more to sorrow or to weep,
No more to labor in distress.
Here lies a youth upon whose tomb
The tear of pity often drops;
We had to send him to his doom
Because he wrote of "bumper crops."
Here sleeps the golden years away,
The fairest of the human tribe;
We slew him at the break of day
Because he called himself "ye scribe."
Beneath that yew another sleeps,
Who did his work with smiling lips;
We had to put him out for keeps
When he referred to "flying trips."
And one, the noblest of them all,
Is resting on the wind-swept hill;
In writing up a game of ball,
He spoke of one who "hit the pill."
Hard by the wall, where roses bloom,
And breezes sway the climbing vine,
That youth is sleeping in his tomb,
Who used the phrase, "along these lines."
To-day the sexton wields his spade,
And digs a grave both deep and wide,
Where soon the stripling will be laid,
Who wrote about "the blushing bride."
—Walt Munson, in the Manitoba Free Press.

GERMANY'S HOTELS.

What One American Expert Has to Say About Them.

[DR. LYMAN ABBOTT, IN OUTLOOK.]

The German hotels are the best in the world—that is, the most to my taste. The statement is subject to some qualifications. I have not tried the hotels in Asia, Africa, Australia or South America. But I have tried them in all European countries except Spain and the Balkan States. They (the German ones) are smaller and quieter than the American hotels, give greater variety of food than the English hotels, more hygienic food than the French hotels and are more sanitary than the Italian hotels.

There are certain important respects in which the German hotel differs from the American hotel. Nowhere is there a price charged by the day. The traveler pays a fixed price for his room, depending on its size and location. Sometimes the breakfast is included. The price for a good room in the smaller hotels ranges from three to five marks—that is, from seventy-five cents to $1.25. The charge includes attendance and lights. The traveler brings his own soap with him. The price for breakfast ranges from a mark to a mark and a half—that is, from twenty-five to thirty-five cents. It consists of rolls and coffee, and the coffee is uniformly good. I do not recall a poor cup of coffee in all my German experience. It was either good, better or best. In England it is almost uniformly bad, worse or worst. Personally I like the German coffee better than the French. I suspect there is some chicory in the French. One may by special order add to his breakfast of rolls and coffee eggs in almost any form and, I suppose, also steak or chops. Save possibly in the distinctively American hotels in the great cities, an order of a breakfast food or of buckwheat cakes would not be be comprehended by the waiter. There is a table d'hote dinner usually at 1 or half-past 1, which consists of four or five courses and costs from two and a half to five marks—sixty-two and a half cents to $1.25. For supper you order what you will—the usual order being cold meat or eggs or both. You take your dinner and supper where you like and do not pay for it at the hotel unless you take it there. The head waiter generally asks you at breakfast if you expect to be at dinner. This is partly to reserve seats for your party; partly, I suspect, that like a prudent housekeeper he may know how many guests to provide for. Save in the large hotels, the number of those who sit down to the table d'hote dinner rarely exceeds from thirty to fifty. In the modern or modernized hotels the long table has given way to small tables. If you have a party of two or more, you are sure to have a table to yourself if you desire it.

If there are any temperance hotels in Germany, I neither saw nor heard of them. In all the hotels wine and beer are sold with the meals and are freely used. In two of the hotels at which we stopped the price of dinner was half a mark more if no wine was ordered. There was thus a small premium on ordering wine. On the other hand, there are no bars in the hotels in Germany, at least none in evidence to one who is not in search of a bar. We went into one hotel restaurant one evening for an ice and not only found a goodly number of men and women sitting at the little tables who preferred something to drink rather than something to eat, but in going to our table passed an open door through which we saw something that looked very like an American bar. And in Berlin I looked in through the open door of one saloon on one of the principal streets and saw men and women, some at tables, some at a bar, drinking with the same freedom with which similar groups might be seen on a warm day at a soda water fountain in an American city. But in the hotels proper there were apparently no bars. Personally, I think a hotel in which there is no bar but in which wine and beer can be ordered with the meals, is more worthy to be called a temperance hotel than a hotel, such as I have seen in Maine, in which no wine or beer can be ordered with the meals, but in which there is a bar in the basement where one can get stand-up drinks at pleasure.

But if there are no bars in the hotels in Germany, there is no dearth of places in which to satisfy thirst. Restaurants, cafes, gardens and drinking shops abound. There is every variety for every kind of taste. I do not know what the statistics show, but the impression on the careless traveler is that in the larger cities there is as great proportion of drinking places as in American cities of equal size, but different in character. You may go into what would be an ice cream saloon and order either an ice, a bottle of beer or a bottle of wine. You may go into a garden and find the seats—not benches, but chairs—ranged round little tables and a waiter ready to receive your order for a glass of milk (which, by the way, is quite common) or a glass of beer. You may find on a balcony or piazza of a hotel restaurant multitudes of little tables and multitudes of busy waiters serving eating and drinking guests. Or, I suppose—I did not try the experiment—you may go into what externally looks like an American saloon and take your drink standing. The Germans are always eating, yet do not gluttonize, and always drinking, yet are never drunk. In America we eat and drink as we put coal on the furnace to keep the machinery going, in Germany eating and drinking is an end in itself. The people eat and drink as one may read a book—not to get something out of it for future use, but for the mere enjoyment of reading. There is at least one thing to be said in favor of this: It is wholly inconsistent with the spirit of grab and gobble which one often sees at our American lunch counters in a business street in business hours.

The public rooms characteristic of our great American hotels are in Germany conspicuous by their absence. If there is a lobby, it is not used as a lounging place. There is often a reading room and sometimes a ladies' parlor, but they are both quiet and retired. I do not think if all the lobbies of all the hotels in Germany were united in one great lobby and all the guests in all the German lobbies were turned into it, they would present any scene of dress and display, lazy luxury and strenuous discussion comparable to what may be seen in any one of half a dozen hotels in New York City or Chicago. In the smaller hotels there is a small lobby which contains a chair or two, a desk and sometimes an office opening out of it. In this lobby or in the adjoining office is always to be found the portier. When your cab drives up to the hotel, the portier comes out in person to greet you. You are welcomed as a guest. If you are wise, you leave your baggage in the cab and ask to see what rooms they have. You see them, inquire the price, decline and drive on to try elsewhere, or accept and in ten minutes are settled and are at home. In the smaller hotels the proprietor is apt to take his dinner with his guests or, if not, to come into the diningroom at the dinner hour and greet them with a bow. In one hotel the proprietor sent personally a flower to every lady at the Sunday dinner and, if for any reason she could not be down to dinner, the flower was sent to her room. When you go away the portier, the head waiter and perhaps the proprietor, are present to bid their guests goodbye. They are not always after tips. At one German hotel where tips were forbidden, as we drove away we caught a glimpse of three of the waiters who had served us standing at the window smiling to us their adieux.

IDA LEWIS, HEROINE.

A Woman Lighthouse Keeper Who Has Saved Twenty-three Lives.

An interesting sketch of unfaltering devotion and heroism is contributed to the American Magazine by Herbert Ladd Walford. It has to deal with the life and work of Ida Lewis, who has been the keeper of the Lime Rock Light on Rhode Island's coast for fifty-three years. Mr. Walford writes of her as follows:

"In a lonely lighthouse on a jutting ledge of lime rock on Rhode Island's coast, Ida Lewis is rounding out fifty-three years of Government service. The nation's veteran keeper, she guards the entrance to Narragansett Bay. Hale in her sixty-five years of strenuous activity, she is still untiring, dauntless and brave. In the face of gale and storm she has snatched from the tumbling waters off her steady beacon twenty-three human lives. Five of these lives she saved last summer. She is a pensioner of the Carnegie Hero Fund, holds the Government First Class Medal for Bravery and the American Cross of Honor.

"Ida Wallen Lewis was appointed keeper of Lime Rock Light by Congress in 1879 and succeeded her mother in 1857 in Newport. Her father was keeper of the light from 1854 until his death in 1872. Known the country over for her life-saving, she is a unique character. Her island home is full of mementos of her valor, and is the Mecca of tourists all the year. Modest and cheery, she talks little of her deeds, but can show a hatful of medals from the greatest of the land. The Benevolent Life Saving Association of New York and the Humane Society of Massachusetts have both honored her.

"The United States awarded her a grand medal in gold for saving two men off the light in a terrible storm on February 4, 1881. Speaking of her greatest rescue she said, 'I remember one twilight in 1869. I heard the cries of two men during an awful storm. I put for them in my boat. Through the mist and spray I could see them clinging to their frail boat. I managed to pull them in, but they were nearly gone when I made the shore. Yes, they both lived. That is home to go and I hope the good Lord will take me away pretty soon. I have to there it. The light is my child and I know it needs me every night. GLADNESS COMES

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of illness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the only remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is, therefore, all-important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to purchase and note that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

It is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and assists in overcoming habitual constipation permanently, also biliousness and the many ills resulting therefrom. The great trouble with all other purgatives and aperients is not that they fail to act when a single dose is taken, but that they act too violently and invariably tend to produce a habit of body requiring constantly augmented doses. Children enjoy the pleasant taste and gentle action of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the ladies find it delightful and beneficial whenever a laxative remedy is needed, and business men pronounce it invaluable, as it may be taken without interfering with business and does not gripe nor nauseate. When buying note the name, California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of every package. Price, 50 cents a bottle.

In addition to the five hundred votes for cash subscriptions to the Clanton Press, the proprietors of the paper will give five votes in the contest for each one cent of cash advertising or cash job work that is brought to the office of the Clanton Press.

These votes are to be cast at the pleasure of the holder for the person nominated by the holden of the ticket.

Each ticket is plainly printed and contains a space for the name of the person for whom you wish to vote to be written thereon.

You need not tell anyone for whom you voted or propose to vote—that's your business. At the end of the contest the votes will be counted by a select committee of gentlemen and the result announced.

The person receiving the highest number of votes will receive the Piano without any cost whatever; the person receiving the next highest vote will receive the second prize and so on till all the prizes are awarded.

In addition to the votes given out by the Clanton Press we have arranged with several merchants to handle these Contest Tickets so that you may receive the benefit of your cash trade with them.

Below will be found the names of the merchants who will distribute Contest Tickets. With each one cent of cash trade done with them you are entitled to receive a ticket for one vote in the contest. Remember, one vote for each one cent of cash trade. If you spend one dollar in cash with them you are entitled to one hundred votes. If you spend ten dollars you are entitled to one thousand votes and so on. To obtain these tickets you will have to trade in Cash as no tickets will be given out for credit purchases. Each ticket will denote the number of votes to which you are entitled. For the convenience of the people two boxes will be used, one will be kept at the Upchurch Drug Company and the other at the office of The Clanton Press. Write on the ticket the name of the party for whom you wish to vote and deposit it in one of these boxes.

From time to time the names of the contestants and the number of votes each has received will be announced in the columns of the Press. Keep your eye on these announcements so that you can put your "best girl"—be she wife, sweetheart or daughter—up at the top of the column.

When you trade with merchants handling the contest ticket be sure to ask for them; you are entitled to them and they will gladly give them to you.

Bear in mind that you are entitled to five hundred votes for each Cash Subscription to The Clanton Press and to five votes for each one cent of Cash Advertising or Job Work done with The Clanton Press and to one vote for each one cent of Cash Trade with the following merchants: Upchurch Drug Company, Drugs, Seeds, Toilet Articles, Jewelry, Soda Water; Miss Minnie Muse, Millinery, Laces, Linens, Ladies' Furnishings; W. Published in the Interest of Chilton County and Her People.

VOL. I. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, APRIL 14 1910. NO. 2.

CLANTON HAS BEEN SURFEITED WITH SPECIAL TRAINS FOR THE PAST FEW DAYS.

The heavy traffic to New Orleans consequent upon the Convocation of the Imperial Council of the Shriners has occasioned more than fifteen specials to come this way, all bearing attendants to the convention. On every car was a number of red turban crowd hastening to the Crescent City to enjoy the festivities. Some of them came from the far northland—one tourist car being from Grand Rapids, Mich.

In all it is estimated that not less than three thousand Shriners with their wives and other company have passed through Clanton in the past few days. One special train bearing Shriners from Columbus, O., was detained here several hours by reason of the wreck last Monday. They seemed to enjoy their stay in our little town. Some of them employed their time playing ball, others in postal card writing, while yet others engaged every available vehicle, delivery wagon included, and "toured" the city. Along with the Columbus party was a band of Scotch Highlanders with their bag pipes who dispensed sweet music to the citizens gathered around the depot. Much of the music was had by special request of the ladies of the town and it was thoroughly enjoyed too.

The Press received the following letter through the mail on last Tuesday to which we gladly give space:

Culp's School House, April 12th

Editor Press:

Please publish the following announcement and accept in advance our thanks for your kindness.

The Democratic Club of Beat Fifteen will meet at this place Saturday night, April 16th, and will render the following program:

7:45—Address by J. Osmond Dickinson.

8:00—Address by Rufus E. Popwell.

8:15—Address by Howard Roper.

8:30—Address by Judge E. B. Deason.

Everybody is invited.

Respectfully,

J. S. SIMMS,
R. E. ROPER,
RUFUS E. POPWELL,
Committee.

Mr. John W. Stanfield has recently installed a first-class planing mill in connection with his extensive lumber business. The mill is situated on the north side of town near his residence. Here is turned out the finished product of the woods in great quantities. The mill has been in operation but a short time but the orders thus far received have been so numerous that Mr. Stanfield already contemplates enlarging his plant in order to meet the demand.

Let the good work gon on. More pay rolls and more men make prosperity's music all the sweeter and at the same time builds up and sustains the town.

The piano contest goes merrily on. The voting has not been as lively as The Press man had anticipated but when the people once understand the plan of the contest and realize that some one is sure to get a first-class piano free of all cost, they will take more interest in it.

We predict that within the next two weeks the votes will mount into the thousands and that the contestants for this beautiful instrument will besfir themselves. A year's subscription to The Press paid in advance secures FIVE HUNDRED votes and one vote is given for every cent of cash advertising and job printing. A few dimes spent in printer's ink may not only increase your business a hundred fold, but it may at the same time secure for your son or sweetheart a handsome piano. The merchants who are handling the tickets will gladly give them out to you if you call for them. Read the list of those who are using the tickets on the last page of The Press.

The "Tacky Party" that was to have been given at the court house last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Methodist Ladies Aid, was postponed, and will take place on next Friday evening at the court house, April the 15th. Grown people, 25 cents; children, 15 cents. Refreshments served free. A prize to the "tackiest" young lady, and one to the "tackiest" young man. Come and help us laugh.

Mr. J. V. Higgins, the jeweler and optician, has been making great improvements on his store in the recent past. The store room is to be extended to the wall of the Wade warehouse thus giving Mr. Higgins considerably more room for his well-selected stock of handsome jewelry.

By the way, Mr. Higgins has associated with him now as a saleswoman Miss Dovie Roper, one of the most popular young ladies of the town who will be glad to see her friends when needing anything in the AUDYVALE.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Col. Emmet O'Neal will address the voters of Chilton county on Tuesday the 26th of April at 10 a. m. at court house in Clanton. Every house in Clanton. Everybody invited to hear this distinguished Alabamian on this occasion.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

Mr. T. O. Johnson, butcher for the TWIN TREE LUMBER CO. is taking his vacation visiting friends in the north.

Engine No. 999 of the TWIN TREE LUMBER COMPANY turned over on last Thursday about one mile north of Hillside on the M. & O. railroad. The engine was backing up with the train ahead when going around a curve on a high embankment the tender left the track, leaped over the embankment, turning over with the engine landing against it. Fortunately no one was hurt, but both engineer M. K. Morris and fireman Willis Cleveland barely escaped with their lives.

The boys are practising baseball these days and we are naturally expecting some good games this season.

Mrs. H. J. Foshee's mother and sister, from Ashby, spent a few days with her last week.

Things must be getting very serious when a young man walks five miles to see his best lady friend! Oh, we didn't say who it was.

PANSY.

A man dressed in regulation old Colonial style occupied the streets of Clanton on last Tuesday advertising his wares. He attracted considerable attention. Dressed in tight fitting velvet, knee trousers, powdered hair, he accosted every passed-by almost and invited him to take a sample of George Washington tobacco.

JEMISON JOTTINGS.

I wonder if the editor will allow me just another tiny space in the dear old Press to tell the items of interest in and around Jemison? If so, here goes—

Quite a crowd of our young people attended the play "Mrs. Briggs of the Barn Yard," given by the students of the Thorsby Institute at that place last Friday evening. All report quite an enjoyable time, especially the walk home in the wee small hours of the morning. Their horses having mysteriously unhitched themselves and wending their way homeward and leaving the crowd to do likewise. The walk is only a memory now—a sweet memory to some of the crowd—and I'm sure many of them are ready to go again.

Mrs. Wallace Hand was a Birmingham visitor last week.

Judge Reynolds from Clanton was a welcomed visitor to our city on Friday last.

Mrs. Arthur Riddle and children from Birmingham are the guests of her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. Atkinson.

Mrs. Eland Cross of East Lake is home again on the sick list. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

Rev. Mr. Ormond filled his regular apointment at the Presbyterian church here Sunday morning and evening.

Mrs. Paul Skaggs has returned to her home in Birmingham after a pleasant visit here to her friends and relatives.

Mrs. J. B. Crysell left Sunday on a visit to the old folks at home.

Mr. I. N. Langston, one of our most prominent merchants and Masons attended the Shriner Convocation in Birmingham last Friday.

We hear some talk of a new depot. We are living in hope that this one time when our dreams will come true for we assuredly need a larger and better station house.

In the flaming sky, where so often hangs the silver crescent, is always the promise of another day; another chance to begin anew; another chance to do the many novel things we planned to do yesterday. How many of us take advantage of today by doing what we left undone yesterday. We know that errors once committed are irrevocable; so let all of us take up the promise of the Silver Crescent and with God's help begin anew, try to make the world brighter and better by having lived here.

Here's to the Clanton Press, may Clanton Notes.

Mr. J. Osmond Middleton of Clanton has been selected by the veterans of Mountain Creek as the orator of the day for their memorial day occasion. Mr. Middleton has signified his willingness to serve the old veterans.

Mr. O. H. Franklin of Atlanta, Ga., is on a business trip to Clanton.

Mr. W. M. Adams returned from Montgomery on Tuesday afternoon. While in the Capital City Mr. Adams combined business with pleasure, having closed a sale for about seven hundred acres of land belonging to the Moody estate. The land was bought in by the heirs of the estate and brought a good price.

Why is it that Clanton has not organized a base ball team for this season? In almost every other section of the globe where the game is known the young men and the old men are now actively engaged either in playing the game or in making preparation to enjoy looking at the other fellow play.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch will spend two or three days at the old home of the former in Pickens county before they return to Clanton.

If you have not already entered your best girl in the piano contest you had better "get busy" right quick or someone will get so far ahead that you'll not be able to catch up.

Dr. P. I. Hopkins made a flying visit to Birmingham last Tuesday.

We call atention to the tacky party to be given at the court house on tomorrow night. If you have not already prepared your regalia for attendance get busy and do so this morning. There's going to be lots of fun. The Press offers a six months subscription FREE to the most forlorn looking of the assembly.

The Clanton Bank is undergoing repairs and decoration. Mr. Potts is now busily engaged in repapering and otherwise beautifying the interior.

News comes of the death of Mr. Moses Moore an old resident of Lomax, which said event occurred on last Tuesday night. Mr. Moore was perhaps the oldest man in the county, being over eighty years of age.

We insist that the expenditure on the part of the city for a few electric lights along the streets would be money well invested. Some day Clanton will find itself face to face with a big damage suit brought on by reason of the unlighted streets, then the money that will have to be paid out in defending the suit and in settling the claim, would more than pay for the use of the lights for an entire year. What about it Mr. Mayor and Council—can't we have them?

The Press is soon to have a new neighbor. The store room just east of The Press office is to be occupied as a soft drink stand. But soft drinks will not be the only stock in trade by any manner of means. The proprietors propose to put in a first-class stock of perfumery, toilet articles and other fancy goods so necessary to the feminine tribe.

Our young people find Thorsby quite an attractive place just now. Several parties have been formed recently who go driving in that direction and bring back bunches of sweet carnations which are raised in great profusion by the enterprising Thorsby people.

At last Clanton and Clantonites have determined to conquer the dust nuisance. We've waited days and weeks for the dust to be good and settle itself but the unruly thing seems to persist in its antics so a wrathful yet long suffering people have at last taken the reins in their own hands and have ordered a water wagon—a real, sure enough "water wagon"; not one the prohibitionists and the politicians and the "swear-off fellows"—talk about—but a genuine Adam's-ale receptacle designed especially for subduing the dust that flies in women's eyes and makes non-church members say non-Sunday school words.

Its to be a beauty too, and, you know, a thing of beauty is a joy forever—at least so say the poets.

Well, this particular water wagon has all kinds of attachments—both useful and ornamental; poetic and prose. It has a large red band around its waist line and a deep blue border; it has a high seat for the driver to remind him of the days of Wm. Dodo when he sat in dignified and then it has a sprinkling attachment under which he can be seated when know the proper word) the dust. We said in the beginning that it was a beauty; see if you don't agree with the statement. It has broad tires, a large cypress tank holding 480 gallons of pure artesian water and a fire pump attachment which can be used in cases of fire. The pump is capable of throwing a stream to the top of the highest building in Clanton. Arrangements are now being completed for watering the principal streets of the town during the summer months. Water will be secured from the court house for that end of town and from Mr. Tool's tank for the western end of town, so that no section need suffer fro mthe dust during the dry months. Messrs. J. Reed Jones, E. M. Pinckard, Abe Kanter and J. C. Jones took it upon themselves to raise by public subscription the price for this much needed convenience and to them largely is due the credit of the water wagon in Clanton. After having made the purchase the wagon was turned over to the city government to be operated. The Gamble Hardware Company ordered the wagon and promised to have it in Clanton before the next rain so that we will be enabled to take snap judgment on old man Jupiter Pluvius and not be entirely dependent upon his whimsical moods.

Now, if some enterprising citizen would put a few hundred dollars into an up-to-date canning factory to utilize the farm products of our rural citizens both the town and the country people would be greatly benefited. A first class canning plant can be established for less than a thousand dollars and its establishment would be a new incentive to our planters to put in smaller crops of cotton and larger crops of vegetables. There is no reason in the world why Clanton cannot produce as fine beans, tomatoes and other small vegetables used for canning as any other section of the country. There is absolutely no reason why we should be compelled to go to the stores and purchase Georgia raised and Georgia canned vegetables with a New York label upon them when the same articles of food can be produced in our own section by our own people and sold at our own products at much more reasonable figures than we are compelled to pay for the Georgia raised articles with the northern label attachment. It is not too late, even now, to put in a plant for this season's crop. Will some one take the initiative? All it needs is a start and the matter will develop istelf.

A disastrous wreck occurred on last Monday morning about 5:30 o'clock at Filakto, two and a half miles below Clanton on the L. & N. Railroad. Much property and some life was destroyed in the wreck. Just who is to blame for the catastrophe has not yet been decided by the railroad officials, but from best information obtainable it seems that the train dispatcher will have to bear the burden of fault.

The northbound freight train, it seems, had orders to take the siding at Cooper or Filakto to permit the southbound to pass. For some reason the engineers failed to get into the siding on time and the train dispatcher, ignorant of this, permitted the fast southbound train to pass Clanton without orders. Coming in sight of the Filakto switch the engineer of the southbound train saw the northbound standing on the main line preparatory to taking the switch, but it was then too late to stop the fast moving and heavily loaded train. Seeing that a collision was inevitable the engineer of each train and the firemen jumped from their respective engines, while the two machines crashed into each other dealing death and destruction. Fortunately there was no loss of human life. The engineer of the southbound train was badly bruised about the head and had his ankle sverely wrenched.

Thirteen cars and two engines were almost totally destroyed together with the contents of the cars. There was a car of mules in the train belonging to some Gypsies who are camped near Clanton; three of these were killed. Creosote, apples, butter, honey, corn, beef and other merchandise was scattered by the car load up and down the track.

Altogther, it is estimated that the damage will total many thousands of dollars, including the engines and cars it will, perhaps, amount to a hundred thousand dollars or more.

No blame is attached to night operator at Clanton as he was acting strictly under instructions received from headquarters of his department.

"Its an ill wind that blows nobody good" so goes an old proverb and right truthfully did it prove itself last Monday in the case of the wrecked freight trains. Those who arrived early in the town of the wreck hastened knocking at his door, hesitated not to fling wide the portal and admit the welcomed guest.

Quickly did he make a trade with the officials of the road to take the car of corn; in a jiffy or less the trade was consumated and Mr. Latham set immediately to sacking and removing the corn. The price paid was a nominal one, much less than the cost of production in the western states, where corn grows so prolifically. Altogether he sacked something over six hundred bushels of corn, the larger part of which had never left the car. It is estimated that he made something over five hundred dollars with his trade with the railroad. Then, too, Mr. J. R. Powell came in good luck. There was a car of fine western beef, veal and other meats in the wreck that the railroad officials wished to dispose of as quickly as possible and Mr. Popwell proved a ready purchaser. He secured teams and gathering up the meats which were damaged but little, if any, brought them to Clanton and immediately put them in cold storage. Practically all night did he and his men labor selecting that which had not been damaged and destroying that which was unfit for use.

Others too had good fortune thrown their way, for apples, vegetables, honey and other miscellaneous freight was theirs for the asking, or rather for the picking, for it lay scattered for yards up and down the track.

Senator Allds' Career.

Jetham P. Allds was born of Revolutionary stock, in 1835, at Claremont, N. H. As a boy he moved with his family to Norwich, Chenango County, N. Y., and is still living there with his widowed mother. Mr. Allds began his Albany career as a member of the Assembly in 1896. He at once became a Platt follower and served seven terms in the Assembly. He was placed on good committees from the start.

Allds went to the Senate in 1903. He helped to make John Raines temporary president of that body, and was recognized at once as one of the "old guard." He became a member of the committees on Finance, Judiciary, Taxation and Retrenchment; Forest, Fish and Game and Roads and Bridges. He acted as special for the Forest, Fish and Game Committee and received $16,000 in fees.

The woman marched into the place and with an axe smashed things right and left, first smashing the plate glass window. The proprietor rushed out when the woman rushed in, and those inside scattered.

Gilinski admits the boy has played pool in his place, but he refuses to prosecute Mrs. Fineberg, and the woman says he dare not do so.

JOHN S. CATTS,

GRAND PRIZE CONTEST

FOR CLANTON PRESS SUBSCRIBERS

Early subscriptions mean early nominations; early nominations mean much to Contestants.

Get into the running early and stay late, thereby taking the best prize ever offered to the people of Chilton County.

The Piano belongs to you if you hustle for it; put your friends to work and rejoice in the possession of a handsome mahogany finish Grand UprightPiano.

Read the plan carefully and get actively into the game; you can win if you try and it's worth the trying.

THE PLAN: READ IT CAREFULLY

The Clanton Press has purchased and will have on display at the Upchurch Drug Company's Store, a handsome Mahogany Finish, Grand Upright Piano, warranted by the manufacturers for ten full years.

Call at the Upchurch Drug Company's place and examine its beautiful finish and test its perfect tone and touch—convince yourself.

This handsome instrument is to be given away absolutely free of all cost to contestants, and will be a means of bringing joy into some home in Chilton County—that home may be yours.

With each cash subscription of one dollar to the Clanton Press—the new paper published at Clanton—will be given a ticket entitling the holder to five hundreds votes in the Grand Piano Contest.

The person receiving the largest number of votes at the end of the contest will receive this handsome instrument absolutely FREE.

There are other prizes to be announced from time to time; elegant prizes that will appeal to the taste and pride of every contestant.

WATCH THE COLUMNS OF THE CLANTON PRESS FOR THESE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

No citizen of Chilton County, of good character, is debarred from the contest. Every one is invited to participate and will be given every assistance and all information possible to enable them to become the owner of this elegantly finished Piano.

READ THE PLAN CAREFULLY AND START EARLY; EACH DAY MEANS MUCH IN THE RUNNING.

In addition to the five hundred votes for cash subscriptions to the Clanton Press, the proprietors of the paper will give five votes in the contest for each one cent of cash advertising or cash job work that is brought to the office of the Clanton Press.

These votes are to be cast at the pleasure of the holder for the person nominated by the holder of the ticket.

Each ticket is plainly printed and contains a space for the name of the person for whom you wish to vote to be written thereon.

You need not tell anyone for whom you voted or propose to vote—that's your business. At the end of the contest the votes will be counted by a select committee of gentlemen and the result announced.

The person receiving the highest number of votes will receive the Piano without any cost whatever; the person receiving the next highest vote will receive the second prize and so on till all the prizes are awarded.

In addition to the votes given out by the Clanton Press we have arranged with several merchants to handle these Contest Tickets so that you may receive the benefit of your cash trade with them.

Below will be found the names of the merchants who will distribute Contest Tickets. With each one cent of cash trade done with them you are entitled to receive a ticket for one vote in the contest. Remember, one vote for each one cent of cash trade. If you spend one dollar in cash with them you are entitled to one hundred votes. If you spend ten dollars you are entitled to one thousand votes and so on. To obtain these tickets you will have to trade in Cash as no tickets will be given out for credit purchases. Each ticket will denote the number of votes to which you are entitled. For the convenience of the people two boxes will be used, one will be kept at the Upchurch Drug Company and the other at the office of The Clanton Press. Write on the ticket the name of the party for whom you wish to vote and deposit it in one of these boxes.

From time to time the names of the contestants and the number of votes each has received will be announced in the columns of the Press. Keep your eye on these announcements so that you can put your "best girl"—be she wife, sweetheart or daughter—up at the top of the column.

When you trade with merchants handling the contest ticket be sure to ask for them; you are entitled to them and they will gladly give them to you.

Bear in mind that you are entitled to five hundred votes for each Cash Subscription to The Clanton Press and to five votes for each one cent of Cash Advertising or Job Work done with The Clanton Press and to one vote for each one cent of Cash Trade with the following merchants:

ief.

"I want to walk and walk," she declared, as they stood on the steps. "I want to get all that bad air out of my lungs."

"It's the same here," agreed Barrington. "May I accompany you?"

A glance answered in the affirmative, and they set off at a swinging pace that soon brought them uptown. It was all too short a walk for Barrington, but Miss Tolbert had shyly assented to his request that they repeat the walk soon, and after that he frequently called for her and they went on a long tramp.

They had long since ceased to find the case the only topic of interest. They had many tastes in common, and though Barrington was careful not to speak of love, he felt that perhaps when the time should be ripe there might be a whispered "Yes" that would make him the happiest man in the world.

He did not welcome so gladly the third subpoena calling on him to attend the trial, but he answered promptly to his name, and in the face of direct testimony the defense concerned itself with pleading for a light sentence. The little victim had been given a generous sum in release of damages, and the judge contented himself with a fine large enough to insure carefulness on the part of that particular driver in the future. For the last time Barrington and Miss Tolbert stood on the steps of the court house.

"That's all over," she declared happily. "We've won the case."

"The cause of the people against John Bierling," assented Barrington. "There is another cause that I want to plead. I wonder if I shall be equally successful?"

The brown eyes fell beneath his ardent gaze.

"Perhaps this case could best be argued in camera," she suggested. "Let's walk home—through the park."—New Orleans Picayune.

Wu Ting-Fang Outwits Harriman.

Charles R. Flint told the other day how Wu Ting-Fang, while Chinese Minister to the United States, outdid in adroitness the late Edward H. Harriman. It occurred at a dinner which Mr. Flint gave at his home in honor of the Chinese diplomat. Mr. Wu generously volunteered to answer questions regarding his country. Mr. Harriman, who had studied China's transportation opportunities, was the first of the distinguished company to seek information. He asked one question, then another, and several more, all leading up to one which, if Mr. Wu had answered, would have divulged a State secret of his Government. But Mr. Wu parried. "Mr. Harriman," he said, "you have asked me six questions. I have answered them all. I will ask you only one question. I am told you control 50,000 miles of railroad. How did you get it and how do you keep it?"

Mr. Wu and Mr. Harriman both kept their secret.

Name Does Not Matter.

To attempt as Senator Conger does to distinguish between blackmail and bribery in the payment of money to influence legislation is merely to quibble over the meaning of words. The Senate has not gone into committee of the whole to discuss definitions but to investigate the use of money to defeat a bill that was inimical to the business interests of a member of the Legislature. The question is not by what name the transaction should be called, but what its essential nature was and who profited by it. The rest may be left to the lexicographers. The offense by either name is just as rank.—New York World.

Smart Frills of Fashion

New York City.—Coats of just the length illustrated are among the newest and smartest shown. This one is exceedingly smart and gives the most becoming possible lines. It is made of broadcloth and is trimmed with soutache applied over an effective yet simple design, which is edged with plain banding and the revers are faced with ribbed silk. The pleats at the lower portion are both new and graceful and the coat is meeting with an enthusiastic welcome. The long narrow opening is a feature and the single button marks the incoming styles.

The coat is made with front and side-front, back and side-back portions and is laid in pleats below the trimming. The long, narrow revers are rolled over and the coat can be held by a button and loop or with a braid ornament as liked. The sleeves are in regulation coat style.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is four and three-quarter yards twenty-seven, three yards forty-four or two and three-quarter yards fifty-two inches wide with three-quarter yard of silk and four and three-quarter yards of plain banding.

New Millinery.

A very charming hat is in laurel green felt, the definite but not really high crown being surrounded by a plain band of velvet, a steel ornament resembling a bat's wing in shape being bent over as if securing the kink in the brim. At the side two beautiful ostrich tips of the same soft shade of green nod serenely, the brim in front protruding in a becoming style.

Bags of Dress Fabrics.

The newest bags are made of the material of the costume. Beautifully lined with moire silk, they are enriched by metal embroideries. Shining copper bound the edges of one lovely copper colored velvet bag, and in pretty open-work design filled the corners. On a flat plate set on one side was carved an intricate monogram.

Bonnets of Irish Crochet.

Bonnets for tiny babies are made of baby Irish crochet and cut like Dutch caps. They are mounted on an undercap of padded crepe de chine. The Irish lace is threaded with tiny satin ribbons of blue or rose color, and a big cabbage-like rosette is fastened at each side, where the cap strings join.

Paletot a Favorite.

The paletot is a great favorite with matrons, especially those who boast of height. The paletots are plain, with occasional draping, and the most effective are those trimmed with fur.

Gold Shade Popular.

The tone of yellow that is attracting much attention to itself is the gold dollar shade. It is the bright, rich yellow of currency. It comes in satin, in gauzes and in chiffon cloths. It is rather superb in velvet, especially when the gown is embroidered with gold lace and white tulle.

A New Type of Gown.

Pretty semi-evening gowns, called tripped casino gowns, are being worn with but slight decolletage and transparent guimpes of tulle or mousseline.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

THE PERFUMED KNIGHT.

I wear no suit of armor;
No sword or spear I bear.
I've but a little scent bag;
It says to all: "Beware!"

My coat is one of the handsomest to be seen in the forest—black, decked out with a great white collar. My tail is large and showy. I wander through the woods by day or night, whenever I please, though a moonlight night is always my choice for a stroll. By starlight or in bright sunshine I raid the farmer's poultry house, and if he approaches with club or stone I have only to loosen the draw string of my scent bag, let out a tiny whiff of perfume, and he turns and flees for his life. Ha! Ha! Ha! In triumph I bear off to my wife and my babes his plumpest goose, or his sleekest pullet. If my home is far from any farm I keep my table supplied with partridges, pheasants and other wild fowl. When I walk abroad I always have the path to myself. There is no forest dweller who cares or dares to dispute it with me. If one sees me afar he says to himself, "The Perfumed Knight," and hastily retreats. Can you guess my name?—Tribune.

THE SMARTEST CAT.

I want to write and tell you about my cat. His name is Smut and he is the smartest cat I ever saw. I can dress him up in my cast-off baby clothes and put him in the baby carriage and wheel him all around, and then I can lay him down on a sofa cushion and go away and leave him on it, and he will not get off the cushion till I come back. He will also play hide and seek with me.—Bethel Bailey, in the New York Tribune.

SPARROWS.

I have no dog or cat, neither have I a canary, but I would like to write a few lines about some sparrows that come to our kitchen window to be fed every morning. They are fine, little healthy birds and are so used to our feeding them that they have become quite tame and always seem to act as if they were entitled to their morning meal. One morning this winter a flock of large storm birds came on our lawn, and the sparrows, thinking, no doubt, that they were intruders, acted as if they were very much offended. I think if the boys who try to shoot the little sparrows could see these birds coming each morning for their little breakfast they would not be inclined to molest them. For my part, I shall always try to protect even the sparrows.—Claire Courtenay, in the New York Tribune.

SQUEALY AND CURLY-TAIL.

I am going to tell you about two very funny pets, Squealy and Curly-Tail. Squealy is a little black and white pig and Curly-Tail is all white. I know some of my little Tribune friends would think Squealy and Curly-Tail very queer pets, but if you once saw them I am sure you would like them.

One day my uncle, who owns a big farm, went down to the market to buy duck eggs. As he was looking around he saw a crate with two little pigs in it. They were so tiny and cute that he bought them and took them home to my cousin, who fell in love with them at first sight.

Squealy used to follow my cousin wherever she went, and when she got tired she would stop and squeal as loud as she could. This is how she got her name. Curly-Tail got his name from the funny shape of his tail, which curls right over his back. —Florence Fouchaux, in the New York Tribune.

DEWEY AND BEAUTY.

These are the names of the two dogs which I am going to tell you about. Dewey is the stronger and more capable dog. He is a shepherd dog with rough brown hair on his body. Beauty is also a shepherd dog, but has longer hair than Dewey and nearly a white head. There is also a white stripe down her back and at the tip of her tail. In summer Dewey drives the cows from the pasture, while Beauty stays at home playing with the smaller children. When we played football we nearly always had Dewey and Beauty play also. Dewey on one side and Beauty on the other. Dewey was of fine help because the cows would go in the right direction when he was told to go that way. Beauty would run ahead and bark at the cows to make them go faster. Dewey would run behind and bark at the cows to make them go faster. G. D. RETHERFORD.

The killing of two white men in Montgomery last Monday by a negro, who seems in this instance at least to have been justified in his act, shows to what extremes the sellers of furniture on the "extortionate plan" will sometimes go to enforce their claims. Thought there was a law against this class of money lenders anyway.

Judging from the activity displayed by the DEMOCRATS on last Saturday at the meeting of the Executive Committee and from the enthusiasm expressed both in the voices and countenances of those who attended the meeting some office holders of long standing in Chilton County are going to hear something drop on the ides of November.

Attention is called to the meeting of the Democratic Club on next Saturday night at Culp's school house. These loyal Democrats in that part of the county are reading the signs of the times and profiting thereby. They, like the faithful war-horse, sniff victory from afar and are preparing for it. Oh, that Democrats throughout Chilton would thus act!

One of the great objects of corporations and municipalities is the combination of brains, purses and brawn for the common good. The association of the individuals together is for mutual advancement and advantage. It is thus in municipal corporations. The massing of citizens together, rather than the scattering abroad, is for the purpose of obtaining by asociation those things which as individuals they could not obtain. Where corporations or associations, of whatever character they be, fail to give those associated together the actual necessities and conveniences of life, it fails in the prime object of its incorporation. Electric lights along the thoroughfares, water in the homes and sanitary sewerage are no longer looked upon as the luxuries of the rich but the actual necessities of the poor.

The Press notes with pleasure that Judge Deason is entering actively into the campaign now under way. That's the way to inspire confidence and hope in the hearts of the people. Notwithstanding the fact that he has no opposition, Judge Deason is attending the several meetings of Democratic clubs within the county and from time to time gives to these hard working party men the benefit of his counsel. Any man can hustle when he has opposition but the man who goes out voluntarily and assists in Beat meetings and rallies is the man to whom the people turn when the time comes for the casting of ballots.

Clanton is perhaps the only town of its size in the state that has no street lights upon its public streets. Many of the larger cities and towns of the country have ceased to view electricity and electric lights as a luxury or convenience and now insist upon them as necessities. It is unfortunate that our town has not a full treasury, but that is not always a good excuse for causing citizens to plod their way home in the dark hours of the night without so much as a shuck to light the way.

We call attention to the Notice of Election in this issue of The Press and indulge the hope that all true Democrats will prepare to go to the polls on that day even though the weather should not be propitious or other duties seem urgent. Go, it means much to have your party candidates nominated by a large vote. The fact that opposition does not exist is no excuse for Democrats remaining away from the polls. It is this apathy which kills parties and gives to the opposition side hope of success.

Mr. Mallory is not campaigning with any flurry of trumpets. That's not his way. He does not believe in bigotry and bluster but he is going on in a quiet, dignified way, telling the people just where he stands on the several policies and isues of the day and is welding the hearts of men to him. The masses of the people may follow a braggart for a season, but they soon return to their sober judgment and realize that he who is forever tooting his own horn has but little time to attend to the business of others even in a public office. They want men like Mallory, who, when duty calls, is ready to respond with alacrity and who has no personal trumpet to lay aside before he can enter the fray.

Aleady we hear rumblings of the city election though that event is some weeks in the future. Candidates are being discussed and policies are being shaped that look to the future government of the city. The Press is taking no part in these discussions at present. One primary or election at the time is about as many as the great American people can handle successfully even though they are well versed in the game of politics. Let's let the city governmental affairs alone for the time and devote ourselves to the State primary. The city is well governed now and is in safe hands. We can afford to wait for a while before entering into a discussion of city affairs, but the conflict which now confronts us is one to which all good party men should give both time and study. We need good men, conservative men, in the offices of State and County and it behooves every good Democrat to enter actively into the primary, so close at hand, to the end that good men only shall be chosen to fill these offices.

The Press does not wish to antagonize any one, especially does it not wish to run "afoul" of the L. & N. roilroad, that great corporation which seems not to fear God or regard man, but we do insist that successful railroading does not demand the outrageous screeching and bellowing of the engines as is practised in this town by the engineers on that system. It's an affront to the people and an outrage upon respectibility. In no other place do they pretend to perpetrate such montsrous howling and screeching and screaming. If it were necessary to the welfare of the road or to the successful operation of their affairs it would be a different question, but when they persist in the practise simply to try the patience of a people, it seems that there should be a point where patience should cease to be a virtue and where prison bars and fines should come into play.

In another column of The Press will be found the tabulated vote cast thus far in the piano contest. There are quite a number of tickets being held back in anticipation of casting them at the last and thus securing the prize. How many of these votes are being hoarded cannot be told just now but it is a safe proposition that at least half of them are being held. It cannot possibly accomplish any good purpose, for if half a dozen or more are holding, and it is reasonable to suppose that there are at least that many doing so, then it will be rather difficult to calculate who is to receive the majority of these hoarded votes. If, on the contrary, they are cast as soon as received so that announcement of the total vote can be made, every one will know just who is in the race and how each stands. This being the case it will not be a proposition in higher mathematics to figur out, approximately, at least, how many votes will be necessary to land any particular contestant.

The recent primary election in Jefferson gave the O'Neal forces something to think about and to figure upon. They confidently predicted that at least twenty thousand votes would be polled in the primary and that the "O'Neal" candidate would run far ahead of those of the other side. At the same time they conceded to Mr. Mallory not less than six thousand votes in the State primary. Contrary to all their predictions and calculations there was but a few more than thirteen thousand votes cast in this never-to-be-forgotten primary. It is a well known fact that in a primary election where local [illegible] are being voted for, the ballot is much heavier than would otherwise be the case. In this instance the contest was the most intensely interesting and the hardest fought election ever held in Jefferson County. Thousands upon thousands of dollars were to change hands on the result. Almost every office was contested for by from three to four candidates. No man who was entitled to a vote was permitted to escape without casting his ballot; yet with all the heat of contest and the spending of dollars there were but a few more than half of the predicted number of ballots cast. The "O'Neal" candidate ran far behind the ticket.

Now put these facts together in a constructive way and what do you have as a result? Mallory carries JEFFERSON county! Why, of course! This is the net result of the figures made by the O'Neal men themselves. They conceded Mallory six thousand in the County. A concession of six thousand in a contest of thirteen thousand is liberal in the extreme, but they admitted that he had that many. Mallory, of course, claims more, and he will secure more; but that's another proposition—we are taking the O'Neal figures now.

To a concession of six thousand can safely be added an additional one-third which will give Mallory the county by a safe majority.

Where is that boasted box of ballots brought back from Birmingham. Mr. O'Neal? Echo answers, WHERE?

There was another political straw in the Jefferson contest which indicated that things were not altogether lovely with the O'Neal forces. Judge Fort, an appointee of Comer's who made no campaign whatever; who had no campaign committee behind him beseeching the voters in his behalf, was opposed in his race for reelection by a man who had both money and men behind him. Judge Fort was busily engaged holding court and gave no part of his time to the contest except when he was free from the grinding duties of the Court, while the other candidate and his men were actively at work in the campaign from day to day. In that contest where thirteen thousand votes were cast there was a difference between these candidates of just two hundred votes! Marvelous, you say? Yea, and more!

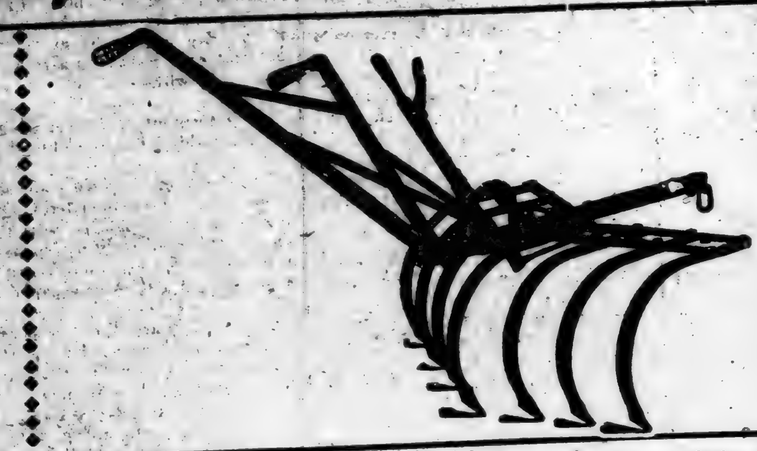
The meeting of the Democratic Executive committee on last Saturday was a demonstration of enthusiasm and hope that has not been seen in Clanton for some time past. It was a veritable love feast of democrats. Though a meeting of the Executive Committee, primarily to devise ways and means for bringing out of the full vote in the coming primary election, no good democrat was barred from the meeting.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman Simpson, who stated the object of the meeting, after which he threw the session open for general discussion. Quite a number of speeches were made—all of which had the genuine democratic ring and were couched in words of hope for the future of Chilton County Democracy. It was unanimously agreed that the outlook was hopeful in the extreme and every one present expressed the determination to exert his best efforts toward bringing up a full vote for democratic candidates in the May primary.

Among the speakers were: Mr. J. D. Sims, of Route 3; Mr. W. H. Killingsworth, of Jemison; Mr. Tipton Mullins, Hon. Thos. A. Curry, candidate for the state senate, Hon. E. B. Deason, candidate for Probate Judge. Much interest was manifested from the expressions of earnestness for democracy's success heard on all sides. The Press predicts that old Chilton will soon swing back to her ancient moorings and take her place along side of those counties whose watchword is democracy, development and duty.



Hon. Robt. H. Mangum, who was announced to speak here on last Saturday morning at 9:30 did not reach the city until nearly noon, his train being several hours late. However, a meeting was arranged for him after the noon hour to which a goodly number of democrats went. There were quite a number of ladies too in the meeting who added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion by their presence.

Mr. Mangum, is a forceful, graceful speaker and forcefully and gracefully did he present the claims of his friend and townsman, Hon. H. S. D. Mallory to the citizens of Chilton. It would be useless, perhaps, to attempt to reproduce the convincing arguments of the speaker as time after time he refuted the claims of the O'Neal contingent upon the sufferages of the people and demonstrated by most logical arguments that Mr. Mallory was the most available and the strongest candidate for Governor. He reviewed at length the services of the two candidates to the party, the church and to the state.

He told them of their boyhood days how the one had gone a heardless boy from the field of battle to the field of corn and cotton and assisted an old father in rearing his family, while the other, reared in the lap of luxury, had been fortunate to have his lines fall to him in pleasant places.

All in all, Mr. Mangum made many friends for the candidate of the common people, the friend of the laboring man—Col. H. S. D. Mallory.

Rev. R. J. Mills, pastor of the Methodist church, announced on last Sunday that he had secured the services of the Rev. G. A. Cline to assist him in a series of meetings to be held at that church sometime within the near future. Mr. Cline could not speak positively as to the date when he would be here but authorized the statement that he would assuredly come sometime in the early part of June. Mr. Cline is a man of rare ability as a minister. He is especially forceful in presenting the great truths of the gospel and in persuading men to turn from a course of sin and error to the pathway of life. The Methodist people are to be congratulated in securing the services of so able a man to conduct their services.

The Mystic Shrinefs of Zamora Temple held a ceremonial session on last Friday night in Birmingham, which was attended by the following Shriners from Clanton: Drs. E. A. Matthews, J. P. Hayes, E. G. Hyman and V. G. Gragg, also Messrs. E. E. Upchurch, Guy Higgins, J. Watts Moore, W. H. Sarter, J. W. Stanfield, J. E. Robinson and H. T. Pipes. Those shriners went up to witnes the introduction of Messrs. W. I. Mullins and Samuel Matthews into the mysteries of the Order. On their return from Birmingham those who had accompanied them encircled the newly made members at the depot, marching around them and singing some incantation which for some minutes attracted quite a crowd and furnished no end of amusement to the onlookers as the Shriners with their fancy headgear forgot, for a moment, their accustomed dignity and gave to the recently received brothers a royal welcome into the order.

An alarm of fire was turned in on last Saturday night, or rather Sunday morning, about 2:30, by the firing of several hundred volleys, more or less, from the ever present derringer and forty some odd citizens were awakened from their slumbers to the music of the shots as they rang out, long, clear and continued on the night air. The manager of the electric light company was so startled that he rolled from his bed through the window and having collided with the ground was so bewildered that he had to hesitate and draw a geometrical figure to ascertain in what direction he should move in order to ascertain [illegible] from being enacted in our midst, while others slumbered and slept as if all was quiet along the Potomac.

The cause of this fusilade turned out to be the burning of a negro house on the outskirts of the town. How the fire originated no one seems to know. Occupants had been in the house during the night.

The house was the property of Tom [illegible], a colored man, who works [illegible] was occupied as [illegible] Norton.

[illegible] of the house was covered but the building was entirely destroyed.

Again the Press man arises to remark that a well organized fire company would not be out of place. This fire is the first in some weeks; be careful, you property owners, there are two more due in the near future unless the old rules fails to hold good.

Mr. M. L. White went up to Birmingham on a business trip last Friday, returning the next day.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Professor and Mrs. J. W. Moore and daughter, Miss Naomi Belle, spent a few days in Prattville the past week the guests of Mrs. Moore's parents.

Rev. E. B. Paul and Rev. D. B. Dismukes accompanied Rev. R. J. Mills to Jemison on last Thursday night where each made a missionary address at the Methodist church of that place.

Miss Mabel Jones of Verbena visited Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Dennis the past week.

Mrs. Gamma Anderson returned Wednesday from a visit to the Capital City.

Mr. S. S. Scott of Verbena was a pleasant visitor to the city this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Stanley Hubbard of Mountain Creek were visitors to Clanton last Sunday, coming up to spend the day with Mrs. J. Watts Moore.

Genial Burns Marsh of Maplesville was a pleasant caller at the Press office this week. Burns is handling the piano contest tickets at Maplesville.

Mr. R. W. Kennedy of Beat 12, a staunch Mallory man, was a caller at The Press office last Tuesday. Mr. Kenney says he is looking forward to the nomination of Governor Mallory with much pleasure.

Hon. Phares Coleman, of Montgomery, candidate for the State Senate from Montgomery County, was a visitor to Clanton on last Tuesday. He came down on legal business.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Callen went to Mountain Creek last Sunday to spend the day among the old soldiers. They carried with them a large basket laden with good things to eat which they dispensed to the brave old fellows who wore the grey back in the sixties.

Mr. W. M. Adams and son Wesley, went down to Montgomery on Sunday afternoon on affairs connected with his office. He returned Wednesday morning.

Mrs. J. Q. Wade and son Jack have been spending the past week in Atlanta visiting the sister of the former. Anyone looking at the face of the old man would think that he had indeed lost his best friend forever. Cheer up, old man, she'll be back in a day or two.

Mr. Laird of the Age-Herald staff, located in Montgomery, was a pleasant caller at The Press office last Tuesday. He was delayed here on acount of the wreck.

Mrs. W. W. Monroe went down to Montgomery last Friday where she is having her eyes treated. For some months past she has suffered greatly but the specialist under whose care she now is hopes to give her permanent relief in a short time.

Perhaps the largest crowd that has assembled at the depot for many weeks was there Sunday afternoon to bid the local Shriners Godspeed on their journey to New Orleans where they go to take part in the Imperial Council of that order. Among those who went from here were: Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch, J. R. Mullins and wife and sister, Miss Nell, Dr. N. S. Johnson, J. H. Shepherd, Judge L. H. Reynolds, E. M. Pinckard, John W. Stanfield.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Robinson returned Sunday afternoon from Birmingham where their little baby has been under the care of a physician in one of the infirmaries. Glad to report that the little one is improving rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Baxley, Mrs. E. V. Spier and Miss Nell Gray, The Press representative, all of Mountain Creek, spent a short time in Clanton on last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jones were called into the country on Saturday night last to attend the bedside of the sister of the former who is quite sick.

The Press job office is now turning out some of the nicest work that has been seen in Clanton for many a day. If you have need of real nice stationery give us a call. A merchant is judged by his stationery. We make the best display possible and thereby help you in your business.

Mr. John Marsh, of Nashville, was in town on Friday last.

Mr. Guy Higgins is spending a few days in southeast Alabama in the interests of his lumber business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Ellis of Montevallo, with their children, were visitors to the family of Dr. E. E. Upchurch last week.

Miss Jatie Lawrence is visiting in Montevallo this week.

Miss Alice Stewart has returned from a pleasant visit to friends and relatives in Birmingham.

Quite a party of young people from this place attended the closing exercises of the Thorsby Institute on last Friday night.

Mr. A. Kelley of Deatsville spent last Tuesday in the city.

Mrs. Strock of Verbena is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Judge Deason.

Mrs. Dr. N. S. Johnson, during the absence of her husband at the Shriners' Convocation, is entertaining quite a house party of friends. Progressive dominos seems to be the order of the day and night at the party and that each is having a royal good time goes without saying.

Mr. J. Osmond Middleton is attending court this week at Columbiana.

The Press has received many words of kindness and commendation on the first issue of the paper. Now let all who want a real lively newspaper get in behind the newsgatherers and help them make a newsy newspaper.

Some folks are too everlastingly slow to go fast asleep but that shall not be the case with The Press force; if you have an item of news let us know about it and if you haven't the time to bring it to us we will take the time to come after it and thank you for it too.

Have you seen any of the beautiful job work turned out by Clyde Davis at The Press job office? Some of Clanton's merchants realize a good thing when they see it and are taking advantage of the low prices and good work executed at this office to lay in a supply of classy stationery. They know it pays to have good stationery.

We have heard quite a number say that they propose to keep their contest tickets till the close of the contest and then cast them for their favorite. This is an injustice to that favorite who ever she may be, for if the votes were cast in the beginning others might also cast their votes the same way and thus help to build up the strength of the very one you are striving to aid. By all means get your votes in early and let your friends know that you are in the contest.

POPULAR SCIENCE & INVENTION

It has been proved that our great railway terminals, where traffic is constant, where switch engines are shunted back and forth and suburban trains are run frequently, can be operated more economically by electricity than by steam.

It is reported from Magdeburg that a German machine manufacturer there has invented a new means of power transmission by use of steel wire. It is claimed fo rthis invention, which substitutes thin, endless steel wires for leather belts, steel bands, chains, etc., that it equals the other systems in every way and is considerably cheaper.

Tests have been made recently at New Orleans of an electric block device for the automatic stopping of trains which was invented by J. D. Nix. Two engines were used, and it is stated that the device worked perfectly, automatically stopping the engines as they approached each other, besides preventing either from entering a block when the other was in the block. An engine was also stopped automatically when a switch was left open and when an obstruction was thrown across the rails.

The observations of H. N. Thompson, conservator of forests for southern Nigeria, indicate that the mahogany tree grows much more rapidly than the number of so-called annual rings suggests. Mr. Thompson thinks that they show three or four well marked zones of growth each year, corresponding to the four seasons. Both forest trees and those grown in the botanical gardens exhibit the same phenomenon. On the site of the town of Ijaye, destroyed sixty years ago, a forest has grown up containing mahogany trees with trunks exceeding ten feet in girth.

It is not so long ago that the text books on minerals used to describe quartz as "infusible." The electric furnace has given the lie to this specification, and now some manufacturers of chemical devices devote special techniques to apparatus made of this substance. There are two grades on the market—the transparent kind, made from rock crystal and looking almost precisely like ordinary glass, and the cheaper translucent variety, made of common silica and sometimes called in the trade "electroquartz." Both kinds are valuable in the chemical laboratory, boiling vessels made of either resist all acids but hydrofluoric and cannot be cracked by sudden temperature changes. Quartz tubing is used also for the [illegible] of ozone, which are greatly superior to [illegible]

New Leg Every Three Years.

If you were offered $75 or a new leg every three years, provided you had to wear an artificial leg, which would you choose? Professor Franz H. Kirmayer, one of the teachers in the Bridgewater normal school, prefers to have a new leg instead of cash. He is a veteran of the civil war, and the United States government gives him the choice of either having a new leg or $75 in cash.

In addition to this the government gives him the right to secure his leg anywhere he wants to, and the government pays all his expenses, including car fare, sleeper and meals to and from the place he selects. If he wanted to go to Manila to select a new leg he would have the opportunity to do so.

Professor Kirmayer has recently returned from Minneapolis, where he had a new leg fitted, and he is delighted with it. It is the best leg he has ever had, he declares, or better than any since he lost his real leg down in Georgia in Sherman's march to the sea.—Boston Herald.

As in Laundries.

A California woman, in training a new Chinese servant to wait on the door, had her daughter ring the bell and present her card. Next afternoon a friend called and handed her card to the Celestial, who pulled out of his sleeve the card the daughter of the house had presented the afternoon before, and carefully compared the two. "Tickee no matchee," he exclaimed, handing back the visitor's card. "No can come in."—Success Magazine.

Genuine Watermelon Going.

pumpkin hybridisation, so as to get thick, tough rind to stand shipping and to make them larger and fuller. While the rind improves the meat is damaged. The old-fashioned watermelon, with its thin, brittle rind which cracked under thumb pressure or split when a knife was put in, is past and gone, for such are no good in a day of commercialism. A genuine watermelon is a hard thing to handle, for it cracks as easily as an egg; it often splits itself in the patch.—New Orleans States.

MUST HAVE HURT DREADFULLY

From the Letter Recently Received from Mrs. E. Fournier, of Lake Charles, La., Her Suffering Must Have Been Dreadful.

Lake Charles, La.—"I had no courage or patience left," writes Mrs. E. Fournier, of this place, "as a result of my great suffering.

"I had backache, headache, heart palpitation, chills, fainting spells, sick stomach, nervousness, dragging sensations and thought every month I should die.

"No doctor could relieve me and the month before I began to take Cardui, I could hardly walk. I could not wear my corset, and had a pain in my right side.

"Since taking Cardui, I have no more pain. I can walk as far as I want and am feeling like a different woman."

If you suffer from any of the symptoms described by Mrs. Fournier, you are urged to take Cardui, for it should surely do as much for you as it has done for her.

If you are weak and ailing, suffer from lack of appetite, lack of blood, lack of nervous vitality, Cardui is probably just what you need to help you build up your physical and nervous constitution.

Like individuals, the nations of the earth have nicknames. Some are appropriate, some are not.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in concentrated and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

Next Year in the Air.

"Aviators like Paulhan, who is reputed to be receiving $50,000 for his visit to this country, and Bleriot, whom I know to have made $300,000 since he flew across the English Channel, are lucky to be making it now," said an Aero Club enthusiast in the clubrooms the other night after he had just left the steamer from France.

"In another year there will be so much competition that you will be able to hire daring aeronauts like Paulhan and Bleriot about as cheap as high divers are now procured by county fairs. Why, in France alone there are now actually 300 men known to be flying in various makes of planes, and they are getting more plentiful and proficient every day. Let the craze once get a grip in this country and life on our streets will be a positive peril beside which the menace of automobiles will be forgotten."—New York Sun.

Thompson's Eye Water

Wasted a Fortune on Skin Trouble.

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limb, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there. I used all the medicines that I could see, but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies, and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Church Facilities for Smokers.

A "smokers' pavilion" attached to a church is somewhat of a novelty in the British dominions. A recent visitor to Kalgoorlie, the famous West-ern Australia gold field, made and proclaimed this discovery. It seems that in the early years of the gold boom there were many diggers dwelling in tents who never burdened themselves with Sunday clothes, and consequently never bothered about going to church.

Anxious to attract this class the minister of the Congregational church fitted up an open air enclosure in which the men could listen to the services in free and easy fashion without being embarrassed with the formalities of indoor worship. A large archway was opened up in the side of the church facing the enclosure, and the pulpit was so placed that the preacher could be heard by both congregations. The idea was successful, and the "smokers' pavilion" (the occupants of the open air enclosure exercised the privilege of smoking during the sermon) became a popular Sunday resort.—London Chronicle.

Fasten ropes to the stakes, the trees or posts, should be near the corners of the house, leaving room for a gate at one of the stakes. Pass the ropes around the house in such a way that the fence will be upright, and stay in place, then fasten ropes securely. About 150 ft. of netting will be sufficient for the little time needed to confine the chicks. When through with the fence, roll up, and store away for future use.

Do not forget that too many sloppy hens will get your fowls out of order, and to get eggs, hens must be kept in order.

Why not work up a good retail trade? Even in small towns much complaint is made of the stale eggs purchased from stores, and the soup-hen procured from butcher shops. It may be small at first, but if you furnish the right stuff, there will soon be more demand than you will be able to supply.

Charcoal is one of the best of blood purifiers, and should always be kept where poultry can have access to it. Never buy screenings; good grain is much cheaper in the long run.

For the Old Fashioned Coffee Was Killing.

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, for it seemed as though there was nothing for breakfast if we did not have it on the table.

"I had been troubled some time with my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse gradually.

"Sometimes it would beat fast and at other times very slowly, so that I could hardly be able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast, and if I walked up a hill, it gave me a severe pain.

"I had no idea of what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off coffee and began drinking Postum. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble and attribute the relief to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum.

"A number of my friends have followed the old fashioned coffee habit have taken up with Postum, and they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum rather weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since Postum was first started in our house."

THE OPEN WINDOW.

My tower was grimly builded,
With many a bolt and bar,
"And here," I thought, "I will keep my life
From the bitter world afar."

Dark and still was the stony floor,
Where never a sunbeam lay,
And the mold crept up on the dreary wall,
With its ghost touch, day by day.

One morn, in my sullen musings,
A flutter and cry I heard;
And close at the rusty casement
There clung a frightened bird.

Then back I flung the shutter
That was never before undone,
And I kept till its wings were rested
The little weary one.

But in through the open window,
Which I had forgot to close,
There had burst a gush of sunshine
And a summer scent of rose.

For all the while I had burrowed
There in my dingy tower,
Lo! the birds had sung and the leaves had danced
From hour to sunny hour.

And such a balm and warmth and beauty
Came drifting in since then,
That the window still stands open
And shall never be shut again.

CHARLIE RENO'S GRANDSIRE.

By HERBERT COOLIDGE.

"There used to be a saying among my tribesmen," said Charlie Reno, the Indian preacher, "that working a Modoc was like breaking a lynx to lead. My grandfather was a Modoc, and from the age of ten was a captive among the Pitt Rivers. Some of the stories he told about the way he and his captors treated each other would make you laugh, and others would make your blood run cold. I will tell you the story of his last day of slavery just as he has told it to me many times."

Impersonation seemed a deeply rooted instinct with Charlie Reno, and as he took up the narrative one could easily imagine himself in the presence of a grim old Indian grandsire.

"Manuk was my friend—all the rest of the Pitt Rivers treated me worse than a dog. He was the best hunter and the bravest fighter of the tribe. I was not yet grown—a Modoc slave raised on women's work—but he treated me as one man treats another.

"Grinding acorns and scraping hides was worse than death for me, and Manuk would borrow me sometimes to help carry in game from the mountains. He gave my owner venison for this, when plenty of the young suckling braves would have been glad to help him for nothing.

"He was ahead about ten steps when we approached the scrub-oaks above River's Fang, where he had cached two deer. Manuk carried his bow and arrows, I the long pole we used to carry burdens with before the day of horses came. Behind was the long, wide flake-rock slide we had crossed; before and below was the fang of the river, just its tip splitting the freshet where it hissed along a crack-like channel down a flat, slanting bed of solid stone; farther below, the waterfalls and rapids were trying to gnaw the bottom out of the canyon.

"Just as he stepped under the branches, Manuk halted, motioned me over his shoulder, and began back-tracking without a sound. I began back-tracking, too, stooping at the same time so that I could look under the foliage. I saw there the carcases of the two deer, both on the ground and both chewed and mangled.

"At that moment there was a terrible crashing in the brush to the side of Manuk. I saw the tops of the bushes whipping furiously, saw Manuk spring straight into the air and grasp an oak branch just in time to escape being borne to the ground by the rush of the grizzly. But before Manuk could wriggle out of reach, the bear reared on its haunches and made a lunge with its paw that brought a spurt of blood out of my hunter friend's leg below the knee.

"The grizzly whirled to make another upward drive, and I saw that his right flank was scarred as by fire or scalding. My heart fluttered then like a woman's. Just to say 'Scar-Flank' would set any of the Indians round Mount Shasta to looking over their shoulders, for old Scar-Flank, it was said, was the haunt of a crazy Indian demon. I turned and scudded across the slide.

"Half-way across I heard terrible shrieks, and stopped. I thought the shrieks came out of my friend's death-anguish, and I stood there, listening and trembling. Then I heard Manuk's shrill war-whoop; then he began barking like a dog, and I knew that he was trying to scare the bear with strange noises.

"I was so afraid for my friend that I sneaked back toward the scrub-oaks. I still clung to the long burden pole. Having something in my hands made me feel a little safer. Manuk was in the topmost limb of the scrubby little tree. He was dodging the blows of the bear as well as he could, and the branch was nearly breaking. I saw blood spattering down through the foliage.

"I was too afraid for my friend to leave him and to afraid for myself to stir or make a sound. Then Manuk saw me.

"'Run! Run!' he cried. 'Run and tell my people that old Scar-Flank has killed me!'

"A great warm feeling for my friend came over me then, and blindly knowing what I did, I picked up a jagged flake of rock, ran a little nearer to old Scar-Flank, and threw it against his back. But the blow came [illegible] and tried all the harder to get at him. I picked up another chunk of rock and threw it with all my strength. It caught him on the head and brought him round, charging.

"The terrible eyes of the grizzly scared me out of my senses, and I ran like a rabbit across the slide. Behind me I heard the stone flakes knocking together, and knew that old Scar-Flank was coming.

"A bear runs poorly along places that are sidling. I knew it, but who could run before old Scar-Flank? Some said he could walk on the water and jump canons. I ran on in blind terror; then, half-way across the slide, I glanced round. Old Scar-Flank was floundering and puffing along behind, half up to his knees in the shifting clutter of broken rock, wallowing frantically as a loosened mass from above swept him half off his feet. I was running lightly, and something inside of me said that Scar-Flank was nothing but a common, scrawny old grizzly.

"When I got across the slide I dared to stop and hurl a rock and a hard word at him. My word was that any gopher could beat him running. Then, trailing my pole from one hand, I ran straight down the slope.

"The stream at the River's Fang was far too wide for ordinary jumping; rough cliffs blocked the path up the river; the down-stream trail was so choked with brush that a man could hardly find a runway. But I knew all the time what I was doing.

"The moment the bear got across the slide, I was sorry that I had stopped to abuse him, for he threw himself down hill in a way that fairly ate up the distance between us. He was close in behind when I reached the sloping stone platform, and I was running like a deer before dogs to escape him.

"Right in front of me the freshet smoked through the crack-like channel, filling it to the brim and making a sound like the hissing of snakes; from below came the growling and gnawing of the waterfalls and rapids. I ran straight across the stone platform without pausing, jerked my long pole to the front, jabbed its end down on the tip of the fang, and gave a strong leap forward. The pole bore me up and over in an arch, and set me down lightly on the other side of the swishing stream. Spinning round on my heel, I faced the bear with my pole held like a lance.

"Old Scar-Flank pulled up at the brink of the stream, nearly tearing off his toenails to keep from going headlong into the water. I feared that he would turn back to kill Manuk; and I reached for stones. I wagged my head; I stuck out my tongue; I jeered him in Modoc and in Pitt River. But he was ripped [illegible] and his teeth and his wounds were so terrible that my legs strove to take me back into the brush. But I held my ground, thrusting out my pole so that the bear must leap against it.

"Then all of a sudden he whirled about and started back for the scrub-oaks. Again filled with concern for Manuk, I sprang for stones, and by a lucky throw landed one on the back of his head. This brought him back to the valley in a fine rage. For a while I kept up a stream of stones and hard words flying across the stream, and held the bear crouching at the edge of the water. Then, just as I was running short of rocks he began looking over his shoulder toward the scrub oaks. I was desperate then. I stepped to the edge of the stream, jabbed the end of my long pole down on the crown of the River's Fang, threw myself out over the water, and took a standing position on the point of stone that parted the hissing current.

"From there I could reach the bear with my pole, and I gave him a jab in the ribs. This made the grizzly more furious than he had been at any time before. He snapped at the pole, then struck it such a blow with his paw that I was nearly thrown into the water. This made me more cautious. Instead of trying to prod the bear, I now took to rapping the backs of his paws as he raised them to strike at the stick. This made him froth with rage. He struck out with blows that would have felled a sapling, and scoured his throat and racked his lungs with his snarling and growling.

"I saw now that the bear would jump; it was only a matter of time till his rage would make him forget his fear of the hissing current. I paused a moment, dropped the butt of my pole into a niche in the rock between my feet, and leaned the tip toward the bear to get the measure.

"I was as wary as a wildcat crouched for springing when I took up my stick and again began to bait the bear. I drove swift, hard blows at his paws, alertly watching his terrible, blazing eyes.

"All of a sudden I yelled and made a hideous face at him, reached through his guard and rapped him on the nose, then crouched, dropped the butt of the pole into its socket and leaned the tip over just as the bear made a furious lunge straight for me. The tough oak pole bent and snapped, but it was enough to throw the grizzly off his balance.

"He whirled half about, and clutched wildly at the stone platform, but the water caught him and whisked him like a straw off down the slot to the rapids. They found his carcass a few days later caught on a snag below the mouth of the canon.

"Manuk came limping down to the stone platform after a while, and found me standing on my tiny island, holding half of the broken pole in my hand. He was able to hobble off after help, and before night fell the men of the rancherias came up the river in a body and took me off my rock.

"That ended my slavery days. Manuk set me free, and for many years we hunted together, and went side by side to the wars."—Youth's Companion.

Industrial Education Necessary For Our Children

With regard to the more advanced technical schools for workers already engaged in some form of industry, it was the conclusion of the committee that such schools must necessarily take the character either of the industrial improvement school or of the actual trade school. The industrial improvement school, which would be carried on for the benefit of the actual worker, would probably continue to be, as it is now, an evening school, in which would be taught the fundamental sciences upon which a trade rests, together with such technical information as could be given in a physical, chemical, or mechanical laboratory. For example, men who are employed by an electric railway, either as motormen, as electricians, or as linemen, could learn in such a school the fundamental theory of electricity, and the best methods of insulation, of electrical measurements and of the transformation of energy. All of these principles would be illustrated for them in the electrical laboratory, where it would be possible for ambitious workmen to acquire a foundation of knowledge which would enable them to become in time foremen, managers, or possibly inventors. A number of such schools are already in existence, and although they appeal only to men who have more than the usual amount of ambition or energy, the preliminary industrial training suggested for grammar-school pupils would inevitably tend to increase the number of industrial improvement schools. The pure trade school, of course, undertakes to teach not only the fundamental processes of a trade, but also their technical application. Naturally, such schools emphasize continuous practice in the workshop, seeking to reproduce, as nearly as possible, the conditions of actual work, so that students may be brought up to a point of expertness as close as possible to that of the skilled journeyman.—From "Our Need for Industrial Education," in The Craftsman.

Cost Per Playground.

The march of the 4000 school children of Stockton to emphasize the need of children's playgrounds ought to have its intended effect in awakening public interest there in the subject. A good many unthinking persons probably look on the playground movement as a sort of "frill" of modern education. It is not that at all, but only a tardy recognition of the rights of the child to a place for outdoor recreation as a means to health.—San Francisco Chronicle.

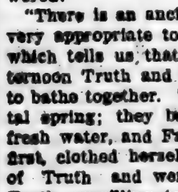
Why Truth Goes Naked.

Secretary Meyer, at a Newport luncheon, answered an interesting question.



"Why," a naval cadet asked, "do we always speak of the 'naked truth?'"

Secretary Meyer smiled and answered:

"There is an ancient fable, and one very appropriate to this hot weather, which tells us that on a summer afternoon Truth and Falsehood set out to bathe together. They found a crystal spring; they bathed in the cool, fresh water, and Falsehood, emerging first, clothed herself in the garments of Truth and went her way. But Truth, unwilling to put on the garb of Falsehood, departed naked. And to this day Falsehood wears Truth's fair, white robes, so that many persons mistake her for Truth's very self, but poor truth still goes naked."—Washington Star.

PANIC FOLLOWS EXPLOSION ON STEAMER

Wild Scenes Occur Among Nine Hundred Passengers on Ship.

FIRE ADDS TO HORROR

Men Right With Women in Mad Rush for Life Boats—One Child Loses Its Life.

Dover, England—A terrific explosion occurred on the morning of April 7 on the British steamer Cairnrona off Gungeness, which wrecked the women's quarters, killing one child and injuring a number of women and children. The steamer caught fire and a panic ensued in which men fought for the possession of the boats and had to be beaten back by the crew to allow the women to be taken off first. In all 20 were seriously injured and not less than 50 were slightly injured by the explosion and in the panic that followed it.

The Cairnrona sailed from London for Portland, Me. She carried 900 passengers, for the most part emigrants and a general cargo. By great good luck the steamers Upland and Kanawha were close at hand when the Cairnrona caught fire. They stood by and took off several hundred passengers and landed them here.

Little One Is Killed.

Several of the first-class passengers and American cattlemen gave thrilling details of the accident. A number of women with children in their arms were sitting on a hatch when suddenly a violent explosion hurled them to all parts of the deck. Some of them were shockingly injured and one child was killed. The hatch was blown to fragments.

A terrible panic ensued, the emigrants, mostly Russians, running up and down, screaming and wringing their hands. Their terror was increased by the smoke which poured from the burning hold. The captain and officers made ineffectual efforts to calm them, and then signals of distress were sent up. In the meantime another explosion occurred in the engine room, injuring several of the engineers. The Kanawha and Upland steamed up quickly, and the captain decided to transfer all the passengers. This was accompanied by scandalous scenes. Scores of men tried to rush the boats, and many of them fought with the women, tearing and dragging them aside and even trampling them under foot.

The crew battled valiantly against the panic stricken emigrants, using fists and feet and any weapon they could find. Not a few of the frantic mob of men were felled to the deck before the hysterical, fainting women and children could be gotten into the boats. In the stempede four persons fell or were pushed into the sea and were rescued with difficulty.

Royalty Goes to Aid.

The Kanawha and Upland reached Dover with the rescued passengers late in the afternoon and the scenes at the landing were piteous. Exhausted by cold and exposure, many of them half famished and others suffering from injuries, they were brought ashore and supplied with food, clothing and medical attendance. Admiral Prince Louis of Battenburg and the princess with the British naval officers, lending assistance. The naval surgeons attended the wounded, many of whom were removed in ambulances to the hospital. The prince and princess of Battenburg had been giving a dinner party, but they broke it up and came ashore with their guests to attend to the wants of the refugees.

BANKERS INDICTED

Men Who Furnished Funds to Buy Councilmen's Vote.

Pittsburg—Frank N. Hoffstot, of the Pressed Steel Car Company, and president of the German National bank, of Allegheny, was indicted on charges of conspiracy and bribery in connection with the payment of $52,500 to former Councilman Charles Stewart for councilmanic influence in the selection of certain city depositories.

Emil Winter, president of the Workingman's Savings and Trust Company, North Side, pleaded nolo contendere to the charge of bribery in connection with the payment of $20,000 to former Councilman Morris Einstein to have the bank selected as a city depository.

James M. Anderson, bookkeeper for the Workingman's Savings and Trust Company and confidential man to President Winter, pleaded nolo contendere to the charge of mutilating a book of the bank for the purpose of preventing disclosure of the $20,000 payment.

A presentment came from the grand jury naming James W. Friend and Frank N. Hoffstot as the men who negotiated with Charles Stewart to have the Farmers Deposit National, Second National and German National bank of the North Side selected as city depositories, and the men who paid over the $52,500 bribery fund in New York.

Before becoming district attorney, William A. Blakeley was requested to hold the bribery fund until the ordinance passed councils, according to the presentment. He refused and warned the plotters.

SPANISH WAR CLAIMS CUT

Commission Finishes Its Work and Makes Awards of Over $1,000,000.

Washington, D. C.—The work of the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, which body for more than nine years has been engaged in adjudicating the claims of American citizens growing out of the Spanish War, is now about completed. All the cases have been disposed of and the commissioners are now engaged in preparing their final report and writing opinions in the most important cases. The extent of their work is shown by the fact that the claims filed before the commission aggregated $61,612,077.78 and the awards amounted to $1,330,877.74.

The treaty between the United States and Spain, dated December 10, 1898, or sometimes called the Treaty of Paris, provided that Spain should relinquish all claims of sovereignty over the title of Cuba, and ceded to the United States the Island of Puerto Rico and other islands under Spanish sovereignty in the West Indies, and the Island of Guam. Spain also ceded to the United States the Philippine Islands for a consideration of $20,000,000. In article seven of the treaty the United States and Spain mutually relinquished all claims for indemnity, national and individual, of every kind, of their government or of its citizens or subjects, against the other government of the late insurrection in Cuba and prior to the exchange of ratifications of the present treaty, including all claims for indemnity for the cost of the war. The United States agreed to adjudicate and settle the claims of its citizens against Spain, reliquished in this article.

Created a Commission.

In accordance with the terms of the treaty Congress in 1901 passed an act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, defining its powers. President McKinley accordingly, in March, 1901, appointed the following as members of the commission:

William E. Chandler, of New Hampshire; G. J. Diekema, of Michigan; J. P. Wood, of Ohio; W. A. Maury, of the District of Columbia, and W. L. Chambers, of Alabama. In 1907 G. J. Dickema was elected to Congress and resigned his place as commissioner. In May Harry K. Daugherty of Mercer county, Pennsylvania, was appointed as his successor.

ROOSEVELT CRITICIZED

Maximilian Harden Makes Vitriolic Onslaught on Colonel Roosevelt's European Trip.

Berlin—Under the title of "Theodore the Great," Maximilian Harden in the Zukunft makes an "onslaught" on Colonel Roosevelt, who, he says has made more noise than the whole 25 Presidents of the United States who preceded him put together. Yet according to Harden, he has never achieved anything except to plunge his country into a crisis, from the consequences of which it has not as yet recovered.

Germany, Harden says, has not reason to fete this captain of the Rough Riders, as a hero or a trusty friend on account of some trivial attentions, because it is he who humiliated Germany by causing the kaiser to accept the French proposals for the policing of Morocco. Roosevelt, says Harden, is making a tour of bluff through Europe.

The people and press of Genoa have manifested the most intense interest in the movements of Colonel Roosevelt.

FIGHT BATTLE WITH BOLD BANK ROBBERS

TWO DESPERADOES ESCAPE

Bandits Hold Up Thirty Citizens at Lane, S. D., and Continue Work to Rob a Bank.

Chicago—Five masked men, after binding the night marshal and the pumping station engineer, blew open the safe of the Bank of Coal City, Ill., wrecked the building and escaped with more than $5,000 in money and stamps. The robbers fled on a passing freight train.

A telephone alarm was sent along the Santa Fe Railroad and at the next station, Mazon, Ill., the night marshal, a dentist, Dr. D. H. Watts, and a constable, aroused by the call, fought a pitched battle with the bandits. The dentist with his shotgun wounded three.

The three wounded bandits were captured by Sheriff Steele of Grundy county, and a posse at Marengo after a thrilling chase in automobiles. The wounded bandits were in a baggage car. Two were shot in the legs and one in the head.

The other two robbers with the money escaped at Mazon.

Posses were immediately formed and a hunt began for the two missing robbers. The postoffice officials in Chicago also were notified and they sent heavily armed inspectors by the first train to join in the hunt, as $2,100 in stamps, which had been deposited by the postmaster, had been taken.

The five masked men appeared in Coal City, which is 20 miles southeast of Joliet, early in the morning. They waited in the shadow of the Santa Fe Station until Night Marshall Getto appeared on his hourly rounds. They pounced on his, bound and gagged him and threw him into the waiting room of the station. Following the procedure adopted by the other bandits in recent Illinois bank robberies they went to the town pumping station and bound the engineer, Washington Frye. They then took tools from the station with which to pry open the bank doors.

In a few minutes the entire town was aroused by an explosion. Townsmen running to the bank found the front and rear of the building blown out and furniture scattered for more than 100 feet.

The safe was cracked and overturned.

Among the first to arrive was E. D. Scott, owner of the bank, who said that he had left $3,000 in cash in the safe when he closed at night.

Mitchell, S. D.—After vainly blasting at the vault door of the Citizens State Bank of Lane, near here, three times, meanwhile holding up 30 aroused citizens, four masked desperadoes stole the rig and horse of a Methodist minister nearby and eluded all pursuers.

The first blast, about 2:30 a. m., awakened guests of the Lane Hotel, who appeared in night robes on the dimly lighted streets to face the leveled rifle muzzles of the entire gang of raiders. The guests scurried back into the hotel, aroused the rest of its sleeping inmates and the balance of the small town by telephone.

The desperadoes boldly continued their work for about an hour, blowing two more blasts. Failing in this and evidently running out of explosives, they vanished and made their way in the rig toward Virgil, where they are believed to have boarded a train.

LEGISLATOR ALLEGES BRIBERY

Accusation Is Made at Hearing Against Employe of the House—Author Contradicted.

Columbus, Ohio — Representative Howard W. Pears of Allen county testified before the house bribery investigating committee that Simon Cronin of Akron, telephone attendant in the house for 10 years, had offered him $100 to support the Elson Telephone merber bill, which passed the house a month ago, Cronin, when informed of Pears' testimony, denied the charge.

Representative Frank Woods of Medina county testified that Representative Meyer Geloid of Lucas county, during a conversation, had given the impression that efforts had been made to bribe him to support the bill. Representative Fred Morris of Cuyahoga county, he testified, told him that $50 was offered him to vote against reconsideration of the Elson measure. Woods declared he advised these men if they couldn't prove that the offers had been made to say nothing about the alleged offers.

The testimony of Representative A. W. Elson of Tuscarawas county, author of the measure, that no one had assisted him in its preparation was contradicted by his seatmate, Representative W. T. Smith of Marion county, who said Elson had told him Cyrus Huling, a Columbus attorney, had given him aid in drawing the bill. Huling for several years was active in independent telephone interests.

BLAMES CRIME ON INJURY

Young Man Says Blow on Head Made Him Go Wrong.

Springfield, Mass. — Laying his crimes to love of excitement and a mania for stealing, caused by an injury to his head in boyhood, Bertram Gage Spencer broke down under 24 hours of merciless grilling and confessed that he was the masked burglar who had terrorized Springfield for two years and had reached the climax of his wild career by murdering Miss Martha B. Blackstone.

In his amazing confession, although many of the details are being withheld until the trial, Spencer makes it clear that associated with his overpowering desire to steal was an intense love of excitement. The accounts of his daring crimes fascinated him and fostered his egotism.

An element approaching the romantic entered into Spencer's crimes, for coupled with his other motives was a desire to secure money wherewith to purchase elaborate furnishings for his home in West Springfield, thus providing a handsome setting for his young and pretty wife, for whom he bore a strong affection.

While admitting the killing of Miss Blackstone, Spencer said he did not intend to shoot her, but had lost control of himself when she repeatedly shrieked. Even then, he asserted, he had fired only to frighten her and the other three women who confronted him in Dow house.

Spencer told the police that he had experienced no qualms of conscience as a result of his crimes.

In his confession, Spencer revealed a career of almost lifelong crime. Following a blow on the head while he was a small boy in Lebanon, Conn., he said he began to steal. At the age of nine, he rifled the pockets of his school mates and robbed his parents of small sums. Later, while still a youth, he held up young women on the highways, and entered houses. He spent some time on a naval training ship, and then traveled about the country, his thefts covering a wide range of territory.

BILL TO REIMBURSE STATE

Washington—After a lively spat with Senator Page of Vermont, Senator Oliver obtained the passage through the senate of his bill to reimburse the state of Pennsylvania $41,390.71, which was paid out in 1863 in the form of interest on money borrowed for the raising and equipment of troops put in the field at the call of President Lincoln during the Gettysburg campaign.

Senator Page vigorously opposed the bill on the ground that his own state of Vermont had never claimed or been allowed interest on the money it spent in raising troops for the defense of the Union. It had pocketed the loss, which he said amounted to over $100,000, and he thought it very bad policy for congress nearly 50 years after the close of the war to allow this claim of Pennsylvania.

Senator Oliver tried to make the Vermont senator see that the state of Pennsylvania was not asking that it be allowed interest on money it had taken out of its own treasury for putting troops in the field, but that what it asked was that it be reimbursed for money it had actually paid as interest on a loan made by Philadelphia bankers. The Vermont senator declined to see any difference and served notice that if the Oliver bill was passed he would bring in a bill to repay Vermont the interest on the money it had spent in raising troops.

After the adoption of an amendment offered by Senator Smoot disallowing the expenses incurred by Pennsylvania in connection with the raising of the loan, the Oliver bill was passed. The sum disallowed by the Smoot amendment was only $52.

Mrs. Neil said that she introduced Bilbo to Delaney and that the latter told her to "feel out the weak legislators," and see whether they could be "reached."

TWO BANKERS KILLED IN FIGHT WITH ROBBERS

Two Others Injured while Attempting to Stop Robbers.

SHOT DOWN IN COLD BLOOD

Revolver Fight Txtends Into Street, Where Brave Bank Manager Lost His Life.

Pittsburg—Four desperadoes robbed the Victor Bank, in the most public square of Shoenville, at 9 o'clock at night. They killed two of the bank's officials, the general manager and one of the owners, who officiated as cashier. The vault and money desks were "cleaned" and the bandits escaped, wounding one man in a running fight on the street.

The Dead.

Ignats Schwartz, aged 28, part owner and cashier of the bank; shot through the brain and died an hour later.

Samuel Friedman, aged 28, general manager; shot through the head, breast, right shoulder and hand; instantly killed.

The Wounded.

Robert King of St. Louis, who attempted to capture the robbers; shot through the groin; condition serious.

A number of persons had narrow escapes, bullets whistling past their heads as the robbers, with automatic guns spurting fire, carefully made their escape backing off into the darkness and the shelter of the Lake Erie railroad tracks and never losing control of the situation for an instant.

The amount of money stolen has not yet been calculated. The vault, holding the deposits of workmen of the Pressed Steel Car Company, stood wide open. Bills were scattered around and several were torn in two. Foreign money was thrown to one side.

Friedman, the general manager, lost his life while battling to recover the bank's property and capture the robbers. He ran from the bank, firing at them with a revolver. They turned upon and the sharp cracks of their automatic guns sounded his death. Friedman, riddled, dropped in the middle of the car tracks on George street. He clutched two $5 bills in his hand, but whether he tore them from one of the robbers in a hand-to-hand fight, or held them when the battle began will probably never be known.

Blakeley.

Einstein is the man whom the grand jury in a recent presentment specifically charged with having received $20,000 from the Workingman's Savings Bank and Trust Company of Allegheny for distribution among the civic solons that their votes might be cast in favor of selecting that institution as one of the six city depositories.

Einstein gave the whole story of how the money was solicited and obtained. He gave the names of the men with whom he negotiated and the men who paid him the money.

Mr. Hays was in the Press office the other day discussing political matters with the editor, and during the conversation he expressed the utmost confidence in his nomination for Senator in the coming primary election. He had in his possession a letter from one of the wheel-horse Democrats of the county, in which it was stated that he (Hays) would carry his particular section of the county unanimously. This, of course, is good news to the many friends Mr. Hays has throughout the county.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. W. H. Sarter has returned from a pleasant visit to relatives in Montgomery.

Dr. A. J. L. Dennis of Verbena was a visitor to the city last Friday.

Mrs. W. W. Duncan and children have returned to their home in Prattville, after a most pleasant visit to the mother of the former, Mrs. G. L. Phillips.

Observant readers will notice the advertisement of Headley & Company in this issue of the Press. This house keeps the very best of everything carried by an up-to-date mercantile establishment.

Mr. Carter, the Furniture Man, is making preparations to leave Clanton. He is selling out his entire stock regardles of cost. It's your best opportunity to secure furniture and house furnishings at prices that will astound you. He gives piano contest certificate with every cash purchase. tf

Mrs. S. G. Corser, of Marbury, was in town on Monday last, having some dental work done. While here the Press made arrangements with this most estimable lady to furnish us with the news of that thriving little town. Mrs. Corser is a most talented lady, and the Press congratulates itself on having been so fortunate in securing her as our correspondent.

Carter, the Furniture Man, is moving things rapidly because he is selling at COST. If you have need of anything in his line you had best call while you have an opportunity to make selections. tf

Misses Eula Roper, Bessie Durbin and Ada Williams have been appointed as a committee from Mt. Nebo Church to raise the pro-rata assessment levied against that church for the installation of the telephone in the home of the pastor of Clanton circuit. No better selection could have been made.

The Press has about perfected arrangements to secure the news from every section of the county. No neighborhood has been overlooked. If you want the news, all the news, bright, crisp news, subscribe for the Press. We propose to give it to you in readable form each week, furnished by correspondents who know an article of news when they see it.

Mr. E. M. Pinckard returned on Friday last from a pleasant visit to New Orleans, which was the Mecca for the Shriners. During his visit to the Crescent City Mr. Pinckard had a most enjoyable time.

Remember that Carter, the Furniture Man, is selling out at cost, preparatory to moving to Prattville. If you need anything in his line now is the time to secure it at absolute cost. He gives piano contest tickets, too. tf

Mr. Renfro Mullins and wife and Miss Nell Mullins, who also visited New Orleans during the Shriners' convocation, returned to their homes on last Friday. To say that they enjoyed the trip thoroughly would but be expressing it mildly. Al who attended the session of the Shriners' convention are loud in their praises of the hospitality extended the visitors by the city of New Orleans.

Mr. John Stanfield had such a good time in New Orleans that he could not tear himself away with the Clanton crowd who attended the convention, but extended his visit as long as possible, returning Saturday. John has a habit of having a good time wherever he goes, and this trip was no exception to the general rule.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Billingsley will regret to learn of the death of the latter, which occurred on last Friday at the family residence on Route 3. Mrs. Billingsley, some days ago contracted slow fever. After a lingering illness she passed away, leaving to mourn her loss eight children and a devoted husband. She was buried at Shiloh Church on Friday afternoon. To the bereaved family their host of friends extend sincere sympathy.

The Forest Lumber Company is moving its office fixtures from the Mullins building to the new offices of the company near their saw and planing mill plant.

Is it worth anything to you to know that your hat is correct. If so, go to Miss Minnie Muse and you can feal assured that everything is as it should be.

Mr. Wylie Foshee of Thorsby dropped into the Press office last Tuesday and had us put his name upon our subscription list. Thus they come, from every section of the county. We are receiving subscriptions and words of commendation and encouragement.

Mr. R. P. Bazemore, better known as Deacon Brown, is in the city handshaking with his numerous friends.

Clanton now has a first-class photographer—Mr. Scott, who was in Birmingham for twelve years. He has opened a gallery in the Reynolds building. For artistic work call on him. tf

Baker to Miss Lee Miller, Lee Vickers to Miss Bertha Wilkerson, James Harris to Miss Mary Estelle Smith.

Judge L. H. M. Baker and Miss Lee Miller, and almost immediately after was called to the home of Mr. A. A. Ayers, where he joined in wedlock the lives of Mr. Lee Vickers, a popular candidate for Sheriff, and Miss Bertha Wilkerson.

On Monday last at the court house a very pretty wedding ceremony was performed by Chief Clerk Marion D. Foshee, of the Probate Judge's office, which joined together for all time the lives of Mr. James Harris and Miss Mary Estelle Smith.

The following licenses were issued to colored people: A. J. Joiner to Anna Dunnigan, Lee Kendrick to Emma Motley.

Mr. Brannon, a postoffice inspector, dropped in on Postmaster Dudley last Tuesday morning and made an investigation of his office. Mr. Brannon found everything in the Clanton office to be in good shape. In the afternoon he, accompanied by Postmaster Dudley, made a short trip into the country on business connected with the postoffice department.

Judge Pearson was in town last Tuesday. This good man came down to draw the juries for the incoming term of the circuit court; a list of those drawn under the new jury law will be found in another column of this paper.

Strange isn't it, that with all the interest manifested in the piano contest none seem to think of cutting the coupons out of the Press? In each copy of the paper is a coupon good for two votes. These count just as if they were the regulation tickets given out by the Press and the merchants.

We call attention to the advertisement of Mr. W. D. Sylvester in this issue of the Press. Mr. Sylvester carries a most complete line of [illegible] and [illegible] piano contest tickets with every purchase.

Mrs. J. H. Sheppard entertained the Domino club at her elegant home on last Wednesday afternoon. During the evening delightful refreshments were served.

Editor Press:

We have a most excellent school at this place, with Professor Bean as teacher. He has proven himself to be a great benefactor in the upbuilding of this community.

On next Friday Prof. Howard Roper and wife will leave for Jacksonville, where they will attend school during the normal term for teachers.

Things political are warming up in this section; in fact, the political question seems to be the important one in this community just now, and the candidates are getting busy. We hope they will all be successful.

With best wishes for the Press, I shall close. STUDENT.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Col. Emmet O'Neal will address the voters of Chilton county on Tuesday, the 26th of April, at 10 a. m. at the court house in Clanton. Everybody invited to hear this distinguished Alabamian on this occasion.

The Press is in receipt of a communication from Fairview stating that the young people of that neighborhood would have a debate on next Saturday night, at which time the question, "Resolved, That the Literary Teacher Has the Greatest of All Professions," was to have been discussed, and in which Messrs. W. T. Bean and J. H. Taylor were to have represented the affirmative side and Messrs. D. C. Culp and R. L. Popwell were to champion the negative side, but since its receipt word has been received announcing that though the young people are exceedingly anxious to re-establish their debating society they have decided to give the Democratic Club the right of way on Saturday night next; hence the debate is postponed to another date, to be announced later.

By some oversight the Press neglected last week to make mention of a most elegant noonday luncheon given by that inimitable hostess, Mrs. Thomas A. Curry, in honor of Mr. Robert H. Mangum, who came to deliver an addres to the Democratic voters of Chilton in the interest of Hon. H. S. D. Mallory. The mere mention of the fact that Mrs. Curry acted as hostess is sufficient guarantee that it was a most delightful affair. There were present a bevy of as pretty young girls as live in Chilton county, or any other county as for that matter, and all during the most sumptuous dinner jests and laughter reigned supreme.

Those present were: Misses Nell Mullins, Ada Stanley, Sallie Robinson and Knolton Marquis; Messrs. Robert H. Mangum, W. M. Adams and F. M. Wood. These, with the host and hostess and little Misses Mary and Roberta Curry, constituted a most happy crowd, and right royally were those fortunate enough to be present entertained by this gracious woman.

The second quarterly conference of the Clanton circuit was held on last Sunday at Mt. Nebo Church. Rev. J. B. Cumming, presiding elder of the Prattville district, came down on Saturday morning, and in company with Rev. R. J. Mills started out to the meeting, which was to have been held on Saturday, but on account of the terrific rain storm they were unable to reach the church in time for the Saturday meeting. As it was necessary that the business of the conference should receive attention a short meeting was held on Sunday afternoon. During the meeting, after the reports from the several churches had been received, a motion was made that a committee be appointed whose duty it should be to devise ways and means for installing a telephone in the home of the pastor. On this committee was appointed Messrs. P. D. Wilson, J. D. Sims and J. C. Jones. This is a most laudable move and should receive the hearty endorsement and support of every member of the church.

The Press has had quite a number of its good friends from the country to visit our offices during the past few days. We are always glad to see our friends. The latch string hangs on the outside and a warm welcome awaits them within.

We have desk room for our friends who wish to do any writing while in town, and will be glad to furnish them with stationery free of all cost.

There is ample room in the Press offices to accommodate all our friends, and those having bundles or other packages which they wish to leave with us while they are shopping will have them cared for just as if they were our own. Come whenever you are in town; we are here to serve you and will be pleased to see you any time.

On last Saturday Mr. M. L. Milford made several purchases from the merchants of Clanton, and in the afternoon started on his way home, having put his purchases, as he thought, on his wagon. After having gone some little distance from the business section of town he discovered that one or two of the packages were missing, and, leaving his wagon, returned to secure them. While away from the wagon the packages that he had in the wagon were taken. Later on in the day a young negro boy about town, Son Edwin by name, called at the home of Mr. Harvey Chandler and informed his wife that Mr. Chandler had instructed him to call for a pair of shoes. Mrs. Chandler thinking that the negro was telling the truth turned over to him a pair of Mr. Chandler's shoes. When Mr. Chandler went home the matter was mentioned in a casual way, and he informed his wife that he had not sent any one to his house for shoes or for any other package. This proved to be Son Erwin's undoinng. In looking for the boy with the shoes the thief who had taken Mr. Milford's packages was discovered. Son was hauled up before the Mayor and an investigation of his case had. At the termination of the case the young miscreant was fined $30 and sentenced to sixty days' service on the streets of the town.

The James H. Clanton Chapter U. D. C. met at the home of Mrs. N. S. Johnson on last Thursday afternoon for the purpose of reorganizing. Quite an enthusaistic meeting was held, and each member takes hold with renewed vigor to accomplish much good for this patriotic cause. A delightful feature of the meeting was the presence of Mrs. F. H. Elmore, of Montgomery, who gave a very instructive and entertaining talk along the line of work accomplished by the U. D. C. Her words were very inspiring, and the chapter feels very much indebted to her for her able assistance. Officers were elected to serve for one year. They are:

Mr. T. E. Williams, who has been teaching this year at Evergreen school, was a pleasant visitor this week to the Press offices. He tells us that his school closed on last Friday night the most successful year of its history. The closing exercises consisted principally of a debate, in which several of the young people took part, all of whom acquitted themselves most creditably.

The question discused was: "Resolved, That Alabama Should Have a System of Free and Compulsory Education."

Those taking part in the debate were: Affirmative, Miss Hilda May Johnson, Miss Agnes Foster and Mr. A. F. Duffey; negative, Miss Bettie Marsh Gardner, Miss Minnie Moore and Mr. J. F. Williams. The judges were: Misses Neelie Johnson and Della Williams and Mr. W. T. Johnson. After a most spirited debate the question was submitted to the judges for decision, and after some discussion they decided that while both sides had presented their respective views in a most admirable manner, the affirmative was, by reason of the stronger arguments, entitled to the decision.

Fifty pupils were enrolled at this school during the session. A summer school will be opened at Evergreen [illegible] the near future, and [illegible] to have a full [illegible]

Work of Swedish Women.

Many enthusiastic and serious-minded women are enlisted in temperance work in Sweden. Among them is Mrs. Vendia Hollstrand, of Upsala, who has achieved a great work in the organization of the Swedish white ribbonegs. The work taken up by the Swedish women is of a most practical nature. Their plan of establishing temperance restaurants for all classes leads the world. No other country has made such a success. Royal personages and others of high social rank indorse the movement by dedicating the temperance restaurants and giving them their patronage.—Philadelphia Record.

Children Define Idea of Lady.

The time-honored task of defining a "lady" was submitted the other day to a score of little girls in one of the public schools in this city and brought out the usual variety of answers in which the possession of wealth stood out as an almost indispensable condition in the juvenile minds. It is noticeable, however, that kindness and "good manners" are rated equally highly. "A lady is rich and very kind to the servants," one description ran, and it was added "The servants have to be clean and tidy in work as well as the ladies." One of the more ambitious efforts at a description ran: "A lady is a person who has all her manners and who has a little money with which to help the poor. She generally is busy about something, and lives in a large house with a lawn in front." "Ladies should have good manners," wrote another child, "and they ought to send a lot of presents to poor people because they have nothing else to do." It is hard to realize the cynicism was unconscious in: "A lady is a woman with a lot of money, but she ought to know her manners as well."—New York Press.

Boston to Form New Club.

A group of influential Boston women again are busily at work on the organization of a woman's club in the Hub, to be founded and conducted on much the same lines as the Colony Club in this city. The project was mooted last year, and the first response was so satisfactory it looked as if success was assured. Most of the leading women in the Back Bay joined the organizing committee, and charter members actually were paying their subscriptions and being enrolled when a hitch arose. It is hinted that one or two social undesirables managed to find a place "on the ground floor," and the exclusive ones at once withdrew. It was decided to return all subscriptions and call the whole scheme off, and these tactics have made it possible for the original organizers to get together once more and start all over again, though this time with a far stricter censorship over those permitted to take part. There is certainly no lack of money to stand in the way of the new club, and tentative negotiations are said to be under way for the purchase of Mrs. John G. Phillips' home in Berkeley street, at present occupied by Governor and Mrs. Draper, and the remodeling of it for the club house.—New York Press.

For the Young Girl.

The pretty girl of the house was in a quandary, and so she went to the household oracle to submit her case. Her difficulty was this: Two men callers had arrived at practically the same hour the night before. She expected only one, but every girl knows there sometimes arrives another who would be more welcome, had he chosen a different time. The first arrival was one to whom this girl is engaged, or would be had he money enough to make a home for her. He undoubtedly thinks that the second arrival is a real rival, and he knows, alas, that the second has money—quite a nice little income. So it stands to reason that he who has only his affection to offer, with no income to back it, frowned through that time until he could take his departure, which was early, and with chilling politeness.

Croesus—the comparative Croesus—had the rest of the evening to himself and a particularly nice time, because the girl was piqued by the chilliness of the farewell of the first, and so made herself unusually agreeable.

But, poor girl (and this is where the article comes in), she spent most of the night in tears because she understood how the impoverished one could be so silly, and never, never would she say she was sorry, and so, of course, he would never come again to see her.

But the oracle shook her head and spoke thus:

"You are wrong. It isn't wrong to have the other man call upon you if you are not trying to flirt with him. If you are you are acting disloyally and unfairly. Your mistake is in saying you will not write the first one to come again. You are not seeing his side. It is not necessarily jealousy or ugliness that sent him away; he was hurt. One of the hardest things a man has to live through is the consciousness, when he honestly loves a girl that he hasn't money enough to make a home for her. Many other men could, and when he sees one of those with the girl he loves he is humiliated by the comparison with himself and a little afraid, too.

"It isn't a disagreeable fear, but a human one, because he cannot know whether the girl really cares for him. And may not the advantages the other man can offer be greater to her than is his love. It is this combination of humiliation and fear that makes many a man sit silent.

"So, as you were hostess, I think you should write first and say you are sorry he was hurt, or ask him to come again soon to see you. Each girl has her own way of mending matters when they have gone wrong, and you will be sweeter and much happier if you make the first advance in this instance. You will know from the way it is met whether the man is ugly or only hurt, and in either case you will have nothing with which to reproach yourself."

"I think I'll write to him now," the girl said softly. And there is the moral for those who need it.—Rosanna Schuyler, in the Washington Star.

Our Cut-out Recipe. Paste in Your Scrap-Book.

Diced Turnips.—Wash and pare the turnips, then cut into inch-square dice. Drop into boiling water and cook tender, adding for each quart of turnips one tablespoonful of sugar. Drain off all water, then return to the fire, adding salt and pepper to season and three tablespoonfuls of cream beaten up with an egg. Shake over the fire until the mxture boils up once, then serve.

Silk batistes, with the most alluring designs in soft colors, are being shown.

A very satisfactory material, and an inexpensive one, for a tailored suit, is Venetian cloth.

The many-ribbed pagoda-topped parasols, as well as the square ones, promise to give a touch of variety.

The Russian blouse is the feature of novelty, and shares popularity of the short jacket, which has taken the place of the long coat.

Whole gowns are being made of baby Irish lace, with one-button, short coats, small revers and long sleeves, open V-shaped in the front.

Rat-tail braid is used on many of the new suits of tailored style, much in the same way that soutache was used in the past, but less prominently.

Rough weaves continue in the ascendant, but a vogue of smooth serges is promised, and some light-colored suits of these materials are in evidence.

Pique in a variety of colors, embroidered and dotted, promises to be popular for children's dresses. These are ornamented with linen or embroidered buttons.

An odd and pretty neck accessory consists of an inch-wide band of colored velvet, joined by a hook and eye at the front, where is a frill in straight jabot effect, made of net or lace, with ends dropping below the lower edge of the velvet, finished with tassels.

Even coats are now belted. Those for street wear have them of the material or of soft patent leather run through mother-of-pearl buckles in front, and those for motoring or driving have heavy stitched belts of tsoheil to the foundation and laced slightly above the natural waistline.

THE OFFENDER.

It is the person, not the thing,
That does the wrong, and he,
Who is behind that which offends,
Must pay the penalty.

The fire that burns the house is not Called into court to stand
And answer for the crime, but he
Who wields the firing brand.

The gun that shoots a man to death
Goes free for what is done,
But he must take the punishment
Who held the deadly gun.

The man behind the corporate crime
Must of himself make good;
The corporation merely does
What he directs it should.

It is the person, not the thing,
Who right from wrong must know,
And he must suffer for the wrong
When Justice strikes the blow.

The Crusade Against the Bow Knot Club.

Re-enforced by societies at the left of her and societies at the right of her, Mrs. Calantha Wegler's prominence in Cedralia, a scraggly-edged town of the Middle West, was undisputed. She acted in the capacity of president or secretary in the Aid, Humane, Relief, Auxiliary, Soldiers' and Sailors' societies, Haymakers' association, Pythian Sisters and Degree of Honor, but like a warrior of old, she sighed for more worlds to conquer.

To widen her field she organized the Ladies' League. The object of this order being reform, Mrs. Wegler had some difficulty in finding opportunity for action. Finally she found her prey in the shape of the Bow Knot Club. It was composed of a few well-mannered young men, whose chief offense seemed to be that they had a clubhouse at Leaf Lake.

The president of this club, Willard Cole, was a wooer of Mrs. Wegler's young daughter, Bertha, but the mother proved adamant in her disapproval of his attentions and would not suffer her prejudices to be overcome.

One summer's day the Ladies' Aid Society, marshaled by Mrs. Wegler, made an expedition to Leaf Lake for a day's outing. When they reached their destination they were approached by the captain of the little steamer, who made a friendly and cheap proposition to take the party about the lake. The members of the society being fair weather sailors and earth and sky seeming reconciled, they decided to make a little junket on the waters. Serenely, complacently and blissfully conconscious of the dangers in their horoscope, the sisters embarked. The constant chug of machinery kept rhythmic time to their chatter and interchange of mutual confidence, while the hissing of the escaping steam raised their voices to shrill crescendo.

"Reddy!"

Reddy quickly turned and in response to the impressive beckoning, hastened to the coal passer. The two talked in low, troubled tones while the society, now at "attention," maintained a breathless silence. Reddy returned to the wheel. The boat gradually slackened her speed and then suddenly and omniously stopped. The man at the boiler looked about him helplessly.

"What is it?" demanded Mrs. Wegler.

"Well," he replied disconsolately, "the fire's low and the coal's give out."

There issued a series of piercing shrieks from the terrified pleasure party.

"What are you going to do?" cried Mrs. Wegler.

"We'll have to wait till someone sees us and tows us in," he answered discouragingly.

Soon Mrs. Wegler spied a sailboat skimming by in the distance. She waved signals of distress, to which it responded by changing its course and coming toward them. As they steered alongside the steamer, she recognized the sailors as Willard Cole and his best friend.

"What is it, Reddy?" asked Willard as the boat came into the wind.

The two held conference. At its close Willard addressed Mrs. Wegler consolingly.

"There is no immediate danger, and we could, of course, tow you in, but I think it would be safer for you to all come aboard the sailboat and let us sail you to the shore. The steamer is old, and when a fire gives out—"

"Oh, yes, oh, please, Mr. Cole, take us in your boat," piped a plaintive chorus of panic-stricken sisters.

Under Cole's directions and Mrs. Wegler's commands, the women were carefully transferred from the steamer to the sailboat.

"You have delivered us from danger!" declared Mrs. Wegler in tragic tones as she rolled her eyes Willardward.

He modestly and depreeatingly disavowed much action in the delivery line.

"It's a pity," he declared, "that you should all be deprived of your pleasure ride. My friend and I had no objective point, and we should be glad to take you around the lake."

The invitation was light and delicate. Mrs. Wegler, in behalf of the society, graciously accepted. It was the intention of the two young men [illegible] members that they had taken the whole society "out." Fate forced them to extend still further hospitality to their foes. Some little feathery clouds scudding by united forces and suddenly produced a light sprinkle, which caused a squall on board.

It chanced that they were nearer the tabooed clubhouse than any other landing place, and Mrs. Wegler promptly suggested that they there await a cessation of the shower. Her companions acquiesced. Fate had given them the coveted opportunity of viewing this abhorred place. The Bow Knot Club, therefore, took unto their hearth and home their reformers. Willard at once proceeded to "make hay." He drew Mrs. Wegler aside for confidential conversation.

"I want to ask you something, Mrs. Wegler," he said, his big blue eyes meeting hers in guile. "Are you really interested in the welfare of our club—in my welfare, individually?"

"Why, of course," she responded, eagerly and glibly. "We want you to be led into the right path, to leave your sinful ways and—"

"But, Mrs. Wegler, they do not want to be led. The time is not ripe yet for them. But it is for me. I want to be domesticated, and you can do it. You know the ideal way to reform a sinner is to be as good as you can to him. If you will open your door wide to me and let me feel the influence of home you might reclaim me, and make me worthy of Bertha."

"I guess you are right, Willard. Anyway, you have saved my life and I owe it to you to give you a chance. You may come and see us to-night."

Willard's heart bounded as lightly as did the little sailboat when it bore to the opposite shore its charge of pacified, tranquil sisters. When they landed, Willard left his prospective mother-in-law long enough to hold parley with the man at the wheel of the little steamer, which was again doing business. He bestowed upon him a grin and sundry cash.—New Orleans Picayune.

CHLOROFORMED THE FISH.

Photographer's Device to Obtain Life-like Pictures.

To the many strange uses that chloroform may be put Dr. Francis Ward, of Ipswich, has added yet another. He chloroforms fish, not for surgical purposes, but in order that he may obtain lifelike photographs of them in their natural environment.

"The greatest difficulty I had to contend with in this fascinating hobby of photographing fish in their natural environment in tanks was the rapid and unexpected movements of the subjects," Dr. Ward explained. "The idea occurred to me that I could make the fish more tractable by means of chloroform. But how to administer the anaesthetic? Eventually I decided upon the process of drawing the water slowly away from the tank while administering the chloroform through another tube.

"The experiment was profoundly interesting. At first the fish became extremely excited, darting madly from one side of the tank to the other. It appeared as though my effort was to be in vain, but before long lassitude overcame them and they rested lazily near the bottom of the tank. Thus I was able to make a protracted photographic exposure with excellent results.

"Continuing my experiments, I found that just before anaesthesia is complete it is possible to take a photograph of fish in an aggressive attitude. Anaesthetics are particularly useful in the photomicroscopy of fish larvae. Once they are removed from the chloroformed water the subjects rapidly recover."—London Daily Mail.

The Doctor's Dilemma.

The question, which seems likely to remain a purely academic one, of whether it would be justifiable for a physician to hasten the death of a person apparently doomed to perish in horrible agony without the doctor's aid has come to the front again. The case supposed is generally that of an engineer pinned under a wrecked train with fire rapidly approaching, and it is asked: Is the physician justified in administering a lethal dose of morphine hypodermically? We see no harm in going a little further into this dilemma. Given the engineer and his parlous position, but suppose the physician to have lost his syringe in the train wreck. Our question is: Is the physician justified in hanging the engineer over the head with a coupling pin?—New York Medical Journal.

Washington's "Hoodoo" Farm.

Is the Gilliham place, about seven miles down the Columbia River from Vancouver, Wash., afflicted with a "hoodoo?" G. N. Miller, who has the farm rented, is beginning to think it is. During the last year, an unidentified man was found hanging to a limb of a tree in an orchard, his face horribly bitten by insects; another corpse was picked up on the river bank, where it had been washed by the waves of the Columbia. Jack Bond, alias Blue Back Jack, was taken from the place and sent to the insane asylum, and two little waifs, eight and twelve years old, who had run away from their home in Vancouver, were picked up in a boat belonging to Bond. The lads, were Artie and Ned Fritz, and they started out in the boat toward the ocean to "see the world." They left home and their parents had made no effort to seek them.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

WHEN WINTER COMES.

When winter comes it brings the plays,
And who's as glad as we?
When sister takes me Saturdays,
What lovely things we see!
Though snow is flying through the air,
And afternoons are gray,
It seems like sunshine everywhere
When riding to the play.

When I am settled in my seat,
As cozy as can be,
The music plays so soft and sweet,
It says, "Come dance to me!"
Though dancing down the slanting aisle
I'd dearly like to go,
I know it's best to wait awhile
And watch the leader's bow.

Until the curtain slides above,
And then the play's begun—
With things to please, and things to love,
And always lots of fun.
If sad times come to make me sigh,
I know they'll soon be past;
Before we bid the play good-by
It all comes right at last.

I hate to leave the pleasant place,
But sister says to me,
"Let's hurry home now, little Grace;
There'll be iced cake for tea."
At home, I tell dear mamma all
About my happy day,
And, tucked in bed beside my doll,
I dream about the play.
—Cecil Cavendish, in St. Nicholas.

GAME OF WHISTLE PUFF.

A small fluffy feather is selected for this game. All of the players sit in a circle. Some one starts the game by throwing the feather as high as possible into the air. The feather must not be allowed to fall to the floor nor to alight on any player. To prevent this any player may blow the feather to keep it from alighting, but he must whistle before every puff which he gives. If the feather should touch any player or any player should not whistle before blowing, the game must stop long enough for the person upon whom the feather alighted or the player who did not whistle before the "puff" to whistle any song selected by the starter of the game.—Washington Star.

HORSE FOILS A THIEF.

Jerry, a big bay horse, owned by Andrew Lauren, a truckman, was responsible for the capture of a daring thief who tried to get away with a $5000 load of silks. Marian Rascas, Jerry's driver, had loaded his truck and left it standing at Broadway and Houston street, New York City, while he went inside for instructions from the shippers. When he came out the horse, truck and load were gone.

Rascas was accustomed to stop at Washington place and Sixth avenue, feed his horse there in harness and run to his home nearby to get his dinner. The old bay jogged eagerly until he reached this corner. Then he dragged his truck to the curb and refused to budge. Here he stood when Rascas ran home to tell his wife of his misfortune, and the driver was startled to find a strange man in his seat belaboring old Jerry with a whip. Two policemen corralled the man.

WILLIAM IV. AND SCHOOLBOYS.

William IV. was very fond of children, and more especially of schoolboys. The King, who often spent Christmas at Brighton, was much interested in two boys' schools not far from the Pavilion, which were nicknamed "The House of Lords" and "The House of Commons" on account of the pupils' social position, and he knew most of the boys and their parents.

With the characteristic kindness which distinguished him, the "Sailor King" would often ask some of the boys to spend the afternoon in the Pavilion gardens and would talk to his young guests and enter into all their enjoyments.

The head master, however, suddenly thought it prudent to send a master with the boys on the next occasion the-y were invited to the Pavilion, an action which greatly displeased the King. Turning to the master he said coldly: "English boys are English gentlemen and, I feel sure, require no supervision when invited to make the acquaintance of their King."

Needless to say the master was not sent with the boys again.—Home Notes.

A DOG'S STRATAGEM.

The following anecdote is related by M. X. Raspail. It is worthy of comparison with the most remarkable of instances of the same kind:

The author one day perceived a doe in full flight before two dogs in the Aigle woods that form a part of the forest of Chantilly. The doe was accompanied by a very young fawn, which appeared quite exhausted and ready to drop. The mother, doubtless, well aware of this, slackened her pace and presently stopped close to some thick bramble bushes. She remained some time there with lowered head as if awaiting the onset of her pursuers.

Suddenly an idea seemed to strike her, and with a butt of the head she tossed her fawn right into the middle of the thicket. Then, first advancing gently as if to make sure it was well hidden, she soon set off by rapid bounds in front of the dogs. The latter, barking close at her heels, she made a sudden bend and thus drew them far away from the spot where this incident occurred.

The howling of the dogs became fainter and fainter, the valiant animal, having doubtless led them two kilometers away into the Chaardiere pond thigh, where the dogs often lose the scent.

SANDY'S MOUSE.

We once had a cat named S[illegible] who was large and yellow, [illegible] a long, bushy tail and silky ears.

He was indeed ornamental, [illegible] more so than useful, for as a [illegible] ser Sandy was not a success.

Yet, in spite of other [illegible] opinions, in his own eyes Sandy [illegible] the terrot of all the mice in [illegible] State. To watch him at work [illegible] treat. At last, discouraged with [illegible] achievements, we bought a trap.

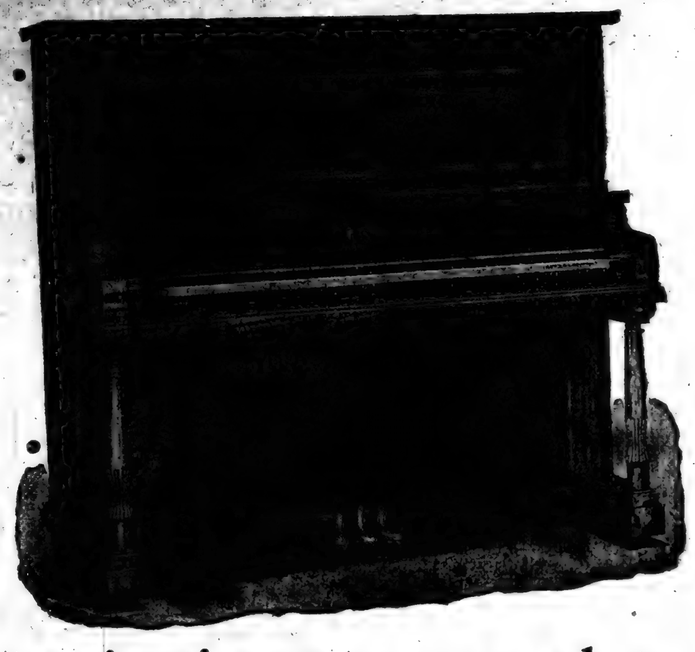
Sandy was delighted with the [illegible] for he found a mouse in it [illegible] every morning, and he took to [illegible] in wait and watching it.

One day, as he waited, he [illegible] gray mouse steal from a hole [illegible] corner and approach the trap. [illegible] er and nearer he crept, but [illegible] getting himself caught he sprang [illegible] trap.

Like a gray streak the mouse [illegible] for his hole, and like a yellow [illegible] Sandy followed him. But, as [illegible] the cat was too late and the [illegible] got safely inside.



But now that he knew where [illegible] mouse lived Sandy determined [illegible] have him, so he sat very quiet [illegible] the mouse hole until the [illegible] should come out of his front [illegible] again. But the mouse did not [illegible] and at last Sandy grew weary [illegible] waiting. He wanted to go [illegible] and he did not want the mouse [illegible] out, so he solved the problem [illegible] crossing his paws over the hole [illegible] and going comfortably to sleep.

Then the artful mouse stole [illegible] his back door, ate the cheese from [illegible] trap and stole gleefully back. [illegible] Sandy still slept on.—Philadelphia Record.

EDITORIAL.

The Pres job office is now busily engaged in printing the tickets to be used in the coming county primary. The time for announcements has long since expired, and no more entries can be made. Every one knows who are the candidates. The same is equally true of the State office candidates. State tickets have been printed and distributed. In a State primary a nomination is equivalent to an election, and we indulge the hope that the same will be true of the country primary this year in old Chilton. Therefore it behooves every Democrat to go to the polls on May 2 and express by ballot his choice. After the primary has been held and the nominees declared it will be too late to say that these nominees are not men of our personal choice. If you have a choice to express make that choice known in the primary; after that get behind the candidates who are nominated and help them on to victory.

Attention is called to the fact that at the primary election a new executive committee is to be chosen. Those men are to have the executive control of the party for the coming months; especially will they be charged with the management of the general election this fall in so far as the Democratic party is concerned. Care should be exercised in the selection of this committee. They should be men who are willing and ready to give of their time and means to further the interests of the party and the party candidates. None but loyal Democrats should have seats in this committee.

The Press is not impugning the loyalty of any man who is now serving as a committeeman; so far as we know they are all good and true Democrats, but upon the shoulders of the new committee must fall the burden of a most strenuous campaign—a campaign such as Chilton has not had in recent years. The committee, therefore, should be men alert, responsive and energetic! Work, untiring and unceasing work, will be their lot for the coming five months. Victory, signal victory, will also be theirs, if the work is faithfully performed.

The Press would again call attention to the fact that a large vote in the primary is a great stimulant to party success in the general election. Men like to see victory perching upon their banners. Those who are wavering between two opinions are often won over to one side or the other by the largeness of the vote cast in the primary. Let every Democrat in Chilton constitute himself a committee of one to see that his neighboring Democrat reaches the polls on May 2; If you know of any who are indifferent get in behind them and spur them to action. We all need stimulating sometimes, and it would be well for us to begin now to look after those who are inclined to be apathetic.

The disgraceful and cowardly attack made upon Editor Mooers, of the Florence Herald, last Thursday by Mayor Walker, chairman of the O'Neal campaign committee in that city, will not tend to strengthen the Florence candidate in the eyes of thinking men. Aside from the cowardliness of the attack, it was altogether uncalled for and tends to strengthen the position taken by Editor Mooers.

It has been charged that Colonel O'Neal bolted the Democratic ticket in 1896 and voted for the mongrel Palmer and Buckner national ticket and also made speeches for that ticket. This was strenuously denied by Colonel O'Neal and his friends, but Editor Mooers, sure of his ground, published the affidavits of a score of Florence gentlemen, who stated that Colonel O'Neal did vote the mongrel ticket. Thereupon Mayor Walker, thinking, perhaps, to defnd his champion from the attacks of the newspaper and to further the interests of his chief, attacked the editor from the rear, striking him with the butt end of a loaded whip staff.

Such assaults do not elevate men in the estimation of their fellows, nor will it tend to strengthen the candidacy of Colonel O'Neal.

The very fact that there is an controversy about the affair at all would, it seems, have a weakening effect upon the candidate from North Alabama.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of Solicitor D. D. Askew for re-election to the office which he now holds.

Mr. Askew has served the circuit for the past three years with complete satisfaction to the attorneys at the bar and the litigants who have had any connection with the courts. That is his services have been satisfactory to all except those whom he has convicted and it is natural that they should have wished for a less able solicitor.

The business of the court under Mr. Askew's administration of the office has been discharged promptly and faithfully. Those having business connected with the courts have found him uniformly courteous and able in the expositions of the law. The duties of a prosecuting attorney are onerous at best, but Mr. Askew, realizing that the duty imposed upon him as solicitor was a duty to the whole people has entered into the discharge of those duties with his whole heart and by his faithfulness to the affairs of the court and his able presentations of those cases which have come under his administration has won the lasting friendship of all with whom he has come in contact.

Should he again be elected to the position which he seeks the affairs of the court will receive that same faithful attention which he has given to them since his inception into office.

In another column of the Press will be found the announcement of Mr. F. Loyd Tate as a candidate for Solicitor of this judicial circuit. Mr. Tate does not seek the nomination merely for the sake of bringing his name before the public, but for the laudable purpose of serving the people of the circuit. It is his earnest desire to assist in the enforcement of the laws of the commonwealth and to make it hard for those who will not obey the laws.

He is a gentleman of legal ability and training, an orator of considerable attainments, and will make the people of this circuit an ideal Solicitor. He is a Democrat to the manor born and seeks the suffrages of the Democrats of Chilton county, believing that he can be of material assistance to them in the enforcement of their just laws and in the punishment of those who have on regard for the law.

There is, perhaps, no office within the gift of the people of a commonwealth more important than their Solicitor; upon his shoulders must rest the drawing of indictments and the prosecution of most of the cases brought before the court for adjudication. This office requires the services of a man learned in the law and who is familiar with the several phases of human nature. Both of these Mr. Tate possesses, and he is therefore peculiarly fitted for the duties of the office which he seeks. The people of Chilton county will make no mistake in casting their votes for this stalwart young Democrat.

This week the Press publishes a card from its good friend, J. S. Catts, who is a candidate for Sheriff. We give the card space gladly, because we know that this faithful servant of the Democracy has been busy with the duties of his office and has been unable to mingle with the voters as freely as he would like to do.

While the Press does not propose to take sides for or against any particular candidate in the race for county offices, we de reserve to ourselves to say words commendatory of those who have been faithful to the Democratic party and who are making an active canvass for office. Every one of the candidates for Sheriff announced in the Press are personal friends of the paper, and we would delight to see them all elected to the position which they seek. Any one of them would make a most excellent officer. The Press hopes that the one will be nominated who is most capable of overcoming the small majority of the Republican vote in the county. We are exceedingly anxious to see Democrats in office, and we sincerely believe that if our people will get together, laying aside all personal preferences and working untiringly for the success o fthe ticket, we will be enabled to elect our candidates to office.

News was flashed to the world at the close of last week that another disgraceful chapter had been written in the history of the Cooper trial at Nashville. As soon as the Supreme Court of Tennessee declared that Duncan B. Cooper had received a fair and impartial trial for the murder of his fellow man—Senator Ned Carmack—on the streets of Nashville last winter, Governor Patterson, exercising the prerogative lodged in the hands of the chief executive, issued a manifesto declaring that Cooper should be a free man and should not suffer the penalty of the law for his crime. This proclamation of the Governor may save Duncan Cooper a term of twenty years in the State penitentiary, but it will not, and cannot, wipe the stain of blood guiltiness from a once honored name or keep Duncan Cooper from being branded in the eyes of all law-abiding citizens as a murderer of his fellow man. Governors' pardons may free men from prison service, but they cannot escape free men's characters from the corroding stain which they, by their own acts, bring upon them. Duncan Cooper must go to his grave with the stain of human blood clinging to him, and the name, of which he was once so proud, must go down in history as that of a man who made a cowardly attack upon a noble man and who for petty revenge spilled the life blood of a useful and honored citizen.

Colonel Mallory, in 1896, and ever before and since that time, has voted the straight Democratic ticket. He voted the ticket nominated by the Democrats in the national convention at Chicago in 1896, and has never wavered in his loyalty to the party. He did not for one moment entertain the least thought of voting the mongrel ticket nominated at Indianapolis in that year. He has always voted the party ticket, regardless of his personal preferences. He has ever made the party choice his choice, and has worked in season and out of season for the ticket of his party. There has never been any question as to where he stood when his party has issued her orders.

From the encouraging news that comes to the Press from all sections of Chilton it is evident that Democrats are not only on picket duty, but are crowding to the firing line and expect to keep things warm for the next few months. They expect to reinstate Democrats in the court house of Chilton before the close of the winter months. A long pull, a strong pull and a pullaltogether will bring things to pass in Chilton this year.

If faithfulness and service to party mean anything in this day and generation it means that H. S. D. Mallory will be the next Governor of Alabama.

It is a long time between now and the general election in November. The opposition party will come to you with all kinds of appeals and suggestions. They are going to impeach your loyalty if they can, and do all manner of things to secure your vote, but Democrats, stand by your guns; we have this battle won, the victory is ours this time in Chilton county. She is swinging back to her ancient moorings.

Do not be led off by the appeals and suggestions of the other fellow. We are going to win in a clean, clear fight, out in the open. Do not let any one deceive you into any other idea.

The Democratic Club of Beat No. 5 did not have its meeting as announced in last week's issue of the Press because of the heavy rain on that day, but these excellent party workers have arranged to have a meeting on next SATURDAY NIGHT at FAIRVIEW, at which time a most excellent program will be rendered. The general object of this organization is to instill into the minds of the young people the principles of pure Democracy and to work unceasingly for the success of DEMOCRACY in Chilton county.

At the meeting on next Saturday night the following speakers will be heard: Messrs. R. L. POPWELL, ORMOND DICKINSON and J. D. SIMS. These gentlemen are loyal party workers and are determined that success shall come to the party of their choice this year. They are fully capable of representing Democratic doctrine, and all who are invited to this meeting. Each of the speakers will be limited to fifteen minutes, after which the meeting will be open for general discussion by those present.

The Press prints today the list of contestants in the piano contest and the number of votes each has received up to this time. The race goes merrily on, and may the best one win. There are yet many who are holding back their ballots. Why they do so is beyond the comprehension of the Press. It cannot possibly avail anything to retain the tickets and keep voters in ignorance as to who is in the contest.

The manifest purpose in the contest is to increase the popularity and circulation of the paper which is offering the prizes. To withhold the votes that are intended to further interest in the contest is therefore a hindrance of the very object had in view in its establishment. But this will not work so great a hardship upon the Press as it will upon those for whom the votes withheld are intended.

We want to add other features to the contest, but it cannot, of course, be done til we see that there is going to be some activity in the contest. It has been our purpose to add a second and a third prize—possibly more—but till the tickets already given out are registered we hesitate to do so.

We are not complaining, understand; the contest is going to be spirited enough for the most expectant before its close—of that we are confident, but we would like to see the young folks get into the running in the very beginning and make things hum from the start.

From now on till the close of the contest it is going to be exciting in the extreme. We will publish each week a statement of the votes received by each contestant, so that every one can know just who is in the race and how they stand.

The contest for seats upon the Supreme Court bench is becoming interesting indeed. There is, perhaps, no more important office in the entire list of offices to be filled than that of our Supreme Court judges. This is the court of last appeal; their verdict is final in every case. Therefore we should have upon the Supreme bench of the State eminent jurists.

There was a time when Alabama ranked second to none in any of her Supreme Court was concerned. The opinions of her judges were quoted as authority throughout the world, and she took high rank among the legal [illegible] whose legal attainments are without question, seeking to serve the State in the capacity of Supreme Court judges. Among them is Hon. Ormond Summerville, of Tuscaloosa county. He is a man of whom all Alabamians could justly feel proud, who would serve the people of Alabama to their entire satisfaction, who would reflect honor upon the court should he be so fortunate as to be elected to the place. He is a man of wide vision, high grasp of the law, is firm, and his insight into the merits of a case is clear. Chilton Democrats would do well to consider this worthy son of [illegible]

PERSONA LMENTION.

Mr. G. L. Speer, one of Chilton's staunch Democrats, was in Clanton on last Saturday handshaking with his many friends. He speaks encouragingly of Democratic success in his section of the county.

Prof. H. L. Davis, a lively Democratic wheelhorse of Beat 6, was in Clanton one day last week mingling with friends. Always glad to see these good men and true.

Mr, W. M. Poole, of Maplesville, was circulating on our streets last Saturday. He, too, tells us that things political are looking brighter in his neck o' the woods.

Mr. E. L. Smith, of Route 1, let in the light of his countenance on Clanton and Clantonites last Saturday. From what he says we are going to have Democratic officers grace the court house after the November election.

Mr. J. Steely Jones, of Cooper, was a pleasant visitor to the city one day last week. He came up on business matters, returning in the afternoon.

Mr. R. J. Langston, one of Chilton's substantial citizens, was among the visitors to the city on last Saturday.

Mr. J. H. Shepherd returned on last Thursday evening from New Orleans, where he had been in attendance upon the Shriners' convocation. He reports having had a most excellent time. We guarantee that he did.

Mr. Alva C. Wade went up to Birmingham last Friday on a business trip in connection with the Wade Electric and Power Company.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Col. Emmet O'Neal will address the voters of Chilton county on Tuesday, the 26th of April, at 10 a. m. at Court House in Clanton. Everybody invited to hear this distinguished Alabamian on this occasion.

Mr. R. F. Atinson, one of the true blue Democrats of the county, called in to se us last Monday. R. F. Sniffs success already, and says that it is assuredly coming this year. While in the office he let drop a remark that was significant. Said he: "We fellows out on Route 3 are going to make some of the town folks open their eyes in that piano contest. We're backing the prettiest young lady in the county and we propose to bring her in a winner." Those who know Mr. Atkinson had better take the hint and get busy unless they want to come in under the wire losers.

Clanton had another pleasant visitor in the person of Mr. R. L. Williams, of Route 3, Beat 6. It makes us smile out loud to hear the reports from these enthusiastic Democrats from the several sections of the county. Sounds like old times to us.

Mrs. J. Q. Wade and son, Jack, returned last Thursday from Atlanta, where they had been on a few days' visit to Mrs. Chandler, sister of Mrs. Wade. They both report having had a most enjoyable trip.

Dr. E. E. Upchurch went over to Carrollton, Pickens county, last Tuesday to visit his old home. He expects to be gone several days.

Mr. R. C. Middleton, of Birmingham, paid Clanton a flying visit on Sunday last, returning to his home Monday morning.

Remember that the vote in the piano contest is counted every Tuesday. So if you do not seem to have the number of votes to which you think you are entitled it may be that the ballots were deposited too late for the count. They will appear in the next accounting.

The colored folks of Clanton are making arrangements to have a big time on Saturday, the 30. Two baseball games, a fishfry and a dance are all on the program for that day.

The "tacky party" at the court house on last Friday evening was quite a success both from a financial and "laugh and grow fat" standpoint. Miss Jatie Lawrence mastered the "art" of acting the tack, and bore off the prize offered to her sex, while Mr. Driver won the musical instrument in waiting for the most successful gentleman along this line. Mr. Will Sartor deserves honorable mention, as do many others. "Refreshments" were made interesting by Mr. Sartor.

We have just received a full line of KODAKS and supplies. Watch our windows.

Dr. Ernest Hopkins, of Birmingham, came down last Friday to spend the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hopkins.

Miss Minnie Muse is showing this week some of the most attractive designs in ladies' hats that have been on display in Clanton for many weeks. You should call and see them.

The Press is in receipt of a letter this week from a sweet young lady in the western part of the county, enclosing postoffice order for quite a number of subscriptions to our paper and stating that she is going to get into the going for the piano. Somebody had better look out or they'll be caught napping, for this young lady is making things move over in her section.

Mr. J. W. Stillwell, an old friend of the Press man, was a visitor to Clanton last Saturday. Mr. Stillwell is now residing in Birmingham. He is receiver for the Clear Creek Lumber Company, of Ocampa, and came down on busines conected with that institution.

Mr. Isadore Forst, a member of the Grand Consistory of Kentucky, Scottish Rite Masons, and of Kosair Temple of Shriners, was in Clanton one day last week on a return trip from New Orleans, where he had been to take part in the Shriners' convention. Mr. Forst met quite a number of old friends while passing through Clanton, who were exceedingly glad to see this price of good fellows. Just thirty years ago he instituted a lodge of Knights of Pythias in this town.

Mr. J. O. Middleton returned from a flying trip to Birmingham on last Friday. He went up strictly on business affairs.

Mr. J. M. Walker, of Beat 15, was a pleasant caller at the Press office last Monday. In answer to an inquiry as to what was being done in his section, he said the farmers and the Democrats are all busy. We haven't so many of the latter as we would like to have, but we have as many as the other side, and those of us who are there are all wool and a full yard wide. You can count on us doing our full duty by the party ticket when the word comes to fall into line.

Mr. D. Broadhead and son, Samuel L. Broadhead, both of Fairview neighborhood, came is to see us on Monday last. The grasp of the hand of men such as they are and the sound of their voices speaking of the good things to come to the party of their choice makes the heart of a little editor truly glad.

Rev. W. D. Hubbard, D. D., an old Chilton county citizen, but now in charge of the First Baptist Church at Huntsville, was a visitor to Clanton last week, circulating among his numerous friends. While here Dr. Hubbard preached a most excellent sermon at the Baptist church, which was greatly enjoyed by those present.

Drs. E. A. Matthews, P. I. Hopkins and Arthus Lohnson left on Tuesday last for Mobile, where they go to represent the Chilton County Medical Association in the State convention of the Medical Society, which convenes in that city Wednesday.

Mr. C. C. Culp and wife, of Route 3, were pleasant callers at the office of the Press on last Monday. They came in to bring their little daughter to a physician.

Mr. W. J. Robinson, of Route 1, was another visitor to the Press' rooms. He resides in Beat 16, and reports everything moving smoothly in that neighborhood, with fair prospects of Democratic success.

W. S. Cox, of Route 3, president of the Democratic club of his section, was in town on last Monday and had his name added to the list of subscribers to the Press. He says he is taking quite a number of papers already, but he wants the Chilton county news and must have the Press.

Mr. A. W. Powell, of Route 3, Beat 6, was in town on last Monday. During a conversation had with this unyielding Democrat he stated that the party could secure the election of its nominees at the November election if they wanted to do so. It was merely a matter of going to the polls and casting their ballots for the party candidates.

Hon. F. A. Gullede, of Verbena, was a visitor to Clanton on last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Broadhead and little daughter came down Sunday from Montgomery to spend the day with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Broadhead.

Mrs. W. W. Monroe and Miss Ola Sample spent last Saturday in the Capital City on a shopping expedition.

A Lavender Town.

One of the minor harvests that promises well is that of the lavender fields. I have seen some flourishing crops in the Hitchin neighborhood recently. Comparatively few know of this quaint Hertfordshire town as an important lavender-growing center, yet it has grown the sweet old herb (which the Romans called Lavendula when they used it to scent their baths), has distilled the flowers and sent their extract into all parts of the world for more than a century. At cutting time people come in from miles around to inhale the sweetness of the fields, and when the distilling begins the fragrance of lavender is borne on the wind two miles or more from the town. The flowers are put into the still with the fresh bloom of their maturity on them, and from six pounds of such flowers about half an ounce of oil is extracted.

At the Bank of England privileged visitors are sometimes shown the oldest known bank note for £555, with the date "19th Xber, 1699." The memoranda written across the note show that payment was made by three instalments.

Nuts as Food.

Nuts are distinguished by the large quantity of both proteids and fat that they contain. As a class they contain more fat than any plant food. Hence nuts possess a very large nutritional value, and when well masticated, and particularly if cooked thoroughly, they make a wholesome and nourishing food.

All nuts contain a varying amount of fibrous or woody material which is known as cellulose. Some nuts, such as cocoanuts, contain a considerable amount making them difficult of digestion unless great care is taken to chew them thoroughly.

Walnuts are among the finest and best nuts which come to our table. The juicy fresh walnut makes a very toothsome as well as wholesome article of diet, but the skins are tough and difficult of mastication. It is necessary for those who have a weak digestion to peel the skins from the fresh nuts, and even then the nuts must be masticated most assiduously in order to prevent gastric disturbances. Dried walnuts are usually regarded as more digestible than the fresh nut, but they also require the efficient mastication which we are emphasizing so much.—Good Health.

SCIENCE

The technical committee of the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain, has been asked to consider the expediency of undertaking a test of motor horns on similar lines to those adopted in recent head lamp trials, in order that motorists may "gain information as to the most effective and least objectionable form of warning instruments for general use."

The most effective means of life saving in the event of a storm is the lifeboat, the first one of which was launched on the Thames on January 4, 1785, by Lionel Lukin, a coachmaker of an inland town near London. The first lifeboat was a Norway yawl, which he had fitted with watertight compartments, a heavy iron keel and other essentials in buoyancy and stability, which are the cardinal and requisite features of lifeboats now.

No use has yet been discovered for tellurium. It is classed as a metalloid, and is supplied as a chemical curiosity in the form of a black powder and as a metallic-looking substance with a fine columnar crystal form, in color somewhat resembling tin. Some of the compounds of tellurium have an offensive, all-pervading and ineradicable odor. Chemists who have been experimenting with tellurium say, according to the United States Geological Survey, that after three months' exposure to sun, wind and rain the clothing worn by them while they were making these experiments, although it had not come into contact with the tellurium compound, was still so unpleasantly scented that it had to be destroyed.

A new form of mercury interrupter has recently been invented in which there are no reciprocating parts, but the interruptions are produced by a ripple formed in a stream of mercury. The mercury is contained in a revolving vessel within which a contact piece is fixed. The mercury is thrown by centrifugal force to the inner periphery of the vessel. At one point the stream of mercury is obliged to pass over a deflector, producing a ripple or wave, and the contact piece dips into the mercury stream at this point as it revolves with the vessel. The frequency of the interruptions may be varied by making the deflector revolve slowly in the same direction as the vessel is revolving, or in the opposite direction, or letting it remain stationary.

AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal, is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove will do anything, from boiling a kettle of water to cooking a complete dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke, it can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled by a turquoise-blue enamel chimney, which directs against the bottom of pot, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is wanted—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Tuning a Church Bell.

No matter how great may be the care taken in making the mold, a bell has to be tuned before it will ring a clear, true note. As a matter of fact, every bell sounds five notes, all of which must blend together harmoniously. If one is the least bit out the tone will be spoiled. The first of these notes is produced by the vibrations at the mouth of the bell, the second by the vibrations a little higher up, and so on to the fifth, which is produced quite near the top. As the character of the sound which rings depends upon the thickness of the metal it is possible by taking thin shavings from various places in the inside of the bell to alter the five notes until they are all in harmony. —Montreal Standard.

It was in this very cottage in Brookside, 15 miles from Birmingham, Ala., that three Italians nearly died of Fever. They had been sick 3 months. Johnson's Tonic cured them quickly—read letter below:

Brookside, Ala., May 4, 1910.

The two physicians have had very obstinate cases of continued Malarial Fever. All were Italians and lived on a creek 50 yards from my store. These cases were of three months standing, their temperatures ranging from 103 to 104. The doctors had tried everything in vain. I persuaded them to let me try Johnson's Tonic. I removed all the principle of castor and let the medicine go out in a plain bottle as a regular prescription. The effect in all three cases was immediate and permanent. They recovered rapidly and there was no recurrence of the fever.

THE LATEST VIEWS ON THE INFANTRY ATTACK IN BATTLE.

The general principles of the infantry attack in battle have been fixed for some time, but there are always differences of opinion among the different nations on minor points in tactics. Moreover, every improvement in war material brings about some change more or less important in tactics.

Every war, of course, brings new experiences, but even in times of peace the drill ground or the manœuvre field may furnish data for this important branch of the art of war.

After any war it generally takes a long time before the views of authorities become crystallized, consequently it is well to consider these views from time to time in order to remain always up to date in our conceptions.

The great improvements effected in the modern military rifle naturally bring up the question of rapidity of fire, its advantages and disadvantages. How great the rapidity of fire may be without loss of accuracy of fire cannot be determined from actual experience, because data on this subject are entirely wanting at present.

This rate, however, will depend to a great extent on the training of the particular troops considered: it will be greater for the troops at the firing school than for the ordinary troops of the army; and it will no doubt be greater in time of peace than in actual war. It will also be affected by other circumstances, such as the character of the light on the target as well as the size and distinctness of the latter, the physical condition of the troops, whether they are tired or not, as well as their mode of firing, whether kneeling or lying down, since the same troops can always fire faster kneeling.

But even with very difficult targets it is now an accepted principle that the rapidity of fire shall not fall below three shots a minute. However, this applies only to such phases of the battle in which it is designed to attack and defeat the enemy, and not to those cases where it is merely intended to keep him occupied.

The improvement in firearms and in the training of our soldiers have warranted this great increase in the rapidity of fire. Nevertheless, some authorities are still opposed to it. On this subject the German authority, Lieutenant-General Rohne, says:

"The objection to increasing the rapidity of fire is based on the belief that reduction in accuracy of fire is a necessary accompaniment. But this is not necessarily the case, and even if it did result to a certain degree, this would not of necessity act disadvantageously. Of course, if the great rapidity of fire is due mainly to the excitement of the skirmishers it is undoubtedly detrimental and should be discarded, since in that case there is no longer any question of targets, but if the great rapidity of fire is the result of systematic instruction and training it need not necessarily exclude good aiming. Rapid loading and coming to "ready," never permitting the target to get out of sight, combined with good aiming and firing, go very well with great rapidity of fire.

"The commander who in actual battle slows down his fire in order to save ammunition wastes men and time, both of which are far more costly than ammunition. Men put out of action are more difficult to replace than ammunition, and lost time can never be made up."

After all, we do not go to war or into a battle in order to save cartridges, but to annihilate the enemy.

Another important point in modern tactics is the necessity for the close mutual action and support of infantry and field artillery on the battlefield. All the drill regulations agree in laying stress on this point. The infantry must attack even if the artillery has not been able to obtain superiority of fire, inasmuch as the silencing of modern batteries protected by gun shields is out of the question. The advance of separate batteries to accompany the infantry attack proved ineffective in the Russo-Japanese war because these batteries came within the zone of fire of the covered batteries of the defence. The infantry must also definitely give up all idea of attacking gun shield batteries in position. This had better be left to the artillery. The infantry will find the enemy's machine guns a far more promising target.

The proper use of the spade or intrenching tool is another point of dispute, but although its value has been greatly exaggerated, opinions are now more settled and its proper use as well as the dangers of its misuse are fully understood and carefully taught to the troops.

The more recent wars have shown that victory can be crowned only by the final assault with the bayonet. The necessity for the bayonet charge is now everywhere recognized.

The actual mode of beginning and carrying out the final assault still differs in different armies. While Germany, Austria and Japan believe that the final assault may be brought on by the initiative of the leaders in the foremost firing line, France and England still separate the troops into those for firing and those for shock, the latter bringing on the final assault in the form of an attack in mass on a narrow front. In the latter, therefore, the result is expected from a breaking through of the enemy's line; in the former from outflanking it. The French and English still believe in the efficacy of reserves in the firing line and the possibility of bringing them into action at the proper time and place to break through the enemy's line at the desired point. Germans do not lay much stress on the possibility of effective action on the part of reserves, but attack with all their energy at once and await decisive action from the columns coming up on the flanks.

All nations agree that the infantry attack should be supported as long as possible by artillery fire. In other details of the attack there are some differences in the different armies. For example, in Austria a portion of the firing line is kept in place lying down, and in Russia firing while advancing (at considerable ranges) during the assault is still retained.

The necessity for attaching machine guns to the infantry as well as the cavalry has long been recognized, but has been particularly evident in the two latest wars.

In the United States a machine gun platoon is attached to every infantry company and cavalry troop. In Europe the guns are either in batteries attached to cavalry or in companies attached to infantry, but the latter are often distributed to the troops in platoons, their main purpose being to increase the fire effect at critical moments.

These are the main points of interest in the latest views on the infantry attack, and no serious changes in these views will probably take place until another war brings out some new conditions, or new inventions like the magazine automatic rifle or the aeroplane introduce new factors in war.—New York Sun.

Smooth!

Robert Harborough Sherard, magazine writer and grandson of the poet Wordsworth, on his recent American visit gave a dinner to a large number of magazine editors.

Mr. Sherard was at his best at this dinner. In magazine articles his "mots" are still being quoted with laughter.

One mot concerned the wine, a very rich and fruity port, which was served in English fashion, with the fruit and nuts at the dinner's end. All praised this wine. As for Mr. Sherard, rolling it upon his tongue, then swallowing it with closed eyes, he cried ecstatically:

What He Had Accomplished.

"What," asked the thick-necked magnate, "have you ever accomplished that you should have the presumption to ask permission to marry into my family?"

"Do you remember when an effort was made a few weeks ago to indict you for making fraudulent use of revenue stamps? I got possession of the letter on which the prosecuting attorney expected to base his charges. It is still in my possession."

"I have decided to consider the matter you spoke of a moment ago. If you and my daughter love each other there is no reason why your happiness should be interfered with."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PRINCE REGENT WINS BET.

"Baa, Baa, Black Sheep," Added to His Speech Was Not Noticed.

One of the best stories in connection with the history of the King's speech, delivered at the opening of each fresh session of Parliament, is told of George IV., when Prince Regent.

The Prince, it is well known, took his responsibilities lightly and on one occasion is said to have bet Sheridan 100 guineas that either owing to the magnetism of his personality or the flutter which the occupants of the Lords' chamber were in, so little attention was really paid to the verbal character of the speech he was delivering that he could make any interpolation he liked without it being detected.

The bet was taken, and the Prince agreed to introduce the words, "Baa, baa, black sheep," into the middle of the speech.

"If anybody smiles, or looks startled," he said, "I lose my bet."

This exploit actually came off at the close of a weighty allusion, composed by Lord Liverpool, to Wellesley's difficulties in Spain. The Regent cleared his throat, said, "Baa, baa, black sheep," hurriedly, and went on, without apparently exciting any remark.

Sheridan relished the royal audacity to Canning.

"It is perfectly amazing to me," he said, "that no notice was taken. Didn't you hear him distinctly say 'Baa, baa, black sheep'?"

"Yes," replied Canning, "but as it was said extremely low and in a very sheepish tone of voice, I thought it was addressed to you."

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

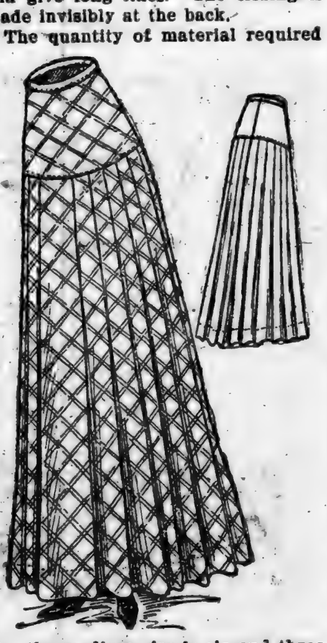
New York City.—The sleeveless coat is practical and smart, it means the satisfaction of a wrap without appreciable warmth, and it can be made available for a long list of materials.

The little epaulette-like portions can be either of the same or contrasting material and can be used or omitted, as liked. The feature of the coat is to be found in its extreme simplicity and the ease with which it can be laundered.

The coat is made with fronts, backs and side-backs. The fronts are fitted by means of darts at the shoulders and the neck edge is finished with a flat collar. The under-arm edges are finished separately and lapped one over the other and buttoned into place and the coat can be opened out flat when laundering becomes necessary.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is four and one quarter yards twenty-one, three and one-half yards twenty-seven or one and three-quarter yards forty-four inches wide with one-half yard twenty-one or twenty-seven inches wide for collar and epaulettes.

Narrow Sleeves.



Some of the newest frocks are made with narrow sleeves, sloping shoulders and scarcely any fulness in the bodice. They have turned-down collars, round waists and merely a little embroidery as trimming. With a more or less gypsy-scoop hat, these are sufficiently reminiscent.

Straight Pleated Skirt With Yoke.

Every variation of the yoke skirt is in style just now. This one is simple and very generally becoming, and is adapted to a variety of seasonable materials. The skirt portion is straight, and consequently can be used for bordered materials, as well as for plain ones. The yoke is circular and smooth over the hips. One of the pretty fashionable plaid woolen materials makes the skirt illustrated. It is made in the practical walking length and is serviceable as well as smart.

The skirt consists of the yoke and the pleated portion, the yoke is fitted by means of darts, and the straight pleated portion is laid in backward turning pleats, that are pressed flat and give long lines. The closing is made invisibly at the back.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is six and three-quarter yards twenty-seven, four and one-quarter yards forty-four or three and three-quarter yards fifty-two inches wide; width of skirt at lower edge four and one-quarter yards.

Colored Basketry.

There is a fancy for bright-colored basketry with raffia and tinsel trimmings. Some of the amusingest creations are painted with reds, and plaid silk appears in every guise.

Fashion Tan.

The yellow woman should be taught to eschew tan, and the ghostly person with dead black hair and a parchment complexion should be told to boycott bright scarlet.

WORTH QUOTING

There are some people we can't do too much for, and we don't even try, confesses the Philadelphia Record.

When a woman does her hair the way her husband likes it, it is a sign, to the Dallas News, that he likes the way she does it.

It seems strange to the Philadelphia Ledger that the authorities of Matteawan should be opposing the removal of Thaw.

Many a preacher would revise his sermons on the next life, chirps the Chicago Tribune, if he knew more about this one.

There are two kinds of people who miss the safe way of thought and conduct; one is hopeful, defines the Christian Register, when it ought to be scared, and the other is fearful when it ought to be courageous.

A Missouri man asks $50,000 for three fingers, says a Chicago headliner. Down in Texas, intimates the Louisville Courier-Journal, where a man traded 100,000 acres of land for a quantity of "licker," the St. Louisan might get his price.

A Chicago Romeo was stabbed through the ear by an irate young woman who handled a hat pin with dexterity. He that hath ears let him hear! shouts the Courier-Journal. It was prior to the vogue of the deadly hat pin that the poet jotted down his dangerous philosophy about the superiority of stolen kisses to the kind that meet you half way in blessed peace and amity.

Remarks the Atlanta Journal: First, for the sake of health and next for the sake of unrestricted trade, these cold storage plants require severe regulation at the hands of the federal government. Whatever may be the preservative powers of an arctic temperature, the average stomach recoils from flesh or fowl that has been dead for ten months.

Says the Cleveland Plain Dealer: Both governments need the lakes for the training of men to serve in case of need in their respective navies, the American already well established and calling constantly for more men, and Canadian soon to be started. To train the needed recruits armed vessels are needed. And as long as these ships are of the type of those now used by the militia of Ohio and other lake states no one's peace is threatened.

Alabama News

Work on Stupendous Scale.

"What most interested me," said Thomas J. Roe, "is the magnitude of the industrial developments of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company, west of Ensley. From the Warrior pike extending along both sides of the railroad tracks can be seen the evidence of proposed new industries as well as the site of the new town of Corey. Beyond the brick plant of the Harbin-Walker company can be seen giant excavators and other machinery for reducing grades. Scores of tents are dotted over the landscape, while hundreds of cottages are in course of erection for the accommodation of the army of workmen employed in this gigantic work. While not familiar with the details or the extent of the new work, I was much impressed with the unmistakable evidences of a most stupendous enterprise. Truly the words of a pioneer developer of this great district were prophetic when he said, speaking of her future industrial greatness, "The half has not yet been told!"

New Ball Team Organized.

A new ball club under the name of the Alabama Sumatra Tobacco ball team was recently organized at Summerdale. Much enthusiasm was aroused at the meeting and officers for the coming season chosen. An athletic club, under the same name, from which the team will be chosen, was also organized. The officers for the club will also be the officers for the ball team, and are as follows: Dr. W. S. Harvey, honorary president; L. Glendenning, president; Dr. Baldwin, vice president; Dr. Kennerdale, secretary treasurer; R. T. Shipway, manager and Will Schmidt, captain. They will be out for the county championship.

Heavy Damages Awarded.

The jury in the case of John F. Hyde, administrator, against the Southern Railway Company, returned a verdict for the plaintiff, fixing the damages at $12,000. Robert Hyde of Tuscumbia was killed in 1907 by a switch engine and the same year a jury awarded $10,000 damages to the plaintiff, who had sued for $25,000. The case was appealed by Hyde, who got a reversal and the case was remanded to the lower court. James Jackson of this city and George P. Jones of Florence represented the plaintiff, and E. B. Almon and J. L. Andrews the defendant company.

A. B. & A. Engine Dashes into Auto.

A switch engine of the Alabama, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad dashed into an automobile at Bessemer, seriously injuring J. C. Maben, Jr., general manager of the Davis Creek Coal and Coke company, and also W. H. Nixon, a garage man. Mr. Maben has a broken arm, broken leg and several broken ribs.

Electric Railway Projected.

A Florence letter says that a preliminary survey of the proposed route for an electric railway between Huntsville and Florence has been finished by Thurston H. Allen and others and that the resources of the country between the two cities are greater than the first estimates. There is water power in abundance to supply the proposed line in several small streams of the neighborhood. It is stated that the railway project is backed by ample capital.

Aged Woman Is Dead.

Miss Mallinda Andrews Rowe, an aged lady of Madison county, sister of Hon. Nathan M. Rowe, representative in the lower house of the legislature, died early Saturday at her home at Triana. She was 83 years old and was a daughter of William Rowe, a pioneer citizen. Besides her brother, one sister, Miss Lou Rowe, and a large number of neices and nephews survive her. She had been ill only a few days.

Oil Again Reduced.

Announcement of a reduction of half a cent a gallon in the wholesale price of coal oil for the Huntersville district of the Standard Oil company has been received with surprise by the coal dealers. There was a reduction of the amount a few weeks ago without any explanation.

Manufacturers' Census Begun.

J. F. Bradford, special agent for the federal government, has begun the manufactures census of this district, which is composed of Madison, Limestone, Jackson and a part of Marshall counties. The work will be done by 11 men in Alabama.

Damage by Forest Fires.

Numerous forest fires are burning on the mountains near Huntsville and as the underbrush is all dry they are having things pretty much their own way. A great deal of damage has been done.

Brought Back From Chattanooga.

Deputy Sheriff E. L. Miller returned from Chattanooga with Charles Knight, who is charged with violations of the prohibition laws and who was arrested in Chattanooga on request of Sheriff Mitchell. Knight at first refused to come back to Huntsville without requisition and papers had been applied for but when Deputy Miller visited him in Chattanooga he consented to return.

GIRL WILL TESTIFY AGAINST DEAD FATHER

No little interest is manifested in the trial of capital offense cases in the Anniston court this week, the most interesting of all being the Cochran case, in which the defendant will be arraigned for the murder of his father-in-law. Particular human interest attaches to this case, as it is believed that on Tuesday a daughter of the deceased man, a Mrs. Timms, as well as his late wife, will take the stand in favor of the son-in-law in an effort to show that their father and husband provoked the shot which ended his life. The other case of most interest will be that of Clark Hurd, former chief of police of Hobson City, the exclusive negro town south of Anniston, who is charged with fatally shooting a prisoner who had resisted his authority while he was in the act of making an arrest. Hurd has been in jail for some time, and public opinion seems to be about equally divided as to his innocence and guilt.

Attractive Summer Resort Planned.

A new departure in the way of a summer resort and delightful bathing pool for the public has been promised for the summer months. Lying in close proximity to the corporate limits of Eufaula is a large reservoir formerly used by the water works company which has been abandoned for a number of years. It consists of a basin perhaps 40 to 60 feet. This will be converted into a bathing pool and the grounds will be equipped with swings, rustic seats, and occupying a cool, shady woods will afford a delightful retreat for the long, sultry afternoon. The project is in the hands of A. A. Couric, Jr.

Track Foreman Receives Stray Shot.

Henry Jones, track foreman at the Sloss Sheffield Mines at Russellville, was shot Friday night by Raff Merony. Merony was shooting at a negro known as Flunkey. He missed the negro and hit Jones who was passing along the street. Jones was hit squarely in the neck by the load of squirrel shot. Doctors say the wounds are not deep enough to be necessarily fatal. Merony is in jail and so is the negro with whom he had an altercation during the day which led up to the shooting.

Presbyterians Start.

Dr. Stagg's Predestinarians of Anniston, will take to the road for a week's tour and while en route they will play at Greensboro, where they meet the Southern university team; the Marion Military Institute at Marion and the Selma Military Institute. Their batteries for the series will probably be picked from Rowe and Faukner, McArthur and Goodlet, Allen and Klein and McCaffrey, the two first mentioned being considered the strongest of the bunch.

HALLEY'S COMET HIDES ITS TAIL.

Its Disappearance For Two Months Was Noted on Previous Visit—Likely to Be Visible to the Naked Eye For Some Time.

Chicago.—Minus its tail, its lustre dimmed to a point below the light of a sixth magnitude star, but rushing earthward at the exact place its schedule prescribed, Halley's comet returned to the ken of astronomers, and for more than half an hour before dawn was watched from Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., by Professors Frost and Bernard, working independently. That the spectrum may show what has happened to the apparently lost tail of Halley's comet is the belief held by Professor Frost.

"It is worth noting that when it was here before in 1835 the tail disappeared two days before the perihelion, and was not seen again for two months," he said. "Halley's is the only comet ever known to behave like this. It is probable that the tail is there, but is so dispersed that it is not bright enough to be seen.

"The theory of its being foreshortened or the head being between [illegible] and the tail is altogether untenable. A comet's tail always points away from the sun, and if there have been any pictures printed in which this was not the case they are incorrect. Sometimes a second tail appears, and the freak tail may point toward the sun, but the main tail always points away.

"If the tail is there and is merely invisible to our eyes the spectroscope might show it. There was, of course, no such instrument when the comet was here in 1835. We hope to be able to use the spectroscope on it in a short time, and may prove that the tail is present by this means. The fact that the spectroscope did not reveal its presence would not necessarily mean that the tail is not there, however, for it might be too dim for that instrument."

COMET WON'T HARM US.

Its Track is 13,000,000 Miles From the Earth, But Its Tail Will Reach Us.

Washington, D. C.—Willis L. Moore, chief of the Weather Bureau, issued a statement that will bring peace of mind to folks who are worrying about a possible collision with Halley's comet. Here is what Chief Moore has to say:

"Popular apprehension regarding harm to the earth and its inhabitants during the impending visit of Halley's comet to this portion of the universe is unfounded. The result of a collision between the earth and a comet would depend upon the mass of the comet, the velocity of the bodies and the angle of impact. A collision in the present case will be impossible owing to a safety margin between the tracks of the earth and the comet of some 13,000,000 miles. The tail of the comet through which the earth will probably pass will be noticeable only as an absolutely harmless luminous gas or dust, and may produce electrical and magnetic effects that can be detected only by self-recording instruments. A source of possible danger or discomfort to the earth attending cometary visits would be the falling into the sun of a comet. At the least distance between Halley's comet and the sun in the present instance will be more than 54,000,000 miles the possibility of discomfort from solar excitations will not exist.

Halley's comet was sighted by Professor Asaph Hall, U. S. N., at the naval Observatory through a powerful telescope. At 4.50 o'clock in the morning Professor Hall saw the dim outlines of the approaching comet. Its position was one hour and four minutes west of the sun. The comet should have been visible during the past week, but its approach was obscured by cloudy weather. This is the first time the comet has been sighted in this city. On May 19 the earth will pass through its tail and after that date the comet will be visible only in the evening. It will then be leaving the earth, not to appear again for about seventy-five years.

TO MARK LINE OF LINCOLN'S MARCH IN INDIAN WAR

Illinois Representative Takes Up Prosecution or Interesting Historical Project—Only Oldest Inhabitants Have Memory.

Burlington, Iowa.—Representative Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, a former Burlington resident, has taken up the prosecution of a historical project of interest to Western Illinois and to this part of Iowa. By the donation of a sum of money he has furthered the project of setting up permanent markers to outline the march which Abraham Lincoln took up in the Black Hawk war. Only the oldest inhabitants in those regions now have any memory of the course of that campaign, which is not adequately outlined in history.

The object of the markers will be to fix permanently the line of march and the camping grounds planned by the martyr President. The way led across the prairies of Illinois to the Mississippi River at a point near Burlington, then known as Flint Hills. The march was made from Beardstown, Ill., to Oquawka, then known as the Yellow Banks on account of the peculiar coloring of the river shore line. From Oquawka the route was laid to the mouth of the Rock River.

There were two expeditions in the Black Hawk war, one in 1831, when Black Hawk escaped from the pursuers and crossed the Mississippi, and the second in the following year, when Black Hawk retreated to the Illinois shore with the determination to remain.

Lincoln was made captain of one of the companies which took up the campaign against the Indians. The expedition gave several names to the localities along the route which are still borne. It is interesting to note that twenty-five years after his brief with Black Hawk Lincoln, when he was coming into prominence, again visited Yellow Banks, and, after making a speech there, came to Burlington by boat. Yellow Banks had become Oquawka and was a thriving village.

The markers to be placed along the route will be of stone and with suitable inscriptions, and a map of the march will be drawn and copies filed on file among the public records at various points.

HISTORIC ELM SAVED.

Washington Tree on Cambridge Common Given New Lease of Life.

Cambridge, Mass.—After considerable hard work on the part of the Cambridge Park Department officials the Washington Elm on the Cambridge Common has been put in excellent condition and probably will live for many years to come.

According to the report, just issued, strenuous measures—the same as were used on the historic tree—are being used to save the trees bordering Decatur street, many of which have been badly eaten by the elm leaf beetle.

On the Washington Elm much of the dead wood was removed, the tree was sprayed twice with arsenate of lead and watered twice a week from a perforated pipe, which was laid a year ago. It was also watered frequently from a near-by hydrant.

High Price of Meat and Mutton Leads the Poor to Try Goat Flesh.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Brooklyn is "getting the goats" of a lot of people these days because of the high cost of living. With the prices of beef, mutton, lamb and pork soaring, the people of the borough are turning to the meat of "Nannie" and "Billy" for food.

For the first time in its history a dash of goats is being offered for sale in the poorer quarters of the borough. The price is from five to seven cents per pound lower than lamb or mutton.

CLANTON PRESS.

Published in the Interest of Chilton County and Her People.

VOL. I. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, APRIL 28 1910. NO. 4.

Reporter in January

Verbena, Ala., Apr. 25, 1910.

Editor Press:

I have not written you anything before, but I hope that this will not be any reason for casting my letter into the waste basket.

The cold weather has undoubtedly damaged our flowers and fruit, and some think that the oats are seriously damaged also. The health of our immediate neighborhood is good at present and we are all looking forward to next Monday when we will be able to go to the polls and vote for the men of our choice to represent us in the several departments of public life. And say, Mr. Editor, I hope you will urge upon all democrats the necessity for going to the polls next Monday for there is some sort of work going on, in a quiet way, that is not going to help democratic success unless it is nipped in the bud. As I understand it the republicans who are interested in the election of officers are doing all within their power to cut our primary election down to as small a figure as possible, they are even asking some of our democratic voters to remain away from the polls next Monday hoping thereby to create the impression that we have no chance in the general election. This ought not to be, and every good democrat will listen to this plea of the republicans. This is our election and they have nothing whatever to do with it. Let every democrat go out next Monday and express his choice of candidates, and then as we have said in your paper, when the candidates are nominated lets get out with them and elect them to office.

Tell the democrats to come out to the voting place on Monday and let every democrat bring another democrat with him. That's the way to show the other side that we mean business this time. We've got them mighty uneasy now and we can keep them that way if we vote in the primary. With hope for much success.

Yours truly,
DEMOCRATIC VOTER.

Maplesville, Ala., Apr. 24, 1910.

Mr. Editor:

I see you are inviting all democrats to write in your paper when they have anything of interest to the party.

I would like to call your attention to one thing. You have hinted at it yourself in your paper before, but most of are slow to take hints. The republicans are doing the best they can to keep our voters away from the polls next Monday, the day of the primary. Of course they are not doing it for any particular good it will do the democrats; they don't care that much about us, but they want to create the idea that we are weak in numbers and then they can tell the wavering voters in November that the democrats haven't got any chance to win and urge them to get on he winning side. As I said, you have mentioned this in your paper, but I for one did not believe this was being done till I made an investigation. Let all democrats take warning. They must get every one to go out to the polls and vote next Monday; weather or anything else ought not to keep them away. The word has been sent out along the line asking our men not to vote in the primary. They are getting mightily interested in our affairs all of a sudden. The truth is, Mr. Editor, you struck the nail on the head when you said they were going to do all sorts of things to discourage us, but according to my notion, we make them more discouraged than they have us and we can get them much more discouraged than they are we will all turn out Monday and vote. Tell every democrat to do his duty Monday and not listen to the republicans who are trying to give advice.

We have got to looking forward to the paper now with real interest and are glad when we can get the paper and find out the news. Hope you will have all the democrats in the county taking your paper.

DEMOCRAT.

Your money's worth or your money back at Upchurch Drug Company.

We want our country friends to bear in mind that we are doing all we can to establish PIANO contest headquarters in every section of the county for their convenience. THE GAMBLE HARDWARE CO. has gotten into the running and are handling the PIANO contest tickets. When you make purchases of them come to call for tickets. They are free for the asking.

William Walker, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. John Walker, died very suddenly Sunday morning. He went to bed Saturday night apparently in excellent health; during the night his father heard a peculiar sound in the room occupied by the boy and supposing that something out of the ordinary had happened he went in to the child only to find him dead. The bereaved family have the sincere sympathy of their friends and acquaintances in this, their sad visitation.

A telegram received last Tuesday from Hon. Emmett O'Neal who is in Mobile stated that he was suffering from a severe cold and would be unable to fill his appointment in Clanton.

We might remark parenthetically that he is going to be unable to fill a certain appointment in Montgomery also, but not because of a cold so much as it will be from a cold snow-under that is coming to him on May 2nd of the present year.

Mr. W. J. Sorrell from Union Grove paid Clanton a visit last Tuesday; Mr. Sorrell is a farmer after the heart of the Press man; he raises his own hog and hominy, lives at home and boards at the same place. If more of our farmers would do the same thing this county would blossom as the rose.

Judge L. H. Reynolds went up to Birmingham on last Monday to attend a meeting to the republican executive committee of the state and also of the district.

Just as we thought we had a fair start on a lengthy editorial that would be quoted far and near, a friend of ours stepped in and pied the whole form for us. Said he—and we are quoting his exact words—On the 30th day of April 1849 a freeze came, killing all wheat, corn, early oats and other vegetation then up in middle North Alabama; the freeze came on Sunday night; the day preceding was cold and cloudy, with snow and rain intermittently; the weather cleared somewhat as the sun set and was followed by a freeze. All the men living in this part of the state will remember this April weather and vouch for this statement.

Now was this a coincidence that 60 years afterward, almost to a day, the same thing happened? Our weather was almost identical with the '49 weather and the day of the week was the same.

This good gentleman from Verbena has spoiled a good article for us, but he has given us some history that is valuable.

Let the youngest citizen get his note book out and make a memorandum of April 25th. In his declining years it will be much comfort to him to reat back and say: "I remember back in the year 1910 it was so cold," etc.

We had really forgotten about that '49 weather, having misplaced our weather memoranda when we started off for the gold fields that spring.

Do not forget that the democratic primary is the place for democrats to express their choice. If candidates when the primary is over, the duty of all democrats is to

Mr. W. M. Oden of Mulberry was in town last Tuesday; he brings the cheering news that things political are looking extremely bright in his section.

Mrs. J. R. McDaniel of Montgomery is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McDaniel.

Attention is called to several signed articles on the first page of this paper. They come from men who have the interest of the party at heart and who are willing to get out into the open and work for the success of the ticket nominated. In almost every instance they begin their communications by saying they have nothing against any other candidate. This is as it should be. Men are going to have their preferences regardless of parties and rules, but when the party adopts a rule or speaks with authority those men will fall into line and work for the success of the ticket whether the personnel of the ticket suits their individual preferences or not. It is this kind of action that builds up parties and makes them invincible. Let the good old Democrats of Chilton adopt this line of action this year and before the close of the year we will see Democrats occupying every office within the gift of the people of Chilton.

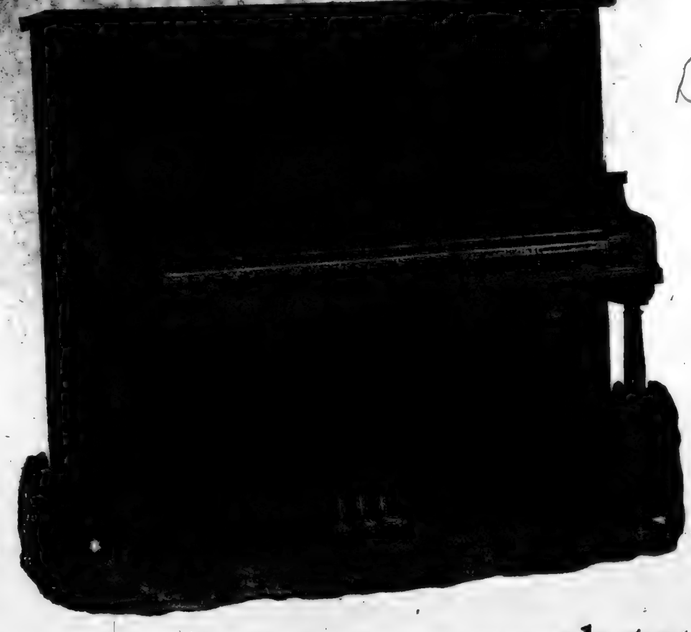
On last Thursday we printed the official list of inspectors, clerks and returning officers of the primary election to be held next Monday. One or two errors crept into the list—but not errors of the printer—and for this reason we give against the list of officers appointed for those precincts in which the errors occurred:

In beat five, box two, the following changes are made: Inspectors, G. W. Cobern, T. J. Henderson, C. L. Brown; clerks, W. W. Cobern, Joel McDennis; returning Officer, J. D. Sims.

In Beat Six, box one, the following changes are made: Inspectors, John Pool, John Huitt, L. A. Popwell; clerks, R. F. Atkinson, Glaucus Durbin; returning officer, John T. Huitt.



Let those interested make a note of these changes. They are officially announced by Chairman Simpson.

As to the food value of nuts, scientists are more and more advocating their use as food for the human body, since they average from fifteen to thirty-three per cent. protein and from fifty to seventy per cent. fat, thereby proving a natural substitute for meats and much cleaner and healthier nature. The nutritive elements of nuts, opines the Indiana Farmer, are better balanced than of meats, and when properly eaten, they are as easily digested. Many farmers of this State are becoming more interested in nut culture and are planting their otherwise waste lands to chestnuts, walnuts, etc. Chestnuts come into bearing at an early age and are very profitable, as are pecans.

GRAND PRIZE CONTEST

FOR CLANTON PRESS SUBSCRIBERS

Early subscriptions mean early nominations; early nominations mean much to Contestants.

Get into the running early and stay late, thereby taking the best prize ever offered to the people of Chilton County.

The Piano belongs to you if you hustle for it; put your friends to work and rejoice in the possession of a handsome mahogany finish Grand UprightPiano.

Read the plan carefully and get actively into the game; you can win if you try and it's worth the trying.

THE PLAN: READ IT CAREFULLY

The Clanton Press has purchased and will have on display at the Upchurch Drug Company's Store, a handsome Mahogany Finish, Grand Upright Piano, warranted by the manufacturers for ten full years.

This handsome instrument is to be given away absolutely free of all cost to contestants, and will be a means of bringing joy into some home in Chilton County—that home may be yours.

With each cash subscription of one dollar to the Clanton Press—the new paper published at Clanton—will be given a ticket entitling the holder to five hundreds votes in the Grand Piano Contest.

The person receiving the largest number of votes at the end of the contest will receive this handsome instrument absolutely FREE.

There are other prizes to be announced from time to time; elegant prizes that will appeal to the taste and pride of every contestant.

WATCH THE COLUMNS OF THE CLANTON PRESS FOR THESE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

No citizen of Chilton County, of good character, is debarred from the contest. Every one is invited to participate and will be given every assistance and all information possible to enable them to become the owner of this elegantly finished Piano.

READ THE PLAN CAREFULLY AND START EARLY; EACH DAY MEANS MUCH IN THE RUNNING.

In addition to the five hundred votes for cash subscriptions to the Clanton Press, the proprietors of the paper will give five votes in the contest for each one cent of cash advertising or cash job work that is brought to the office of the Clanton Press.

These votes are to be cast at the pleasure of the holder for the person nominated by the holder of the ticket.

Each ticket is plainly printed and contains a space for the name of the person for whom you wish to vote to be written thereon.

You need not tell anyone for whom you voted or propose to vote—that's your business. At the end of the contest the votes will be counted by a select committee of gentlemen and the result announced.

The person receiving the highest number of votes will receive the Piano without any cost whatever; the person receiving the next highest vote will receive the second prize and so on till all the prizes are awarded.

In addition to the votes given out by the Clanton Press we have arranged with several merchants to handle these Contest Tickets so that you may receive the benefit of your cash trade with them.

Below will be found the names of the merchants who will distribute Contest Tickets. With each one cent of cash trade done with them you are entitled to receive a ticket for one vote in the contest. Remember, one vote for each one cent of cash trade. If you spend one dollar in cash with them you are entitled to one hundred votes. If you spend ten dollars you are entitled to one thousand votes and so on. To obtain these tickets you will have to trade in Cash as no tickets will be given out for credit purchases. Each ticket will denote the number of votes to which you are entitled. For the convenience of the people two boxes will be used, one will be kept at the Upchurch Drug Company and the other at the office of The Clanton Press. Write on the ticket the name of the party for whom you wish to vote and deposit it in one of these boxes.

From time to time the names of the contestants and the number of votes each has received will be announced in the columns of the Press. Keep your eye on these announcements so that you can put your "best girl"—be she wife, sweetheart or daughter—up at the top of the column.

When you trade with merchants handling the contest ticket be sure to ask for them; you are entitled to them and they will gladly give them to you.

Bear in mind that you are entitled to five hundred votes for each Cash Subscription to The Clanton Press and to five votes for each one cent of Cash Advertising or Job Work done with The Clanton Press and to one vote for each one cent of Cash Trade with the following merchants:

Upchurch Drug Company, Drugs, Seeds, Toilet Articles, Jewelry, Soda Water

A Cure For Nerves

The "nervy" girl will find that an hour's sewing is a wonderful nerve-soother. She can sew in all her little irritations, her fancied injuries, and generally become her normal self again when she has finished a long seam.

One of the most neurotic and excitable women, the famous George Sand, wrote in praise of the soothing powers of needlework, and every girl who tries this simple remedy for nerves will doubtless confirm her testimony.—Home Notes.

Frau Bertha's Hotel.

In the little town of Essen, Germany, is a hotel—a first-class hotel—at which the principal guests who put up there never have to pay for their accommodation. It is owned by Frau Bertha Krupp, the richest woman in Germany, and owner of the great Krupp works at Essen. She runs it at a loss of more than $100,000 a year. The hotel was built by Frau Krupp solely for the entertainment of the representatives of foreign governments who visit Essen to superintend the execution of orders. Ordinarily travelers sometimes can find accommodation at the Krupp Hotel, but only when the rooms are not required for Frau Krupp's foreign official guests.—Boston Post.

The New Waist Line.

A stronger indication of the waist line that gives a basque effect is noticed in some of the shorter coats, although their fit is still very easy. Then there are those fascinating Russian blouses whose influence in the long buttoning line which lends a military air in closer-fitted garments is felt about ninety-nine coats out of every hundred. Belts on these Russian shapes are straight and wide, which necessitates their being worn loose and round, and this gives a quaint look that is most charming and entirely new, a cross between a Russian soldier and an 1830 schoolboy. Braiding in military designs is another coat touch that is rather important.—Harper's Bazar.

Men Bunglers as Builders.

"I looked at one house to-day, highly desirable in many respects, in which the kitchen and scullery were at opposite ends of a long passage. Cannot you realize that only a man could have been guilty of such an arrangement? The lack of cupboards is another masculine omission, and even those that are put in usually are inconveniently placed. Men also are responsible for building most bathrooms far too small for real comfort. In houses, as distinct from apartments, they rarely make the stair railings high enough, the result being that most staircases are death-traps for clambering children; and nursery windows often are made so high that the little ones cannot possibly see out of them, while the room itself too often is placed in a gloomy and sunless part of the house. So far as I am concerned," the house-hunter wound up, "we are uncomfortable where we are, and, from all I have been able to see, we will be miserable if we move."—New York Press.

Ideals of Colleges.

In a recent number of a popular magazine there is a brief exposition by the heads of seven American colleges devoted exclusively to the higher education of women of the ideals aimed at by the woman colleges and concerning the life mission of the college-bred woman. There is not a very great diversity of view among the seven distinguished educators in the setting forth of the results broadly aimed at in the higher education of women. Service to her generation, to her race—that, in a nutshell, is the ideal for their graduates at which the woman's colleges are aiming. This thought of service, and of a highly trained capacity for service is expressed in practically every one of the papers contributed under the heading of "What Kinds of Young Women Our Leading American Colleges Are Aiming to Produce?" The sweet girl graduate is a finished product, but not a society ornament; not simply and merely for decorative purposes. She has been trained to work.

One president of a New England institution declares "the colleges have no sympathy with the view that work is undignified to work; rather, they believe that is beneath the dignity of a human being not to work." The head of another institution that is maintaining a high level in the education of women believes that the higher education for women "is subserving for the weak and vain ambitions of what is called society among women worthy of spiritual and intellectual womanhood." And another distinguished college president expresses the view that "for the ideally trained woman service to others is an essential condition of her life and growth. Contact with noble minds through study of books and persons' association will make her eager to throw herself into the great struggle of humanity. Snobbishness, clannishness and self-seeking have no place where truth reigns." Not one of the college presidents concurs in that view which has at times being given expression, that a college training unfits women for domestic life—for being wives, mothers and the superintendents of homes.

In answering the question, "What kind of a woman should the college produce?" the head of a Massachusetts woman's college replies: "Women like that mother of a family in a Western city who is commissioner of public schools, who looks well to the ways of her household and yet is a most valued and efficient public servant." The suggestion of another of the commentators upon the college bred woman's mission is that "the college woman learns to be adaptable, to work with definiteness and system, to think quickly and clearly and to judge dispassionately — qualities quite as desirable in the home as in the study or the class room." And another declares that the home, the church and society needs women who can think, who love the truth, who are courageous, who are public spirited, efficient, eager for service and are, withal, sincere, gentle, sympathetic and womanly." No, the sweet girl graduate is not merely a finished art work, however much she may look to be a thing perfect and completed when viewed across the footlights as she appears in her graduating glory. Her commencement day marks a commencement in her life mission; and her life mission is not by any means, according to those who should be well qualified to speak for her, to be "the butterfly along the road."—Baltimore American.

An odd fancy of the moment is the use on dressy toilettes of bells of varnished leather.

The hexagon mesh is the veiling most often met with, whether the veil be fine or coarse.

The soft serges and cashmere are used to build traveling costumes for the warm days.

Hand embroidery and pretty laces are the dominant notes in many of the new blouses.

Nets are again much liked for transparent undersleeves and guimpe purposes in frocks.

A new lace grenadine, more often called "net" than grenadine, is shown among the new materials.

Narrow silk fringe is used to edge many of the new straw hats, the effect being to soften the face.

Billows of fluffy materials and cobwebby laces enhance nearly every lingerie frock now being shown.

It seems that the rabat is to have another successful season, since it appears as a coat, dress and blouse decoration.

A great deal of soutache braiding appears on the dressy broadcloth coats for children of from three to seven years.

The scarf, first intended as a light covering for the head, now has developed into a wrap sufficient for protection from head to knee.

Mercerization has reached an art, and the silky appearance given by it raises some of the erstwhile humble trimmings to a prominent place.

Figures show that school teaching as a class are long-lived.

THE SEASON'S NEW DESIGNS

grown-ups. This one is essentially novel and extremely attractive. It is closed for its entire length with buttons and button holes above and below the trimming, invisibly beneath the trimming, consequently it can be opened out and laundered with perfect success, and is especially well adapted to washable materials. Plaid Scotch gingham is the one illustrated, with trimming of banding and buttons. Linen would be handsome so made, too, and, indeed, almost all the simpler washable materials, while the model also can be used for the wools of immediate wear. Plaid wool material with trimming of black velvet ribbon is always smart and attractive and suits the design admirably well. Blouse and skirt portions are separate and are joined beneath a belt. The pleats over the shoulders give becoming breadth and the pleats at the back and sides of the skirt mean graceful fulness.

The dress is made with blouse and skirt portions, which are joined and closed at the left of the front. The skirt is straight and the sleeves are made in one piece each.

"Something Russian and something new," has a queer button and chain effect on each side of the coat. It isn't clanky and prison-like, but very dashy.

The hat shown here is of the extreme rolled type, a winter straw and rose creation from the South.

Inset Panel Lace.

Coats for fancy wear have lace insertion on the collar. It is usually placed to form an inset panel. Again, lace is used on the cuffs, entirely covering them, and a belt is designed of lace on the cloth, and cut to point low at the front. All pieces are stitched to the packet.

Velvet Holds Sway.

Velvet, both black and colored, continues as the material par excellence

Deformed Crowns.

Freak hats with deformed crowns and brims are again shown, but are merely "pour passer le temps" until the real fashions are announced and plumes are also appalling, so the wary are merely looking instead of buying.

The Farm

Keep the Pigs at Home.

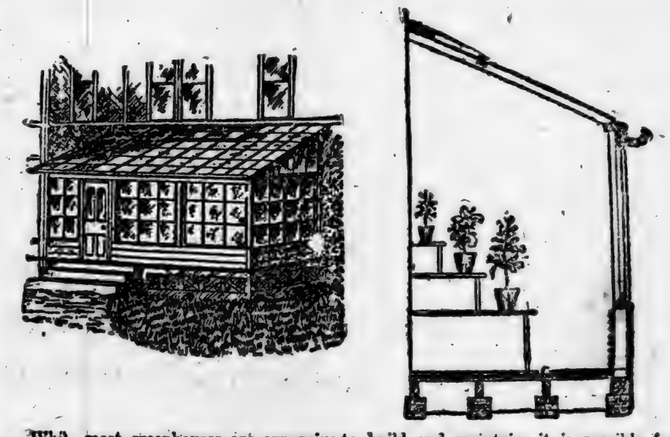
There is a fortune in hogs for all of us if the present prices hold until we can raise the valuable animals. It should be borne in mind, however, that in these later days it is not safe to allow one's pig to roam the streets. Automobiles and thieves are thicker than they were a century ago. The back yard and the nearest vacant lot ought to give the porker sufficient room for comfort.—Providence Bulletin.

Items of Expense.

There are items of expense to the farm that should be credits rather than debits. To see farmers buying in the markets things that could and should be grown on the farm shows lack of forethought. It is no uncommon thing for farmers living near towns to buy their garden vegetables whereas every one of these can be produced at home. By growing these greater opportunities will be given to purchase more of such as cannot be grown. Even fruits, especially the small fruits, are chiefly had in the market.—Indiana Farmer.

Cow Rations.

A correspondent from Edgar County, Illinois, says that he has plenty of clover hay, corn meal, wheat bran and middlings, and wants a daily cow ration for his twelve cows. A good daily ration feeding three times a day would be in quantity for each cow, all the clover hay it will eat up clean, and by weight equal parts of middlings and bran mixed with two pounds of corn meal, feeding a pound of this to each cow in the proportion of a pound for three pounds of milk each gives. It is always best to apportion concentrates in proportion to the amount of milk, and therefore different cows require different amounts of these concentrated feeds, though each should have all the clover hay it will eat.—Indiana Farmer.



Feeding For Butter Making.

A good English dairy authority says that to a small extent rich fatty foods add to the butter fat content of the milk, but only by supplying material which the cow is ready to make cream of, as cows naturally giving poor milk will lay this fat on their backs, and it is probably useless to try to make a bad cow give richer milk. If it were not for this, it would seem somewhat meaningless to describe certain foods as butter-producers or less suitable for butter making than for milk-producing, though the foods are all useful for the latter purpose also. Peas and rye, for instance, are apt to make the butter hard, and so we find them classed as third-rate butter foods in Denmark, though both of them are useful as milk foods.

Butter making is so well understood in Denmark that it is interesting to see in what estimation different foods are held for this purpose. Rape cake, oats, and wheat bran are held in the highest estimation; cotton cake, barley, and palm nut cake come next, peas and rye ranking last. It will be noticed that the best foods are highly nitrogenous, excepting rape cake, and not particularly rich in fat, the second-class foods being superior in this respect.

Richness of milk being, however, dependent on the individual cow or particular breed, the question may well be asked whether it pays to use these foods in any quantity for all cows alike in a milk herd. Those that give the richest milk should have a larger proportion of non-nitrogenous food, which may to some extent cheapen the ration, as the albuminoid ratio is enlarged. This later in the same proportion for all the cows in a herd has been perhaps too rigidly adhered to, and one of our leading dairy authorities advocates attention being paid more to the actual requirements of the cows rather than strict adherence to any prescribed diet.

A Small Greenhouse.

While most greenhouses are expensive to build and maintain, it is possible for an amateur to have one at small expense, as an addition to the dwelling. Hotbed sashes cost from $3.25 to $3.50 each, and measure 3x6 feet. If steam or hot water heating cannot be provided from the house, an oil stove will maintain a high enough temperature.

The Cows and Tuberculin Test.

In some of the extensive tests made on cows with the tuberculin test, under the new regulation and laws requiring it, about twenty-five per cent. of the cows reacted, and were thus found to be affected.

The tuberculous cow presents a vivid picture of disease long concealed, slowly but surely destroying the tissue until the factor of safety of some organ or structure of the body has nearly been destroyed. During the early stages of the disease the animal may appear to be healthy in every respect, and it is with these that the tuberculin test is valuable.

Tuberculin has been used by the experiment station of the Bureau of Animal Industry regularly and continuously during the last seventeen years.—Weekly Witness.

Hens Sure to Lay Every Day.

Mrs. John Osborn, of Clayton, St. Louis County, has joined the ranks of the foes of high prices as the woman Egg Trust buster. After eight years' research, she says, she originated a breed of chickens guaranteed to produce eggs every day in the year. The only trouble with the new variety is that the hens are so busy laying eggs they forget to set. They are a mixture of Rhode Island Reds, White Leghorns and Blue Andalusians.

Mrs. Osborn grows enthusiastic as she describes the new products of the chicken world in this fashion: "Talk about your egg machines, here in Missouri, the realm of the queen of the barnyard, they sink into oblivion in comparison to the new Osborns. They are the superiors of the poultry family as egg producers.

"They have had no time to go to poultry shows and have their toenails manicured, feathers powdered and their combs bathed in vinegar to enhance their beauty. They lay eggs every day whether they have pretty prize ribbons fluttering from their coops or not."

With a few hens, each laying one egg every day, it is not necessary for city residents to study "back to the farm" literature in their dreams of how to return to the good old times when "hens and" was a part of the daily breakfast menu. In the opinion of Mrs. Osborn, a small city lot and some fresh and pure food is all that is necessary to produce eggs for each

Must Be a Good Milker.

For a cow to be worth keeping in a dairy herd she must produce enough milk above the cost of her feed to pay a good income on the investment. She must do even more than this. There are a great many cows that are mere boarders, and when the test is applied it is found that so far as profit is concerned they are worthless, and profit is the only object in view.

Why one cow will subsist on the same feed as another and yet give twice as much milk is a mystery that has not yet been solved. The cow is a machine to take in grain, hay, fodder, etc., and out of this to manufacture milk. The feed is her raw material, and she is the best cow which can take this feed and from it give the greatest return. She, of course, can give back only what is first supplied to her in a different form, but it is a characteristic of some cows to get out of the feed all the milk available while with others half of it is wasted.

While some breeds are better milkers than others, yet it is not altogether a matter of breed. Because a cow may be a Jersey, a Guernsey or a Holstein, this does not signify that she is a good milker, but the individual cow must stand on her own merits. It is true, however, that the best milkers belong to these breeds. Uusually the Holstein will give the greatest amount of milk, but for richness the Jersey is unexcelled.

The cow should also be of good disposition and not be a kicker. If she is wild and easily frightened there will be times when it will be impossible to get all the milk, and the whole herd may at times be made restless. She should also be an easy milker. In a herd the hard milker is anything but satisfactory. And above all else she should not be breachy or a fence pusher, and she should produce a calf every year. She should not go dry, unless turned dry, and she should have an even flow of milk.

Many cows produce a large quantity of milk for a few weeks after calving and after that the flow grows gradually less until it ceases altogether.

Size or general appearance should not be given much consideration. Color is of no importance except as a mark of breed. What is desired is the dairy cow in milk or butter, and she will be that will give the greatest amount of this at the least expense for feed and care.—H., in

EDITORIAL.

The Press wishes again to call the attention of democratic voters to the importance of nominating good men to occupy the judicial chair. We can not be too careful in the selection of those who are to charge our juries, pass upon testimony which is to be submitted in the trial of cases and to construe law involving the rights, property and lives of our people. While the Press has not the acquaintance of the distinguished gentleman who is opposing Judge Pearson we have it from good authority that he is a man learned in the law and a capable judge, but even if that is so it does not argue that Judge Pearson is not equally as good at every point. We will not presume to say he is better for that we do not know. Then, too, Judge Pearson has this advantage. He has served the people of this circuit; they know him for what he is. They know that he is an able jurist and a courteous gentleman. Unless there is some good reason for making changes it is a rather risky business to exchange a tried and true judge in the very midst of a volume of business, the discharge of which means much to the county.

Faithful to every trust he has been loyal to his people he has been, careful of the rights of every citizen he has been, impartial in the exposition of the law he has been.

What more need be said of a man who is seeking the sufferages of the people of Chilton county?

The people must make up the verdict on next Monday as to who they will have for governor of this state for the next term. The choice lies with the people. If a mistake is made there is no redress except by impeachment and in these days that seems to have gone out of style, even though the officer should grossly err. It behooves us to look well to the man who is to have charge of the helm for the next term. We cannot afford at this time to indulge in silly sentiment. We need a statesman in the governor's mansion, not a man who changes his opinions with every April shower. We need a man who dares to do right under the stress of every and all circumstances. Mr. Mallory is such a man; he has been ever true to his party and his people; he is a man upon whom you can rely whatever the conditions that confront him. He will be true to every trust and discharge without fear or favor, every duty devolving upon him as the chief magistrate of the state. Such a man deserves your support and should receive it.

The Press received information Wednesday that a deal was on foot between the republicans of Chilton and certain democrats looking to a reduction of the vote and an independent candidate for a certain office. We do not believe that such a deal will be consummated; we do not think that any number of democrats will give themselves to such a deal, however anxious the republicans are to bring it about. We doubt the truth of the rumor and are now busily engaged running it to earth; if there is any foundation for it the Press will give it to the people in detail. In the meantime let every democrat beware of trades and tricks. Go to the polls and forever settle the matter of party supremacy in Chilton.

This is a matter which is left altogether with the merchants. If they choose to offer these tickets as an inducement to those in arrears we shall have no complaint to make of it. The intention however, was to stimulate CASH trade. It seems to us that if we had a few old accounts which were hopeless in collecting the debt we would gladly give them. But as we said in the beginning this is a matter for each individual merchant to decide for himself.

The Press regrets that it did not receive the announcement of Mr. E. J. Hayes in time for the last issue of the paper. Mr. Hayes had complied with all the formalities necessary to becoming a candidate and had left the matter of his announcement to some friends, who, it seems, forgot to give the card to the Press man.

Notwithstanding his announcement comes a little late it is nevertheless received with pleasure by the democrats of Chilton county.

Mr. Hayes has never known anything but democracy; he has many times fought her battles and is always ready even in this day to fight for her principles. Chilton county democrats would make no sort of mistake in putting this excellent gentleman in charge of the county affairs in District number three, and we look forward to his nomination as a sure sign of his election in November.

On the front page of this issue will be found two very interesting letters, bearing upon a subject that has been written about by the Press editor since the institution of this paper.

We feel that it is scarcely necessary to again call the attention of Democrats to the wiles that will be employed by our friends, the enemy, to keep down the primary election vote. Its an old trick of wily politicians; it served its purpose long, long ago, and will serve the same purpose again if democrats permit themselves to be caught in such a net. We indulge the hope, however, that we are just a little too wise to be caught by and old trick like that. We have Democratic success within our grasp and now we will achieve success in November if we will but do our full duty till the day of the general election. The Press calls upon every Chilton County Democrat to put forth on the full political armour and be ready for service Monday morning. Let nothing deter you from going to the polls. The fact that but one of the offices is being contested for by more than one candidate is no part of an excuse for not voting on the day of the primary; it will strengthen you and it will strengthen the ticket for it to receive a full party vote. If you have anything special to do on that day, rise earlier than usual and perform your task, but by all means turn out when the polls open and register your vote. You owe it not only to yourself and your party, but you owe it to your wife and children.

We clip the following from the Greensboro Watchman. We reserve comment. Mr. Jesse Stallings, you remember, it was who in cahoot with Peyt Bowman brought out O'Neal for Governor and announced his platform. If they were privileged to erect Mr. O'Neal's platform and place him upon it surely they ought to have authority to speak for him on other matters.

WHAT DO WE CARE ABOUT MORALS, INDEED!

Jess Stallings (and if you don't know Jess you ought to ask somebody that does) who is on the stump in oppposition to Col. Mallory for Governor, is reported to have admitted in a speech he recently made at Dadeville in the splendid and irreproachable character of Col. Mallory, and exclaimed: "But what do we care about character, hope?" We cannot believe that the voters of Alabama will be influenced in their choice of Governor by a man who estimates character at naught—character, without which a man stands for nothing good, and should not be trusted in any capacity. We think Mr. Stallings will learn on the second day of May that the Democratic voters of Alabama do appreciate the high character and the ability of Col. Mallory, and will nominate him for Governor of the State.

On last Saturday night in the western part of the town the negro population were holding a festival. During the festivities a dispute arose between Henry and Tobe Kennedy over some trivial matter. The dispute soon brought on angry words and angry words brought on blows. Tobe Kennedy, who is the elder brother of Henry proceeded to put Henry out of the huse a la the bouncer style, which was resented by the younger brother. After leaving the house Tobe had his brother down and seems to have been administering a severe thrashing for his untoward coduct when Henry whipped out his trusty forty some odd and fired point blank at his brother. The ball lodged in the intestines of the elder Kennedy and he now lies at the point of death. Henry Kennedy was apprehended soon after the shooting and is now lodged in the Hotel de Catts awaiting the result of his hasty conduct. There seems to be no hope for the recovery of Tobe Kennedy.

Rev. R. J. Mills announced on last Sunday that the revival services at the Methodist church would begin on the Fourth Sunday in May. Rev. Mr. Kline of Tennessee, a noted Evangelist will be here to conduct the meeting and all should begin now to make arrangements for attendance upon every service. It would not be a bad idea for the merchants to close an hour each morning for the day services. Who will start the movement?

Our town was practically deserted last Sunday. At the two churches the Sunday school attendance was small indeed, compared with what it has been on recent Sundays. The two schools were improving rapidly and much interest was manifested in each but a side attraction came in and the Sunday school had to take the siding. Everybody and his cousin went to Mountain Creek to take part in the Sunday Memorial services. Thought the ancient custom among Southern people was to hold memorial services over our departed dead who died in the cause of their country on the 26th day of April—the day of the surrender of the great chieftian. If that day is to be set aside as commemorative of nothing why not select some day in May?

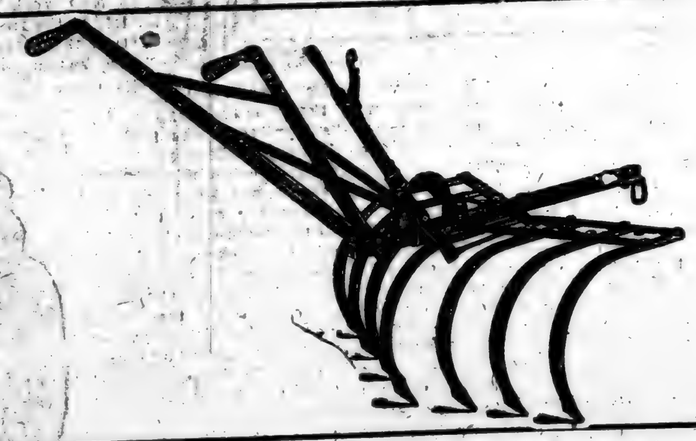
Rev. F. M. Woods was in the Press office on Tuesday last and states that this has been the most accommodating freeze he has ever experienced. He said, my beans and other garden truck are uninjured; we are expecting early vegetables at our house. It may be that the trees protected us, but nevertheless, we are safe from the ravages of the cold snap.

The Odd Fellows of Union Grove are planning a big picnic and gala day for Saturday, April 30th, to which all their friends are invited. A speaker of ability will be present to make an address and other features will be added to make the day one of pleasure and profit to those who attend.

Last Tuesday being Memorial day—and a holiday in this state—the banks were closed.

The Press Job office has just received from the type foundry some of the most expensive and latest designs in type that are made. These are especially designed for letter heads, envelope and such work. We can make visiting cards that will please the taste of the most fastidious, when in need of anything in this line remember that we meet the prices of the lowest and do the work of the best.

Mr. R. F. Atkinson of Route 3 was in to see us last Tuesday and says that he thinks his corn is completely killed; in fact all the low land corn is gone and will require replanting. He also expresses the opinion that October oats are badly damaged if not entirely killed.



The Press is in receipt of a communication signed "A Friend" from Maplesville, in which the writer pays some rare compliments to a certain candidate now before the people for nomination to office.

Otherwise there is no signature to the letter, we do not know who wrote it and hence cannot communicate with the writer to inform him that the communication will not be published. It is the invariable rule of this paper, and of all papers as for that matter, not to publish any annonymous communications. The name of the writer must in all instances be signed to the communication in order to insure publication.

This does not mean necessarily that the name of the writer will be published but it is an indication of good faith and a protection to the paper. We would be glad to publish the letter but for the fact that it is unsigned.

Next time, friend, sign your name and if you do not desire it published we will gladly withhold it from the public but we must know who you are before the article appears in print.

The Best in the World Or Elsewhere

We own the whole entire state agency for the Tate Wire Tool

Is the most practical and useful tool that has been invented for the use of ranchmen and farmers during the entire history of the barbed wire fence. In fact, the tool is indispensable to any person who has to build or repair a wire fence of any character. It has a wire cutter, staple and nail puller, a wire stretcher, pliers, screwdriver and leather punch combined, so that it is equally adapted for splicing, repairing and building any kind of wire fence. The tool is eighteen inches long, weighs three pounds, and is conveniently adapted for carrying in the hand or tied to the saddle. It is made of the very best drop forged tool steel, with material and workmanship guaranteed and will last a lifetime. The tool is an entirely new invention, in every way practical and, as said by a number of stockmen and farmers who have seen it or used it, "It supplies a long felt want." Practical men often remark that it is astonishing that the tool was not invented long ago. It is so simple that every one, without exception, who has seen it is enthusiastic over it, and it is recommended by a number of the leading stockmen of the country. The price is so reasonable that no one can afford to be without it. Sold every way for $2.50.

Call at HEADLEY & COMPANY'S STORE and see the most marvelous tool with which to handle wire fencing that has ever been invented.

And, if he agrees to sign a bill giving whiskey to Huntsville then why not sign one for Montgomery and if for Montgomery for dear old Chilton? The plain purpose of the O'Neal faction is to overturn the existing prohibition laws; while they pretend to be in sympathy with prohibition and merely fought the amendment because they did not like certain sections of that bill they are in reality seeking the return of the saloon with all its horrors.

The only way out of the difficulty is to cast your ballot for that grand old man who is and ever has been in the right—the Hon. H. S. D. Mallory—and not take the risk. It means much to the people of this county. Think about it. ROB ROY.

CANE CREEK.

On last Monday the children were delighted with oddity of an early summer snowstorm, claiming that Dr. Cook must be shaking the North Pole again. But little damage seems to have been done so far to fruits and vegetables by the frigid weather.

Miss Etta Robinson closed a very successful music school last Friday and entertained her many friends that evening at church with a musical. Miss Robinson carries the best wishes of a large circle of friends wherever she goes.

Prof. Halsey Mullins made an interesting illustration of the theme "Watch" on last Friday evening to an appreciative audience.

Messrs. Alonzo and O. R. Johnson visited this part of the county one day last week.

Miss Lillian Robinson was the guest of little Von Ceil Smith the past week.

It was the pleasure of the writer to "minister" the ordinance of baptism to one of Paint Creek's most noble young men on last Sunday morning.

We are learning to love the Press and look forward to its coming with great pleasure.

With best wishes for the success of all. E. L. S.

STANTON.

We are glad to see in our midst Dr. Walter Dyer who has been attending the Atlanta Medical college.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Mills are glad to know that their infant who has been quite ill is much improved.

Mr. Walter Ruddick who has been gone some time has returned.

Rev. L. M. Bradley filled his regular appointments on Saturday afternoon, Sunday morning and Sunday night.

A good number of our young people attended an ice cream supper at Riderville Thursday night. The proceeds were given to missions.

We are very much afraid that Grandma Advertiser would have put on her magnifying glasses to see O'Neal's strength in this part of the county.

Mr. Oliver Perry of Selma was seen in our little town yesterday.

We are having some unusual weather for this season of the year. I wonder if the makers of the Almanac didn't put Easter a month early this year. SARAH.

POPWELL SCHOOL HOUSE.

Health of this community is very good at present except Mrs. W. C. Roper is very sick.

Farmers have been busy all this pretty weather we have had planting corn and cotton seed, but I expect most of them wish their seed were in the house. As it has turned off to be winter time.

It has been snowing all the morning. Things are beginning to look white now.

The Sunday school at this place is moving on nicely under the careful management of Ma Waggoner. Hope it will continue to do so.

Miss Leila Venson, who is attending school at Fairview visited homefolks Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. W. S. Cox will fill his regular appointment at this place Sunday, May 1. Hope a large crowd will be out to hear him.

Singing at Pleasant Grove, yesterday, April 30th, was largely attended by all present. Several young folks from Liberty Hill and Samaria were at the singing.

Misses Lonnie and Ida Poole visited the family of Mr. Walter Poole Saturday and Sunday.

I will close, with best wishes to the Press and its many readers.

EULA ROPER.

SAMRIA.

Please allow me space in your paper for a few words from this place. Some of the many things which we are now blessed is a good Sunday school which is evergreen; a debating society which has been newly organized and is proving helpful to this community in the training of our boys and girls to usefulness.

Some of the Concord boys were in our community last Saturday night. There seems to be quite an attraction in these parts for the Concord fellows. Hope you enjoyed your visit boys. Come again.

The debate on last Saturday night was good, but we hope to have even a better debate next Saturday night, for we have a subject of vast importance to the people of this community and to the state at large.

The question to be debated is: Resolved that Alabama should have free and compulsory education.

The cold was intense here, but we hope that vegetation has not all been killed.

For fear of the waste basket I will quit for this time. If this letter escapes I will come again.

YOUNGSTER.

FAIRVIEW FACTS.

The democratic club of Beat Fifteen met at Fairview last Saturday night and had a most successful gathering.

The next meeting of the club will be held at New Cedron, on Saturday night, May 7th, and the following program will be had:

Welcome address, J. Ormond Dickinson.

7:50, Address, T. L. Dickinson.

8:00, address, Rufus L. Popwell.

9:00, Short Talks by interested people.

We expect a lively time and respectfully urge everyone who is interested in good government of the people, for the people and by the people to come out and help us teach and spread the cause of pure democracy.

The singing on last Sunday at Pleasant Grove was a great success. There was a large crowd present, plenty of dinner and excellent singing. Everyone seemed to enjoy it.

The young people of Fairview will start their debating society again next Saturday night and will render the program which appeared in last week's issue of the Press.

Here's looking for democratic success at the polls next November.

DEMOCRAT.

BEAT SIX.

Just a few words please, Mr. Editor:

I notice that the sheriff states in his notice of election that two justices of he peace are to be elected in each precinct this year, which is a mistake, Section 334 in the political code will show who are to be elected.

Success to the Press and the democratic party.

A. W. POPWELL, J. P.

By glancing at the list of piano contestants you will discover many changes. New names appear in the ranks and some of those who had comparatively few votes last week are forging to the front. It is not always the swiftest in the beginning who wins out in a long race. By constant tugging the tortoise won over the hare and by constantly gathering in the tickets those who are now in arrears may come to the front in a few weeks. Do not be discouraged merely because some one is in the lead now. Next week you may take the lead.

HUNTED TURKEYS FOR LIVING.

Henry Garis and Bill Tilghman in the '70s and early '80s supplied the Northern and Eastern markets with deer and wild turkeys. In time they dealt mostly in turkeys, for the reason that a deer, usually weighing more than 100 pounds, brought only $5 a carcass, while turkeys, averaging from ten to twelve pounds each, always sold readily at $1 apiece.

"It was our rule," Garis said, "never to fire into a drove of turkeys in daylight, as to do so would frighten them and cause them to leave that part of the country. The result of this kind of hunting was that we always had an abundance of turkeys within reach—we often rode within forty feet of a big drove of turkeys without their taking flight.

"Persons who never hunted in the Southwest in the old days scarcely can imagine the enormous number of turkeys that ranged the country. I believe the greatest turkey range on earth was in what we called the Red Hill country, now embraced in Woods, Majors and Alfalfa counties, Oklahoma. I have seen ten and twelve acres at a time black with turkeys; actually the ground itself seemed to be alive. After the turkeys had passed their scratching made the ground look as if it had been gone over with rakes. The turkeys fed on small acorns and often flew into the hackberry trees for berries, their weight stripping the trees of their smaller limbs. I know of one gobbler sold at Dodge City that weighed forty-five pounds, and we killed many that weighed thirty-five or forty pounds.

"The worst scare I ever got in the west country was while hunting turkeys one night, even though we had an occasional brush with the Cheyenne Indians. Tilghman and I, though partners, always hunted alone. We started out one night in search of a roost, Tilghman going down a big canon, while I went up the canon. Our reconnoitring finally led both of us into a heavily timbered creek bottom. Each was moving stealthily along with gun cocked, taking a step at a time, doing our best to penetrate the darkness and locate turkeys on their roost.

"Th wind was blowing from the south and it was difficult to hear footsteps or the breaking of twigs. Suddenly we backed squarely into each other in the darkness, neither suspecting the presence of the other. I am confident that I jumped ten feet into the air, my hair on end and my finger on the trigger of my gun. By the time I came down Tilghman had regained his composure—he had been too startled to shoot me on the wing, while I couldn't shoot with my feet off the ground. Both of us lay down and panted a while to get our breath, and then each cussed the other for scaring him."—Guthrie Correspondence Kansas City Times.

A LABRADOR RESCUE.

In his work among the people of the Labrador coast Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell has often imperiled his life. One such instance is given in his book, "Ardift on an Ice-Pan," in which is told the story of his remarkable escape from death. What follows—an account of the rescue—is all the more impressive from being told in the homely words of one of the rescuers.

One day about a week after Dr. Grenfell's return two men came in from Griquet, fifteen miles away. They had walked all that distance, although the trail was heavy with snow. "We just felt we must see the doctor and tell him what 'twould 'a' meant to us if he'd been lost," said George Andrews.

"'Twas even when us knew 'e was on the ice, George Davis seen un first. 'E went to th' cliff to look for seal. 'E got 'is spy-glass an' made out a man an' dogs on a pan, an' knowed it war the doctor.

"Us had a good strong boat an' four oars, an' took a hot kettle of tea an' food for a week, for us thought 'ud have to go far, an' p'r'aps lose th' boat: I di'n't hope to find the doctor alive, an' kept lookin' for a sign of un on th' pans. 'Twa' no' easy gettin' to th' pans wi' a big sea runnin'.

'Us saw th' doctor about twenty minutes afore us got t' un. 'E was wavin' 'is flag, an' I seen 'im. 'E was on a pan no bigger'n this floe, an' I dunno what ever kep' un fro' goin' abroad, for 'twasn't ice, 'twas packed snow.

"'Th' pan was away from even th' slob, floating by hisself, an' th' open water all roun', an' 'twas just across i' Goose Cove, an' outside o' that there'd been no hope.

"I think th' way th' pan held together was on account o' th' dogs' bodies meetin' it, an't froze hard during the night. 'E was level with th' water, an' th' sea washing over us all th' time.

"'E 'ad ripped the dog harnesses an' stuffed the oakum in th' leg o' 'is pants to keep un warm. 'E showed it to we. An' 'e cut off th' tops o' 'is boots to keep th' draft from 'is back. 'E must 'a' worked 'ard all night. 'E said 'e droled off once or twice, but th' night seemed wonderful long.

"'Us took un off th' pan at about half-past seven, an' 'ad a 'and fight gettin' in, the sea 'still runnin' high. 'E said 'e was proud to see 'us comin' for un. And 'e might, for it grew wonderful' cold in th' day, and th' sea so 'igh the pan couldn't 'a' lived outside.

"'E wouldn't stop when us got ashore, but must go right on, an' when 'e' 'ad dry clothes an' was a bit warm us sent un to St. Anthony with a team."

BAGGING A POLAR BEAR.

To be frozen in for a winter at Cape Bathurst, on the Arctic Ocean, is an experience described in a recent number of Recreation. The ship was on a whaling cruise and was well loaded. They had about sixty dogs, and had secured several carcasses of walrus, and cached them on the ice as food for the dogs.

One morning, says the captain, who tells the story, my Indian boy, Neponack, came running up the plank, shouting at the top of his voice that there was a bear near the ship.

I am not much of a hunter, but I object to being run over by game; so I always keep a rifle and belt of cartridges within reach. I grabbed them and started to look for the bear.

As I drew near the meat cache I saw a big polar bear, with his head down in the barrel, helping himself vigorously. The whole pack of sixty dogs were leaping, barking and howling about him. The bear paid no attention to them, and they all seemed afraid to take hold of him. I walked up to within a hundred yards and took a shot at old Ursus arcticus.

When the ball hit him he leaped into the air, and as he came down on the ice the entire pack of dogs "lit into him."

The bear let out in all directions with his great paws, and at every blow some poor dog was sent shrieking and spinning across the ice.

As soon as the bear had thinned out the pack sufficiently to escape, he struck out across the ice-floe for a bit of open water half a mile away.

At that stage of the game there were but three dogs in the whole pack that wanted bear. The others had had more than they cared for. But in a few seconds the race was reversed, and the dogs were coming for the ship as if they had been shot out of a gun, and the bear was after them. This was my chance, and I fired again, and my shot finished him.

By this time the whole crew had come out to see the fun. We put a line around the bear's neck and dragged him on board, where we skinned him.

While the fight was going on, I would have sworn the bear would weigh a ton, but when we got him on deck he seemed to have grown much smaller. Still, he was a good-sized animal.

FIGHT WITH BRIGANDS.

Two nights ago a band of brigands attacked the railway station of Rosetti on this line. Choosing the hour of midnight they approached the station, which is desolately situated, and commenced their attack on the dwelling of the telegraph clerk, which stands some 200 yards from the station itself.

This official possesses a savage watchdog, but the brigands silenced it by throwing to it dead fowls stolen from the adjacent shed. Then they proceeded to force an entrance by a back window, thinking they had an easy task, the only inhabitants being the clerk and his wife.

They reckoned, however, without their host, for hardly had they begun to force the window when a door was thrown open and a shot from a Martini rifle stretched one bandit dead. This threw the others into disorder.

They rushed from the yard, the clerk following, but seeing he did not fire again (having recklessly advanced without loading) they turned on him with the knives and axes with which they were armed, and for a moment his death seemed certain, when his courageous young wife ran forward and fired with a shotgun with which she had armed herself, and another brigand fell wounded. Picking up their companion they, fairly cowed, now took to their heels. The clerk and his wife, loading, followed them, but unfortunately both fell in the dark, the band making their escape.

The gendarmeries have already arrested some members of the band, known criminals, lately come into the district. They have confessed their complicity, and say that being burdened with the wounded man and afraid if they left him of his denouncing them, they threw him, still living, into a deep well, where his body has been since discovered.—Braila Correspondence London Chronicle.

Taxicab Trick.

"I'm just pinning on my braid," said the young woman who had been called to the telephone. "Oh, about twenty minutes, I guess."

"That is a trick," she said; "that came in with taxicabs. A man going anywhere with a woman in an old-fashioned cab would have squandered half a week's salary before he would telephone her about the stage of her toilet. But with taxicabs it is different. They eat up money faster than the old cabs, and it is nothing unusual now for an escort to ask how much longer it will take to get ready. Within fifteen or twenty minutes of the time set he calls a taxi and gets here as you are going down stairs. Not very romantic, no; but it's economical and saves money."—New York Sun.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. E. M. M'GUFFEY.

Theme: The End of Things.

Elmhurst, L. I.—In St. James' P. E. Church, the rector, the Rev. E. M. McGuffey, preached Sunday morning on the "End of Things." He took his text from St. Luke 21: "For the powers of heaven shall be shaken." Mr. McGuffey said:

Joy is always more joyous when underneath it is a foundation of thoughtfulness. Thoughtful people have everywhere and always the advantage over thoughtless people. With the latter class joy is too often like the "crackling of thorns under a pot." Here joy is likely to be like the pleasure children; light hearted, temporary, evanescent and meaningless; mere animal spontaneity, unreflective.

On the other hand, also, half digested considerations of the solemnity and seriousness of life, considerations of it not thought thoroughly to a conclusion, are too apt to alarm and sober us unduly, and produce that timid and melancholy frame of mind that refrains as far as possible from thinking at all on the great and serious problems of human life. Lord Bacon once said: "A little philosophy inclineth men to atheism." He might have said also that a large survey of the laws governing the world and the human mind establish a belief in the absolute and benevolent sovereignty of God over human life.

I shall be pleased, therefore, to have you do two things:

First, to make all the joyous days of the Christian year and all the joyous occasions of your personal life more intelligently joyful by careful consideration of the truths and facts which underlie them. If a few months ago we reflected on the true thought of Christmas Day, the incarnation, the gift to the world from the skies of a Divine Saviour, assuring us of the care and love of the great Heavenly Father, I am sure we experienced a happiness that was contagious, because it was deep rooted. If we explained lucidly to the dear children in our homes why and how Christmas became Christmas, I am sure we sowed precious seed in the rich soil of their young hearts.

With these considerations I pass to our second thought, viz.:

The ending of this planet as the theatre and home of human life.

Dramatic and terrible as is this thought in contemplation, let us seek to entertain it that it may be reassuring rather than demoralizing. If the ending of the career of this world as a planet is to me a tremendous physical catastrophe, a probable reabsorption into the sun by an impact of collision which will instantly vaporize it by the enormous heat generated by collision, this apparently tragic and utter ending of the earth is an ending ordained by God, along the lines of infinite wisdom and love. It will be no more remarkable, when viewed in this light, than the dropping of an autumn leaf, that, having served its function, is bidden to subserve other uses.

It is worthy of remark that the statement of our Saviour that this planet would come finally to fiery extinction, anticipated by near 2000 years the deductions and conclusions of astronomical science. For a generation at least, astronomers have known that the earth was slowly drawing nearer to the sun. As this approach is by very easy stages, although positive and actual, it will be many hundreds of thousands of years before the final catastrophe occurs. And so, just now, we need be under no immediate apprehension, in spite of the periodic alarms of our friends, the Second Adventists.

Before this happens, the education of the human race will have been finished. Before this happens, all terrestrial heat will probably have left the body of this planet. With the cooling of the earth, all water on the surface of the globe, and all atmosphere will have been drawn into the core of the earth, and the earth will have become a dead planet like the moon. With the cooling of the earth, and the disappearance of water and air, all organic life, vegetable and animal, will have ceased, and the earth become a dead planet. Gradually the centrifugal motion which keeps the earth away from the sun, as it whirls around it, will be overcome by the centripetal attraction which is drawing the earth toward the sun. Let me explain by a simple illustration: A boy ties a stone on the end of a string, after the manner of a sling. He swings it round and round. Should he let go the string, the stone would fly off into space. But holding tightly to the string, he gradually shortens it, and in the meantime keeps the stone whirling, the stone will presently strike his hand when the string is short enough. And the stone will strike hard. Astronomy tells us that the earth is the stone, and the sun is the boy. The string is the invisible cord which we call gravity. The sun is gradually shortening this cord. When it is short enough, this power of gravity will pull the earth into the sun. The earth will strike the sun so hard that its entire mass will be vaporized in an instant and all its constituent elements resolved into its original condition. So vast is the sun that any one of its great chasms, which we call spots, is large enough to swallow the earth without touching its sides. So vast is the sun that the addition to it of this whole planet would be as if we threw a single lump of coal into a great furnace.

Although all life will have ceased before this cataclysm, when we reflect upon the destruction of the triumphs of art, science and civilization, the numberless marvellous things which men have made and built and deemed of priceless value, all to go in one fiery holocaust, some considerations present themselves to thoughtful minds. And first, perhaps, to the pious thinker comes the thought that, however God may have prepared to grow the earth to produce [illegible] development [illegible] nature [illegible] in the service of man, [illegible] ization blossoming into morality and culture might be fore taste of and preparation for our life as it will be lived in higher spheres.

Entirely apart from considerations of the coarseness and crassness of barbarous and semi-barbarous peoples, and the lowest classes of civilization, several hundreds of thousands of years will be necessary before the moral, spiritual and social training of our race approaches satisfactory conditions. The conviction therefore is forced upon us, that in the thought of God, moral and spiritual education is of paramount importance, and that all things earthly subserve this end by the appointment of divine providence. Hence man must always be regarded as infinitely greater than the world itself, and all the triumphs of civilization.

God's dealings with human life are not so inscrutable after all. To the obedient, affectionate and right-minded child in our homes, the laws of the household and the will of the parents are never subjects of mystery. Such child knows by the instinct of right perception that they are for its well-being and ultimate advantage.

And so it comes that the final fiery destination of the world, after it has served its purpose, fills us with no dismay. It will have served its use as the schoolroom in which we were all trained.

We, I take it, shall be elsewhere, and not greatly concerned that the sun has devoured our old home. We may therefore contemplate the fiery ending of this world with entire equanimity. And yet herein is a marvellous thing. Science assures us that even after millions of years of use of this world by animals and men, its elements will be just as fresh and undiminished as when the world began. Nothing will have been worn out. Everything in use only changes. Its apparent wear and tear is only a passing from one form to another form. A bundle of wood is placed in our kitchen stove to kindle the fire. It is consumed. It ashes represent what the tree took from the soil. Its carbon goes up the chimney, restoring to the air what some tree took from the air. Nothing was lost. The earth received again what it originally gave. To the air was restored its original contribution of carbonic acid gas, which the leaf manufactured into wood. And so God has made a universe of perennial youth, where nothing is lost or can be lost.

It is the law of God that the endings of all things are the beginning of new things. When night ends, day begins. When summer ceases, winter is upon us. The old year ends only to project its power or weakness into the new. Nothing is stationary. All things are fluid and progressive.

The sure and final ending of this planet suggests that it was but the home and school room of human life in its initial stages. When we leave it for a larger and greater world, or when it finally ceases to be there need be no regret nor undue alarm.

Our considerations, in looking forward, cause us to read into life as it is the great truth that all things are by divine appointment working toward a great ethical and dramatic conclusion.

In spite of the present popular tendency against church attendance, I believe that more people are truly and thoughtfully religious than ever before. It is bound to be so when people become thoughtful. For then they must see that "Now we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come." But all this is the story of the gospel. Our Saviour taught distinctly that this life is but the preparation for higher life. He incited us to prepare for it carefully. He promised that no one who set his face towards the skies should want grace and strength for the difficult upward climb. The beautiful Church of God stands pledged for this assistance. It exists to help men upward and onward. It exists to help men not only in all social ways along the hard lines of life, but to give them a strong hand as they struggle out of the natural into the spiritual and eternal. The natural being left well behind, it need not greatly concern us what becomes of it.

A Prayer For the Aged.

Oh, most merciful God, cast me not off in the time of my old age. Forsake me not if my strength faileth. May my hoary head be found in righteousness. Preserve my mind from dotage and imbecility, and my body from protracted disease and excruciating pain. Deliver me from despondency in my declining years, and enable me to bear with patience whatever may be Thy holy will. I humbly ask that my reason may continue to the last; and that I may be so comforted and supported that I may leave my testimony in favor of the reality of religion and of Thy faithfulness in fulfilling Thy gracious promises. And when my spirit leaves this clay tenement, Lord Jesus, receive it. Send some of the blessed angels to convey my inexperienced soul to the mansions which Thy love has prepared; and, oh, may I have an abundant entrance ministered unto me into the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—Archibald Alexander, D. D.

An Unappropriate Blessing.

Is not God, Who made the sun to shine, also willing and able to let His light and His presence so shine through me that I can walk all the day with God nearer to me than anything in nature? Praise God, He can do it. Why, then, does He do it so seldom, and in such feeble measure? There is but one answer; you do not permit it. You are so occupied and filled with other things—religious things, perhaps—that you do not give God time to make Himself known, and to enter and take possession.—Andrew Murray.

Behind the Veil.

You will see again all those you have loved; you will recognize them. . . . It is not possible to expect too much of God; every anticipation will be infinitely surpassed. The purest light which [illegible] could fall [illegible]

QUEER PENSION STORY.

Government Says Woman Has Drawn $868 as Her Stepfather's Widow.

A story that rivals the tales of Zola was thrown upon the desk of A. S. Van Valkenburgh, United States District-Attorney, yesterday, being twelve pounds of the record of the pension case of Sarah Baker, or Kinder. Pension examiners claim to have found that the woman was declaring herself to be the widow of her stepfather, and that in that role she had actually received some $868 in pension money.

Early in the '60s an Illinois soldier named Baker married Nancy Brown. It is outside the story but inside the facts that he had buried one wife whose name too had been Nancy. Nancy Brown had been the widow of a soldier, and she had got a pension for his death, losing that pension when she married a second soldier named Baker, from whom she was divorced. They had a child named Sarah.

Being out of soldiers again, Nancy took unto herself a third, this time the Illinois man named Kinder. To Kinder she took her daughter by her former husband, Sarah. Sarah had attractions for the soldier, so the Government papers read, for the real wife found herself supplanted by the daughter, "compelled to take the name of Mrs. Robertson, and to say that she was assisting in the work."

The condition of affairs in this extraordinary household by this time established in West Plains, southern Missouri, is told in the last paragraph of the Government report.

Kinder died, and the Government heard of his death when, as it was supposed, the widow applied for a pension for herself and their four children. The claim ran through the various channels pension claims have to take; pension examiners went to the Kinder home and made personal examinations and investigations, as they always do, and so well was the proof of the claims of the supposed widow, Sarah Kinder, established that not only she but the four children also were put on the pension list and kept there for four years. They were paid as the widow and children of the Illinois veteran.

Last April Washington heard from another Mrs. Kinder. This time it was Mrs. Nancy Kinder, who claimed a pension as the widow of the William Kinder. Two and two were put together, and it was found that while there were two Mrs. Kinders in the files, the one drawing a pension and the other wanting to, there was only one William Kinder claimed as their husband.

Away went the pension examiners again, this time with a clue that led straight to West Plains, where Mrs. Nancy Kinder was, and there, it is claimed, they learned of the state of affairs which had made her stand by and see her own daughter take her husband, but not the daughter's father, away from her and made her be the servant of the house for the sake of peace.

Being unlettered, not certain that she had made herself legally liable, unfamiliar with the changes in the pension laws, the real widow, the mother of the alleged illegal widow, postponed asking for a pension till this year, when her application started the accumulation of a report that already weighs twelve pounds and may send a woman to the Federal prison.—Kansas City Journal.

A Booster Light.

The "boosters" of the town of Montgomery, Ala., have erected a monster electrically illuminated sign bearing the name of their community on the roof of a factory facing the railroad. The sign is 75 feet high and 85 feet long, lit by 2600 lamps, and bears an immense key and the inscription "Montgomery, Your Opportunity," with a sky rocket effect. The idea is to impress the name on thousands of passengers going by on the railroad and possibly ignorant even of the name of the town.—Scientific American.

Yellow Fever.

"Every one knows that when a man has once had yellow fever and recovered, he never contracts the disease again no matter how much he exposes himself to infection," said Dr. Fred S. Williams, of Havana, Cuba. "This ability to resist the minute organisms which cause the malady is called immunity, and in tropical countries where yellow jack is always present it is turned to profit in various ways.

"Thus, during the Spanish-American war regiments of immunes were enlisted in the South for service in the fever-ridden country about Santiago. Again, during the last epidemic in New Orleans, many persons purposely exposed themselves to infection because the disease prevailed in a very mild form, and they concluded that if they were infected they would quickly recover and would be immune during severe epidemics in the future.

"Science is making such rapid strides in the way of discovering means to steel the human body against infectious diseases that before many years the most virulent ailments which are now looked upon as almost incurable will be within the control of medical science."—Washington Herald.

Rise of Lady Tree.

Lady Tree, upon whom congratulations are being showered no less heavily than upon her husband, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, has in her time played many parts and is even more versatile than the new theatrical knight himself. For, having had a brilliant career at Queen's college, she began life as a classical tutor there; then she made a reputation for herself as Miss Helen Maude, an amateur actress. Finally she achieved brilliant success as a Shakespearian actress, as a comedienne and as the female villain in melodrama. Lady Tree is a brilliant Greek scholar, one of the wittiest women speakers in England, a good musician and a skilful needlewoman, while she wields with no small skill the pencil and the brush.—Lady's Pictorial.

Millions of Pupils.

Broadly speaking, the educational systems and institutions of the United States, public and private, enrolled in 1906-'07 in the neighborhood of 19,000,000 pupils of all grades and classes. About 20 percent of the total population attended the common schools for a longer or a shorter period. This percentage had been pretty nearly stationary for thirty years. In the meantime, however, the average length of the common school year had advanced from 130 days to a little over 150 days, and the percentage of those enrolled who were on the average in actual attendance each day of this longer school year had advanced from 62 percent to 70 percent.—Report of the Commissioner of Education.

Safety Razorback.

The traveler exhibited a peculiar nervousness on seeing the long-legged, slim, fierce-looking hogs that roamed at will over the country. At length he asked a native sitting on a fence by the roadside: "Aren't these razorback hogs rather dangerous?" "I never heard of none of them doing any harm," remarked the native. "I think they must be safety razorbacks."

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

Paper Clothes Sure Thing

Some time ago the report was circulated in this country of the discovery of a process to make clothes from paper. The new cloth was named xylolin, and the discovery was credited to a Saxon. The American consuls in Saxony made an investigation of the report and found a really serviceable cloth made from paper wood fibre. The discovery is the result of years of pains-taking study and experimenting, and is regarded as a remarkable and important achievement.—Grit.

The use of the gas furnace for forging, tempering and hardening steel is spreading among the workshops where cutlery and tools are made. The old "hearths" are disappearing, replaced by small, clean gas furnaces, which are not only economical in space and cost of running, and comparatively clean and neat, but furnish a uniform temperature of any desired degree, thus avoiding damage to the steel through "burning," or irregularity of temperature. The working of the furnaces is economical, because the gas can be cut off the moment the operation is finished.

Stop Women And Consider

This Fact—that in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, was for years under her direction, and has ever since her decease continued to advise women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty causes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. Such questioning and examination is unnecessary. Without cost you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The Farmers' National Union is working hard to have national legislation against gambling in futures. This is a right move, for not only the farmer but the consumer also will be benefited if it succeeds. As matters now stand, argues the Indiana Farmer, prices of both stock on foot and cured meats are set by this gambling system. If every branch of the gambling in futures were wiped out there would not be the friction in affairs that now exists in the Government.

COTTON MAN DISGUSTED; SELLS SEAT ON EXCHANGE

New York, N. Y.—Charles T. Kaplinger, of New Orleans, a member of the New York Cotton exchange, sold his seat for $12,000. The last previous sale was at $11,000. Mr. Kaplinger says he is disgusted with the way things are going on in the cotton exchange and that he wanted to get out before they get worse.

GREAT DAMAGE DONE BY FREEZE

South Suffers from Cold That Is Unprecedented.

COTTON CROP BADLY HURT.

Snow Falls in Many Places Where Snow Was Never Before Seen at This Period of the Year.—Much Damage Done.

The loss by cold weather is as follows:
Illinois, $5,000,000.
Indiana, $5,000,000.
Iowa, $5,000,000.
Ohio, $1,000,000.
Tennessee $1,000,000.
Minnesota, $1,500,000.
Wisconsin, $3,000,000.
Michigan, $10,000,000.
Nebraska, $2,000,000.
Kansas, $5,000,000.

Chicago.—Despite the almost unprecedented storm that swept over a dozen states in the last day or two and government predictions of more cold and snow, the shifting of the wind to the northeast promises to mitigate extensive crop damage has resulted in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Greatly reduced fruit crops and loss of early corn are certain.

Reports from the northwest indicate that barley, oats, rye and corn were badly damaged by the cold. The soil, however, is still in fine condition for plowing and it is not too late for reseeding.

In Kansas, Missouri and Kentucky, snow is expected to protect small fruits and lessen the loss on apples.

Mississippi, Tennessee and Arkansas report show that considerable damage has been done by the coldest late April weather on record in those states.

Information from Wisconsin and Michigan indicates that the fruit crop will not be much more than one-half the usual yield.

Montgomery, Ala.—In anticipation of a heavy frost which he believes will destroy the cotton crop of the state, Commissioner of Agriculture J. A. Wilkinson is telephoning to every cotton seed oil mill of the state to abandon crushing the seed temporarily to await the outcome of the weather.

If the crop is ruined, this seed will be needed for replanting. Already the commissioner has stopped 30,000 bushels at one mill.

The weather bureau here indicates heavy frost which will ruin all plant life.

Outlook is Gloomy.

Columbus, Miss.—Snow and sleet visited this section and proved destructive to all vegetation. The fruit crop was seriously damaged and early cotton was killed. A number of farmers from the prairie section west of the Tombigbee, who are the first in this section to plant cotton, were in Columbus this morning for the purpose of procuring seed for a second planting. The crp outlook is gloomy, and not only planters, but merchants, bankers and business men generally are discouraged.

Cotton Ruined.

Huntsville, Ala.—An unseasonable freeze and heavy blighting frost brought disaster to the farming interests of northern Alabama.

Hundreds of acres of cotton were killed and the planters believe the sprouting seed in the ground has been ruined. There is but little seed in the country for replanting. Potatoes, beans and other garden products are killed. Wheat and oats were ruined. The fruit crop is also hurt.

Snow at Sylacauga.

Sylacauga, Ala.—Snow fell here this morning for about two and one-half hours, melting as fast as it fell. This is the first snow that Sylacauga has had during the month of April for over fifty years.

The farmers say they cannot tell yet whether this cold snap has injured their crops very much or not, but it is sure that they are hurt to some extent.

Gardens Catch It.

Gadsden, Ala.—Freezing weather prevailed in Etowah county. Fruit growers say that peaches have been damaged to some extent. All garden produce has been killed. Cotton planted and up has also been destroyed, and will have to be replanted. It is feared that the ruin will be completed by another hard frost tonight.

Ruin at Anniston.

Anniston, Ala.—Snow fell here. Frosts have been heavy for two or three days and it is feared all crops are ruined.

Temperature is Rising.

St. Paul.—The temperature has been slowly rising in the northwest and indications for still warmer weather. Reports to the Pioneer Press from the entire northwest indicate that barley, oats, rye and young corn were more or less damaged by cold waves and that the soil is in excellent condition for plowing. The reports say it is late for seeding [illegible] are said, [illegible] considerable damage.

Snowstorms in Missouri.

St. Louis—Heavy snowstorms and a high wind with a temperature several degrees below freezing are reported throughout Missouri and South western Illinois.

A report from Lebannon, Mo., in the heart of the apple district, states that farmers have given up the crop and have ceased smudging.

The peach and berry crops, according to the St. Louis weather bureau officials, are probably also destroyed, although it is hoped that a rising temperature will save a portion of both.

A severe snowstorm is reported as raging in the vicinity of Cario, Ill.

The minimum temperature in St. Louis was 25 degrees and similar registrations are reported throughout a radius of 150 miles.

Weather Records Broken.

Springfield, Ill.—All records for late cold weather in central Illinois were broken today. It was 10 degrees below freezing in Springfield and other central Illinois points. The total snowfall was three inches according to an official statement issued by Director Burns of the government weather bureau.

Never before has there been more than a trace of snow recorded after April 15 in this region.

Reports of crop damage poured in but the loss cannot be definitely determined at present.

Snow Falls in Memphis.

Memphis,—For several hours snow fell in Memphis and the surrounding country. The temperature went down to 32 degrees. Local weather records going back 30 years show that this record is the coldest weather and the only snowfall ever known here on April 24 as far as records go.

The cold wave extended across north Mississippi. It is not believed that vegetation except the more delicate varieties will be seriously damaged.

Much Damage in George.

Atlanta, Ga.—Snow fell to the depth of one to two inches throughout north and central Georgia, Alabama, parts of North and South Carolina, and Tennessee. It was the worst April snowstorm on record, the nearest approach being in 1861. Reports from Anniston, Alabama, Macon, Ga., Chattanooga, Tenn., and Talladega, Ala., report that fruits, vegetables and crops have been greatly damaged.

Many Fruit Men Ruined.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—All growing vegetation and fruit is undoubtedly destroyed, and many fruit growers will be practically ruined. Strawberries, which would have been ready for shipment today, are all killed. The railroad yards were full of cars to commence shipping this week. The loss will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Sioux City, Ia.—High winds which have prevailed in this locality and South Dakota for the last 24 hours subsided. The thermometer registered 26 degrees, the ground freezing and it is believed heavy damage has resulted to small grains. Gardeners and fruit growers sustained heavy damage. The local forecast is for heavy frosts although the temperature is rising slowly.

Killing Frosts in Ohio.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Killing frosts have been reported from practically all the principal points in Ohio. In Columbus, Cincinnati and Cleveland the mercury fell below the freezing point on Saturday night and according to United States Forecaster Jas. K. Nesley frost, snow and rain is the immediate outlook.

Frost In Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—A light frost fell in the lowlands of Oklahoma. J. P. Slaughter of the United States weather station says the temperature of the last few days is the coldest ever recorded at this season. Crops, however, have not suffered serious damage from the cool weather.

Freezing in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark.—Reports show a freezing temperature and heavy frosts in many places. Where there was a heavy frost it is believed cotton, corn and other growing crops have been materially damaged, and it is feared the entire crop will be killed.

Snow Flurries in Nashville.

Nashville—At times appearing storm proportions flurries of snow were intermittent here through the day. The flakes were notably large, but melted as fast as they reached the ground. They [illegible] moment [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

CLANTON PRESS.

VOL. I. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, MAY 5 1910. NO.

Register in Clanton

PERSONAL MENTION.

Rev. F. M. Vines and son, Mr. T. S. Vines of Ennis, Texas, are visiting friends and relatives in Clanton. This is Mr. Vines' first visit to Clanton in 22 years, and naturally he sees many improvements in the town from which he has been so long absent.

Mr. J. Fenn Jones of the Gamble Hardware company left on last Tuesday morning for Birmingham, where he goes to attend the session of the State Retail Hardware Dealers now in convention at that place.

Mr. Duke Logan of Birmingham was a pleasant visitor to Clanton during the latter part of last week; he returned to his home Sunday afternoon.

Mr. J. P. Gore made a hasty trip to the Capital City on last Saturday.

Mr. J. D. Sims, one of the best friends The Press has, was a caller at our offices last Saturday. Mr. Sims is an enthusiastic democrat and prophesises victory for the ticket in November, next.

Dr. H. M. Nix and Mr. Robert Morris of Maplesville were pleasant callers at The Press offices last Saturday; while here they left several subscriptions to the paper, besides transacting other business with us. Always more than pleased to see such worthy young gentlemen in our offices; call again when you are over this way.

Rev. I. O. Retherford of Lime Springs was in the office last week and spoke kindly of The Press. His words had the true ring, for behind those words was a bright silver dollar which he left with his address. It is needless to say that we give a most hearty welcome to all such callers.

As for PIANO tickets at Upchurch Drug Co. We give them with each purchase.

Rev. S. M. Adams of Thorsby was handshaking with his numerous Clanton friends last Saturday.

Hon. F. A. Gullege of Verbena, one of the foremost men of Chilton, and a prince of good fellows, was a caller at The Press offices last Saturday. During his conversation he spoke encouragingly of the outlook. Mr. Gullege leaves in a few days for a combined business and pleasure trip through Oklahoma and other western states. After this he is contemplating an extended trip, on pleasure bent, through the great lakes of the north and east.

Miss Mildred Mitchell and Miss Erma Duffe, two Verbena's charming young ladies, paid a visit to Clanton last Tuesday.

We carry a full line of paints, oils, varnishes, etc., Our prices are right, too. See us before purchasing. Upchurch Drug Company, the place where your dollar does its duty. tf

Mr. Reese Mullens, though not a veteran in years, could not withstand the temptation to join the old veterans during the reunion at Mobile. He enjoyed his trip immensely and says that though not old enough in years to become a member of their ranks his experience enables him to hold his own with the most ancient of those who wore the gray.

Mr. Smith C. Fuller, a brother of Mrs. Guy Higgins, stopped over in Clanton for a few days returning from attendance upon the convention of Sons of the Confederacy, which met in Mobile last week.

Mrs. D. K. Middleton and children left last Friday for their future home at Okmulgee, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Lake of Birmingham came down last Saturday to visit the family of Mr. G. P. Aldridge. Mrs. Lake will remain in Clanton for several days.

Remember that Carter, the Furniture Man, is selling out at cost, previatory to moving to Prattville. If you need anything in his line now is the time to secure it at absolute cost. He gives piano contest tickets, too.

E. Lawson Campbell of Tampa, and General Taylor and daughter Miss Lucy, of the same place were visitors to the family of Mr. and Mrs. Crit Jones during the week. They came up from the reunion at Mobile and returned to their home on Sunday last.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church had a most delightful meeting last Monday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Adams. During the afternoon refreshments were served which were greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Adams makes a most excellent hostess for such entertainments.

Miss Eleanor Sartor, who is attending school in Birmingham this year, came down to spend Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sartor.

Mr. J. N. McKee of Mineral Springs was a most pleasant caller at the offices of The Press last week.

Dr. J. E. Gowan—have you noticed his radiant countenance of late? Well, he has a right to shine. One of the sweetest cherubs in all the world made his appearance at the Gowan home last Friday. Mother and son are happy and contented.

Mrs. Sallie Foshee of Birmingham spent last Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Guy Higgins.

Mrs. Singleton Parrish of Montgomery was a pleasant visitor to Clanton last Sunday, having come up to spend the day with her sister, Mrs. R. E. Luckie.

What has become of that WATER WAGON? The dust is becoming almost unendurable again, and if it doesn't hurry up and put in an appearance some one will complain.

Mr. Jones informed The Press man that he had received notice of shipment on the twenty-third of April. Perhaps that accounts of its delay—twenty-three is rather an unluck number.

By the way, we offered a year's subscription to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for the water wagon. But one suggestion has been made so far. Perhaps the people of Clanton do not care so much for names after all—but that's the way it goes in other cities.

Remember if you have suggestions to make Lizzie and Maud are barred.

As for PIANO tickets at Upchurch Drug Co. We give them with each purchase. tf

The Clanton Press job office is kept busy turning out the latest letter heads, statements and envelopes for the merchants of Clanton. Nor is the trade confined to Clantan either. From all over this section of the state come orders to our shop asking that we execute work for merchants, planters and others.

We have the neatest job office in the state and the best selection of type ever gathered in a job office. If you doubt this, call on us and let us show you. We like to see folks from Joplin.

The Press has received several grape vine messages of late telling of June brides, but in each instance the message said "Keep mum till we tell you to speak," so mum we are.

Don't fail to ask for tickets at J. E. Evans' place and at Headley & Co.'s.

Quite a numper of surprises are in store for those who are keeping tab on the piano contest. Strange no one person has led the contest twice. Who will lead next week is the all absorbing question. We hear of several who have a big bundle of votes which they are saving up for the final reckoning. Better cast them now and let your friends get the benefit of such encouragement as a large vote affords.

On last Sunday at the Baptist church after a most excellent sermon the pastor, Rev. F. M. Woods, opened the doors of the church for the reception of members. Three took advantage of this opporunity and connected themselves with the church.

Next week is court week in Clanton and will be the first time that the new jury law has been tested here. We predict that the people will like the operation of this law so well that they will wonder how they ever managed to get along without it.

The long looked for WATER WAGON arrived last Tuesday and is now being put in shape to adorn the streets and to conquer the dust nuisance. Some one has suggested the name "Camille" as a suitable name. Are there any other suggestions? Let them come in as rapidly as you wish.

Miss Minnie Muse, Clanton's up-to-date milliner, spent Monday of this week in Birmingham on business connected with her establishment.

Madames P. C. Daniel and F. E. Dennis spent Sunday at Verbena.

Piano contestants are reminded that Headley & Co., and J. E. Evans are now handling contest tickets. When you trade with either of these enterprising firms ask for the tickets. They are glad to give them to you. One by one the merchants are falling into line and realize the advantage of handling these tickets. They are great advertisers as well as CASH trade getters.

Rev. Mr. Mills has received a communication from Rev. Mr. Kline stating that he will be here on the third Sunday in May to begin the series of meetings scheduled for the Methodist church. Please note the change in date. Mr. Kline is a noted evangelist and all should arrange to hear him frequently while here. We clip the following from an exchange in reference to the meeting recently held by this divine at Prattville:

Your money's worth or your money back at Upchurch Drug Company. tf

Messrs. Chandler and Downs are fast getting their establishment in shape and expect to throw their doors open to the general public some time within the next day or two.

On the opening day they propose to tender to the Ladies' Aid society the free use of their stock and store, the firm furnishing all the cream, soda water and such articles as they are able to sell. The Ladies' Aid is to receive one-half of the receipts for the day and the firm receive the other half. This is a most generous offer on the part of the new firm and should make them many friends.

We call attention to the large display advertisement of Mr. C. W. Reynolds in this issue of The Press. Mr. Reynolds is preparing for another of his big sales and is looking forward to a tremendous trade.

Piano contestants will please take notice that Mr. Eugene Evans is now handling the Piano Contest tickets. When dealing with this enterprising merchant be sure to ask for piano tickets.

Miss Fannie May Hayne, a most charming young lady of Sandy Ridge is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Thomas A. Curry.

The negro Tobe Kennedy, who was shot last week by his brother and who was thought to be at death's door, is, we hear, rapidly recovering from the gunshot wounds received.

O'Neal Wins the Race
Has Over 13,000 Majority

APPARENTLY SURE WINNERS.

For Governor—Emmet O'Neal.

For Superintendent of Education—H. J. Willingham.

For Associate Railroad Commissioner—Leon McCord.

For United States Senator—John H. Bankhead.

PROBABLE WINNERS.

For Secretary of State—Cyrus Brown.

For Treasurer—John Purifoy.

For Auditor—C. B. Smith.

For Attorney-General—R. C. Brickell.

For Commissioner of Agriculture—R. F. Kolb.

For Chief Justice—J. R. Dowdell.

Birmingham, Ala.—Incomplete returns from thirty-nine counties would indicate that Emmet O'Neal has defeated H. S. D. Mallory for the democartic nomination for governor of Alabama by a decisive majority. The lead will probably range around 13,000.

In the governor's race, the surprising feature seems to have been the many counties Mallory carried in spite of O'Neal's decisive majority. Out of thirty-nine reporting, Mallory appears to have drawn the majority vote in eighteen, nearly half. His strength was cut down, however, by the heavy adverse vote in Mobile, Montgomery, Birmingham and several of the larger cities, the three great centers of the state giving O'Neal a lead of nearly six thousand.

Lieutenant Governor.

For lieutenant governor Thomas seems to have won over Seed, although Seed ran a good race. Later returns may change the race and it will take the count to decide this race, and Seed's friends have by no means given up the race.

Secretary of State.

In the race for secretary of state, Cyrus Brown has evidently defeated Chas. Greer by a good margin. Greer ran heaviest in Hale, his home precint, polling five to one for Brown. In Talladega, however, Brown rolled up 648 against 293 for Greer, the returns being practically complete.

Treasurer.

For treasurer the contest is very close between Wilkison and Purifoy, Hodge not being in the race with any effect. The first two are running very close and this contest is by no means settled.

Auditor.

The auditor's race is another that is close. It seems that Smith is in the lead, but Allgood has certainly polled a heavy vote and claims the election. Kennedy was not in the running.

Superintendent of Education.

H. J. Willingham has cinched the race; DuBose ran second, and Sharpe a poor place for superintendent of education, third. Willingham's victory is practically complete.

Commissioner of Agriculture.

For commissioner of agriculture it appears that Kolb has won the honor. Ward and Johnson made a good race together, but do not seem to be close contenders of the leader.

Attorney General.

Brickell appears in front for attorney general, although Riddle is by no means out of the count. This is another race that must await further returns before a definite statement can be made. Bulger is not in the reckoning.

Railroad Commissioner.

For associate railroad commissioner the one best bet is Leon McCord, who seems to have led the ticket. Hamburgher and Julian are close together for second place, but Julian would appear to have a shade the advantage. Clute, Kennedy, Lusk and Price appear without a chance to overcome the lead of the others.

Chief Justice.

Dowdell is leading for supreme court chief justice, but Nesmith polled a heavy vote and his friends do not concede his defeat. In several counties [illegible]

Associate Justice.

Anderson and Somerville appear to have certainly won the two places on the supreme bench. Evans trailing in almost every county. Somerville seems to be leading the ticket.

Senator.

Senator John H. Bankhead retains his place at the national capitol. His vote is convincing. White ran a good second, in some counties rolling up a larger vote than his opponent, but neither White nor Knox had a chance for the place.

FARMERS MEET IN CONVENTION

St. Louis—With ninety speakers on the programme, each with a particular hobby to expound, the joint convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative union, which began here Monday, is expected to set a new mark for future conventions in number of words and variety of ideas. More than 150 applications received, but only ninety could be accommodated during the six days of the convention. Between 10,000 and 15,000 delegates, representing more than seven million members of more than four hundred farmers' organizations, are expected to be present. The list of speakers include many prominent men, among them being President Taft, who speaks on Wednesday, and William Jennings Bryan, who comes Saturday.

STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ELLIS

Selma—The nomination of H. S. D. Mallory for governor in the primary held Monday is still claimed at hearquarters here by Chairman James B. Ellis. Wednesday afternoon from the headquarters the following signed statement was issued:

"We claim that the face of the official returns will give Mr. Mallory a small majority. We know that many republicans voted in some counties, while our friends claim gross gross irregularities in other counties. If these are established Mallory's majority will be materially increased.

"JAMES B. ELLIS."

The statement issued conveys the impression that fraud will be claimed by the chairman of the Mallory campaign. Some close followers of Colonel Mallory here claim that there were irregularities in the count in Mobile, and Tuesday afternoon a prominent law firm of that city was employed to demand the returns and to make a close investigation and to see there was no tampering with the vote of that county.

During Tuesday Chairman Ellis was often in communication with Chairman Gaut in Birmingham and that afternoon claimed that Mallory was leading with 700 majority. The reports received have not discouraged them as the statement issued shows.

Birmingham, Ala.—The latest reports do not materially change the indicated outcome of Monday's primary.

Despite reports to the contrary it would seem that O'Neal's majority for the gubernatorial honor will not fall below the 12,000 mark, and Chairman Lee Long still claims that it will reach 15,000.

Chairman James B. Ellis, who conducted the Mallory campaign, issued a statement Wednesday afternoon at Selma, claiming that the official returns will give Mallory a small majority and at the same time he intimates fraud and the statement is suggestive that a contest of the election may be made. Chairman Long ridiculed the intimation of fraud.

While both E. Perry Thomas and Walter D. Seed are still claiming the lieutenant governorship, the returns would indicate that Mr. Seed has been elected. Mr. Seed claims the office by a majority slightly in excess of 6,000 votes. If the South Alabama counties come up with the majorities which Mr. Seed claims he is virtually assured of election.

Cyrus Brown had a runaway for secretary of state, carrying even Mr. Greer's home county, Perry, by a small majority.

The outcome of the race for auditor is still indefinite but the indications are that Brooks Smith has defeated Allgood.

Willingham seems, without doubt, to have been elected superintendent of education.

Reuben F. Kolb is elected commissioner of agriculture by a most flattering vote.

While Riddle and Brickell have run a close race for attorney general, it is believed that Brickell will be the successful candidate.

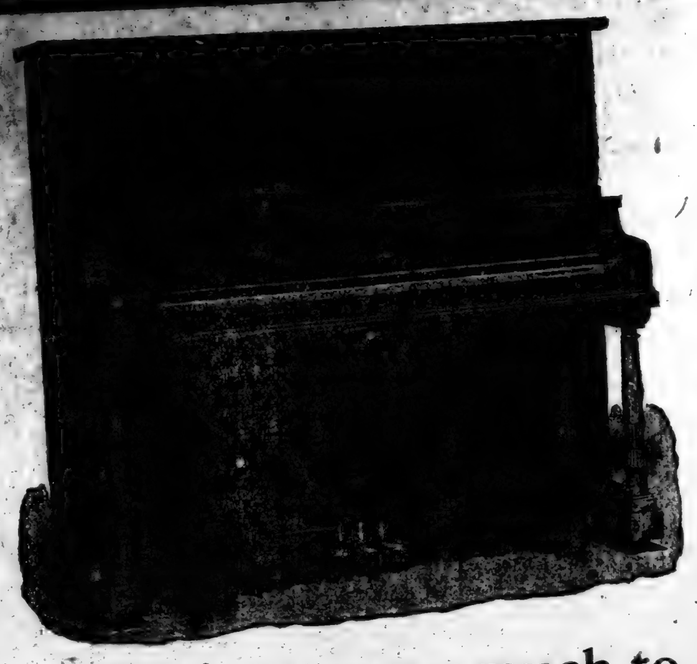
Leon McCord is assured of election as railroad commissioner, while for the other place to be filled Julian and Hamburger are still running neck and neck.

While Judge C. C. Nesmith still claims that he is not beaten, the returns would indicate that Dowdell has been nominated for chief justice of the supreme court.

$40,000 at 10 to 7 on Jeffries.

San Francisco.—Clarence Berry, the oil millionaire, offers to bet $40,000 at odds of 10 to 7 that Jeffries will defeat Johnson in the big fight on July 4. Berry has plenty of money to back his opinions and has had lots of experience with prize fighters. The $40,000 has been posted with a firm of betting commissioners.

Plague Breaks Out in Bassorah.



Washington, D. C.—Plague has broken out at Bassorah, which is situated at the end of the Persian gulf, and under Turkish dominion, according to advices received by the state department from Consular Agent H. P. Chalk. Bassorah is the port from which many dates are exported to this country.

Neill's Report Coming.

Washington, D. C.—Information received by members of congress is that the report of Labor Commissioner Neill to the department of commerce and labor on conditions at the Bethlehem Steel Works, at South Bethlehem, Pa., will be sent to the senate, probably next week, without labor conditions.

Write on the ticket the name of the party for whom you wish to vote and deposit it in one of these boxes.

Women and the Motor Car.

By Robert Sloss.

UNUSUAL physique is not necessary for the woman motorist. Neither sex needs extraordinary muscular development in automobiling, and almost any woman not an invalid can master its mysteries quite as well as a man, provided she has the will and the patience to acquire the know-how. Certainly in the sphere of patience woman by nature is equipped to give man a long handicap. The woman motorist is not half so likely as man is to swear and call loudly for a tow when anything goes wrong with the car. She will more probably set quietly to work to find the trouble and remedy it quite as thoroughly as if she were cleaning out the kitchen range.

"Remember, nevertheless, that though sex and slight physique are in no sense disabilities to the woman who wants to do her own motoring, and though her feminine patience and intuition stand her in good stead, she must not expect to succeed by intuition alone.—Outing.

The Fun of Fishing.

By Dr. J. A. Henshall.

IT is not all of fishing to fish. Rather, it is the opportunity that angling affords for the realization and enjoyment of Nature's resources, with the subsequent compensation of renewed health and strength. The cares and anxieties and perplexities of everyday life are forgotten as the angler wades the merry stream and casts his flies on the flashing water. He is wholly obsessed with his pursuit and has unbounded faith in his methods.

And while the eager expectancy of a response to his lures absorbs his every faculty, he enjoys, at the same time, in a subconscious way, the beauties of Nature surrounding and investing him. The voices of the stream are ever in its ears—the leaping and splitting of the water as it sparkles on the riffle or whirls in the eddies. He hears the song of the birds, the hum of insects, and the whispering of the leaves as the sunlight filters through them.—Outing.

MILEAGE TICKET RULES ARE STRONGLY UPHELD

A Man Who Buys Them Accepts Them With Restrictions.

SOUTHERN ROADS ARE ONES.

In Order Just Issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in Which the Commission Upholds Commissioner Harlan's Opinion.

Washington, D. C.—In an order just issued by the interstate commerce commission, in which the commission, by unanimous action, upholds the opinion of Commissioner James S. Harlan in the case of Bernard Eschner vs. the Pennsylvania Railroad Company et al., the principle of the mileage ticket exchange regulation now in effect on the railroads in the southeast is upheld. The order is of great importance to railroads issuing interchangeable mileage tickets and to purchasers of such tickets.

In this order the commission says: "The right to use exchange orders and mileage tickets is in the nature of a privilege voluntarily accorded by carriers under their tariffs, and must be accepted by those who use such special fares with all lawful and nondiscriminatory limitations that may be attached to them."

Three important points made by the commission are that the issuance of mileage tickets is in no sense compulsory, but is permissible and voluntary on the part of the carriers, that purchasers of mileage tickets may not lawfully be constituted into a special class, but must come under the general law common to all passengers, and that purchasers of mileage tickets are bound by the lawful contract features of that form of reduced rate transportation.

The commission goes so far as to hold that purchasers of special reduced rate transportation, such as mileage tickets, have no legal right to demand the same privileges and advantages that are accorded to a passenger who has paid the regular fare at a higher rate. The carriers have never gone to this extent, but while making the mileage ticket regulation for their protection, have afforded the same privileges and advantages to the purchasers of mileage tickets as are given to purchasers of other forms of transportation.

This order of the commission supports the views of state railroad commissions, legislatures and other tribunals in the southeast to which the mileage ticket exchange regulation has been submitted.

MEMORY OF DANIEL BOONE IS HONORED.

Salisbury, N. C.—A shaft to the memory of Daniel Boone and a replica of the log cabin in which the Boone family lived was dedicated with elaborate services at Holman's Ford, near here. The cabin was erected on the exact spot of the old Boone homestead, near the Yadkin river, where Boone spent nineteen years of his life The intrepid hunter built himself a cabin there in 1755. The ruins of his frontier residence passed away years ago, but the new cabin is an exact duplicate in every particular. The shaft forms an Indian arrow 15 feet high upon a massive base. Ornamenting this is a bronze tablet bearing the name, "Daniel Boone," and the date of his residence in North Carolina. Governor Kitchin and other prominent persons participated in the services.

GIRL SHOT TO DEATH; COMPANION WOUNDED.

Charleston, S. C.—Miss Margaret Musgrave, 22 years old, is dead, and Clarence E. Grimshawe, a conductor on the Southern Railway, is seriously wounded as the result of a mysterious shooting on a lonely causeway. The young man and the girl were out walking together. About 10 o'clock Grimshawe staggered to the city hospital, saying he had been shot. The police went to the scene and found Miss Murgrave lying on the ground desperately wounded. Residents of the neighborhood heard five shots, but there were no witnesses. The girl died the next morning. The coroner obtained an ante-mortem statement, but has not made it public.

WOMAN WEARS OVERALLS BY GOVERNOR'S CONSENT.

Topeka, Kan.—An Oswego, Kan., widow has written Governor Stubbs asking permission to wear trousers, overalls and other articles of men's garb while working about her home. The letter states that the writer was a widow with several children to support. She lives on the outskirts of Osego and makes a living for herself and children on her small garden. She has found that while at work her skirts become dirty and she bought a pair of overalls and wore them. The neighbors stirred up trouble and insisted that a woman wearing men's trousers was a violation of the law. The letter was referred to the attorney- general, who replied that there was no law prohibiting a woman wearing men's overalls and that the consent of the state officers was given with the hope that the articles of apparel would prove useful.

PRINT PAPER CRISIS IS NOT FAR AWAY.

Washington, D. C.—It is officially announced here that the United States will take some action to prevent, if posisble, the emigration of laborers to Canada, because of the recent action of the province of Quebec inhibiting the exportation of pulp wood from crown lands into this country. Methods are now being devised by the United States tariff board and the United States bureau of trade relations which, it is thought, may tend to lessen this emigration. Chairman Emery, of the tariff board, expressed satisfaction with the present tariff relations between the United States and Canada, and said that within the next six or seven years a crisis might be expected. He said American paper companies will have to establish pulp and paper mills for the manufacture of print paper in Canada.

WANTED TO SEE MOVING PICTURES.

Baton Rouge, La.—The resumption of the trial of Dr. E. C. McKowen for the murder of E. K. Judson, the Jackson Insane Asylum inmate, followed a day of close guarding by the jury and no particular enjoyment of Sunday by some of the jurymen, according to rumors from the jury room. Tired of confinement in a local hotel, one of the jurors asked of Judge Brunot: "May we go to the moving picture shows?" The judge considered the matter for awhile and finally decided that the jury could not. "If you select any church you wish to attend, you may go," he supplemented. "If we can't go to a moving picture show I'll be hanged if I'll go anywhere," said the juror who made the request. He "hung" the jury. The body stayed in their rooms all day.

TWO ACCUSED OF POISONING A BRIDE.

Arkansas City, Ark.—Louis Patterton and Mrs. Emma A. Allen, his foster mother, were arrested here upon a coroner's warrant that charges them jointly with having caused the death by poison of Mrs. Frances Kimmell Patterton, wife of G. W. Patterton. Mrs. Patterton was a bride of a few months, who died suddenly in January last. Mrs. Patterton died after a brief illness. The cause of death was given as "Addison's disease." The warrant charges that Mrs. Patterton came to her death "from poison, namely, arsenic, administered by the said Louis Patterton and Mrs. Allen." Patterton was released on furnishing a $10,000 bond to appear for trial May 11. Mrs. Patterton left real estate valued at $20,000 and a life policy for $5,000. The insurance policy, which was made payable to her estate, has not been paid.

LITTLE ROCK IS CHOSEN FOR 1911

Gen. Gordon Succeeds Evans as Commander-in-Chief

OWENS HEADS THE SONS

Big Parade Was Held and the Veterane were Entertained In Many Ways By the People of the Gulf City.

Mobile.—With Little Rock chosen as the reunion city for 1911 and New Orleans endorsed for the honor in 1915 and with an election of officers, the United Confederate Veterans' association closed its business sessions.

The selection of little Rock had been freely predicted and though the Arkansas city lacked a majority on the first ballot it was so far in the lead that a vote to make the unanimous carried with a roar. The vote stood Little Rock 1070, Chattanooga 640, Oklahoma City 17, Houston 10. When Texas was reached the Veterans saw how things were going and they threw their strength to Arkansas.

The endorsement of New Orleans as the meeting place for 1915 was contained in a resolution favorably reported and adopted. It recites that New Orleans proposes to hold a Panama canal exposition in 1915, that this city had asked the veterans to indorse the exposition and attend it in April, 1915. It was resolved however, that each reunion until 1914 take this same action and that the reunion of 1914 follow the idea and meet in New Orleans.

The programme for election of officers was carried out to the letter, Gen. Geo. W. Gordon, of Memphis, commander of the department of Tennessee, was chosen commander-in-chief, succeeding Gen. Clement A. Evans of Atlanta.

General Evans as elected past commander-in-chief and Gen. W. L. Cabell, commander of the Trans-Mississippi division, was also elected past commander-in-chief.

The new commander, General Gordon, has the distinction of being one of the four living Confederate chieftians who were actually major generals before the war ended. He also has a record of being captured by the federal forces three times.

General Gordon will be succeeded in command of the department of Tnnessee by Gen. Bennett Young of Louisville, Ky.

OWENS AGAIN HEADS SONS OF VETERANS

Clarence J. Owens, of Abbeville, Ala., will head the United Sons of Confederate Veterans for another year. Mr. Owens was unanimously re-elected commander-in-chief of the Sons of Veterans at the business session in German Relief Hall. All the other officers of the organization were also re-elected, there being no changes at all made and no opposition to candidates.

The three division commanders were all elected by a unanimous ballot cast by the adjutant. The other officers who were elected are: A. D. Smith, Jr., commander of the Army of Northern Virginia; J. P. Norfleet, of Memphis, commander of the Army o Tennessee; Lloyd H. Read of Dal- of Tex., commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department; Thomas M. Owen, historian general and the following members of the excutive council: F. W. Mahood, member-at-large; W. W. Old, of Norfolk, Va., for the Northern Virginia Department; E. N. Sudder, of Vicksburg, and Thomas E. Powe, of St. Louis for the Trans-Mississippi Department.

After the election of officers resolutions of thanks expressing the appreciation of the Sons of Veterans for the entertainment tendered them were adopted. Thanks were extended to the Geo. W. Dixon camp of Mobile, the Daughters of the Confederacy and the people of Mobile in general.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered to the Forest camp of Memphis for securing permanent headquarters of the Sons of Veterans. Resolutions of thanks to the Rome, Ga., camp for the erection of the first monument to the women of the Confederacy were adopted.

HUGHES CHOSEN BY TAFT FOR THE SUPREME BENCH

Washington.—President Taft received from Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York, a letter accepting the tendered appointment as associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. Five minutes after the letter was handed to the President, the nomination of Governor Hughes was on its way to the Senate. While it is expected that Governor Hughes will be confirmed with little or no delay, it is understood here that he will remain as the chief executive of the State of New York until next October and will then take the oath of office until the fall term of the supreme court, which opens the second Monday in that month. President Taft has been anxious to secure the best man he could for the supreme court vacancy, and he feels that he has done so. He was much elated over the success of his tender to Governor Hughes, and said: "I am very much delighted to secure Governor Hughes for the bench. He is a man of wide experience and marked ability, and it is a mighty valuable thing to have on the great bench of the supreme court a man of affairs. Governor Hughes is 48 years of age, I think, and even if he should retire at 70, he will have had 22 years of solid usefulness on the bench."

THINK HAIR MATTRESS CAUSED FATAL ILLNESS

Brocton, Mass.—Believing that the use of an arsenic cured hair mattress may have caused the death of Mrs. Sadie E. Cartcart and the serious illness of Mrs. W. A. Dean, her mother, City Chemist George E. Bolling, is making tests on the request of Dr. D. H. Swope, the family physician. Mrs. Dean has been seriously ill and at times on the point of death. Mrs. Carthcart died following a slow sickness of blood poisoning, according to the physician's death return. Mrs. Dean has been supposed to suffer from nervous prostration. Others of the household have been ill and all have slept at various times on the hair mattress now under inspection. The resemblance of the Brockton cases to the Kelliher cases, of Cambridge, aroused Dr. Swope's suspicion. "Parts of the mattress hae been examined and the hair is being analyzed to discover arsenic," said Dr. Swope. The tests so far do not warrant the belief that there was a large amount of the poison present, but another and final test will be made to locate the traces which might make the use of such a mattress fatal.

THE ELECTION.

Up to the hour of going to Press it is impossible to give out any accurate figures as to the results in the county primary.

The returning officers, for some reason, failed to bring with them a report of the vote cast in their respective precincts and report merely from memory. The boxes will not be opened till Friday, when the committee meets to canvass the vote and declare the nominees; till then the figures are all more or less speculative. In some parts of the county the state tickets run short and recourse had to be to newspapers from which ballots were cut out for the purpose of casting. The tally sheets and inspectors' returns, so it is said, in some cases, had no provision made for casting up the result for chancelor and other state officers and these were omitted in one or two instances from the general returns.

The Press has made an earnest effort to get the actual returns so that its readers might have the true situation as early as possible but the task has been a fruitless one.

Mallory carried the county by an estimated majority of 100; Dowdell has led his opponent, Nesmith, for chief justice, by approximately 200, and Kilkerson, for treasurer, leads by a flattering majority. Senator Bankhead secures as many votes as his two opponents combined, and Brickell, Julian and Willingham seem to be leading for the offices for which they respectively offered.

The vote on railroad commissioner and justice of the supreme court are not obtainable, though the report has it that Hamburger and McCord have somewhat the advantage over their opponents for railroad commissioners and that Summerville and Evans have distanced Anderson for Justices of the supreme court.

In the county ticket it seems to have been a "get away" race, with Jones for sheriff. His estimated majority in the county is from 100 to 150. His opponents concede his nomination by a safe majority. Deason and Simpson had no opposition for the offices to which they sought the nomination. The same is true of Senator Curry. His vote in the district was a flattering one.

Judge Pearson has distanced his antagonist in the county by a large majority and the same can be safely said of Askew for solicitor.

It is impossible to give figures on the state delegation ticket. As it now stands Adams, Callen, Gaines, Dickinson and Spigener seem to be the favorites, but the official count may change this result somewhat.

Of course, Retherford and Hayes were nominated for commissioners from the First and Second districts, respectively.

We are printing in full the state ticket so far as the figures have been obtained up to the hour of going to press; it seems that the returns are somewhat late in being received, but the figures given in The Press are as reliable as they can be at this hour.

The news that has been flashed about over the state for the past day or two in reference to the election has been so problematical that The Press thought it best to delay publication for one day rather than give to the people uncertain or contradictory news. Both sides in the great contest for the governorship are claiming the victory, and each sets forth figures to substantiate their claims. At one time The Press almost gave up hope of seeing its favorite candidate succeed and wrote a leng thy editorial endorsing the other candidate as the choice of the people of the state, and therefore our choice. Scarcely had the ink dryed before another message came stating that Mallory was in the lead and would in all probability receive the nomination. The news was so gratifying to us that we immediately stopped the publication of the first editorials and began preparation of others. Then again came the news that O'Neal was surely elected and this was in turn denied most strenuously by the Mallory men. Under the circumstances, knowing that our readers are depending upon us for the news, the correct news, we felt justified in delaying the paper one day in order to give them the actual facts.

We think that results have justified our action. Every one now knows who is to be the next governor of Alabama.

You may always depend upon The Press to go to extra trouble and expense if necessary to serve its readers with the very latest news; especially when that news affects their interests so vitally as is the case in the present instance.

Though the state ticket is in some doubt and the powers that be are disputing' claims there is no sort of doubt about the county ticket.

Deason and Simpson and Jones are nominated beyond all question.

They will also be elected on the 8th of November; of that there is no doubt or opportunity for dispute. So that in your cob pipe and take a few whiffs of it.

The election passed off so quietly here that any one not passing the polling place would ever have suspected that a great battle of ballots was hanging in the balance.

We've got no crow to eat. We rather like a little as a side dish occasionally; it makes a fellow appreciate the good things that come his way to have a little bitter thrown in once in a while.

Democracy has done itself proud in old Chilton; now lets keep the lick up without losing a stroke between now and November, then Deason, Jones and Simpson will grace the courthouse with their presence.

It's a good ticket and it looks like a winner to The Press.

The Press rises to remark that it is unqualifiedly for the nominee of the democratic party. Whatever service we can render in making the election unanimous (for there's no question of the election of the candidate, it is only a matter of majority) we shall do not only gladly but joyfully.

Now let all good democrats take up the battle cry and work untiringly till the day of the general election and just as sure as election day comes Deason and Jones and Simpson and Curry will assume the reins of government. This is no time for sulking. We want and must have workers. Let the soreheads and sulkers "advance to the rear," and be quiet while the democracy of old Chilton rolls up its sleeves, figuratively speaking, and administers a sound flogging to those "has beens" who think they are going to continue tto be. We are marching toward the courthouse; let's not falter till we are enthroned within.

The Press is requested to call the attention of heads of families to the fact that the census takers are now in our midst and have about completed their tasks. If any one is omitted he or she should make it a point to see that enumeration is made. Do not wait for some other person to attend to the matter but do yourself. Much is to be gained by a correct and full enumeration; commercial advantages go to those sections which show an increasing population and the establishment of new enterprises.

Enumerator Grady Reynolds informs The Press that he has about concluded the task af census taking in so far as the town of Clanton is concerned and that not a few surprices are in store for those who have set their figures up in the tall timbers. The fact is that our boasted population exists only in the imagination, unless quite a number have escaped the eagle eye and numerous questions of the numbering man.

It will be interesting perhaps to Press readers to know that the census figures for Clanton will go but slightly over the one thousand mark and that full one-third of these are colored. The white population seems to be badly scattered, while that of the colored race is concentrated in one or two localities and counts up rapidly. In one little shanty of two rooms was found a family of 12 negroes and not a few families of eight and ten. The proportion of male and female inhabitants could not me ascertained as the enumerators are not permitted to divulge any information whatever; however, The Press man succeeded in securing enough information in other ways to speak with authority when we say that the population of Clanton will not exceed 1150, and this inclurdes 100 and more gypsies encamped near the outskirts of the town. If you have not been enumerated look up the census man and have him put your name down at once—it will help your town.

And that suggests something to The Press man; what is the population of Chilton county? In the last census it was slightly over 15,000; that was ten years ago; how much have we grown in these ten years? The actual figures are not obtainable just now, but they will be in a very few weeks. Send in your guesses. To the one coming nearest to the actual figures as shown by the census reports on the town of Clanton we will send The Press free of all cost for six months; to the one coming nearest the actual county figures we will give the paper free of all cost for one year.

Just fill out a card stating what your guess is, sign your name and postoffice address, and mail it to The Clanton Press. We will file these guesses away and when the figures are given out by the census office the award will be made.

This is the third proposition The Press has made in this direction.

The other two propositions seem not to have struck a responsive chord in the hearts and minds of Clanton people—we'll see who will take up this proposition and make an effort to secure absolutely free of all cost the best paper Chilton county has ever had.

We call the attention of Chilton democrats to the following clipping from the Advertiser. It points the way to what we may expect in November unless we keep our eyes open and our hands busy. Let no democrat sleep at his post from now until the election in November. We have the victory secured; we have the enemy routed, but in a moment of unwatchfulness they may turn and secure the advantage.

The congressional ticket is not in much danger, nor is the state ticket, but that is no reason why we should rest from our labors.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, said a noted statesman in the days long gone and it is none the less true now. If we are to free ourselves of the republican domination we must work unceasingly:

Anniston, April 27.—(Special.)—The act of the republican executive committee for the Fourth congressional district in calling a convention to be held at Calera on June 28 means that State Senator Fred L. Blackmon, who is running without opposition as a candidate for the office of national representative from this district, will have two opponents, as the prohibitionists have previously stated that they will put out a candidate against him.

Mr. Blackmon feels sure of his election and has not become uneasy over the prespect of a contest.

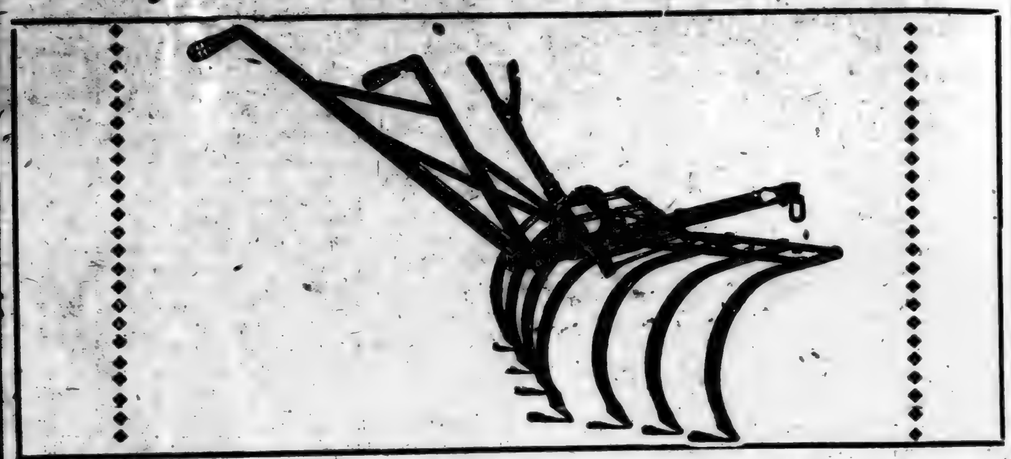
The representation of various counties in the district at the Calera convention will be as follows: Calhoun, 7; Chilton, 10; Cleburne, 4; Dallas, 1; Shelby, 13; Talladega, 5. It is urged that conventions or mass meetings be held in all these counties before June 25 for the purpose of naming delegates to the convention.

J. W. Kitchens is chairman of the Fourth district committee, with F. D. Noble secretary. Mr. Noble is also chairman of the Calhoun county organization and the republicans of this county have signified their intention of making a strong fight for county offices on a dispensary, good roads and law-enforcement platform. They seem more confident than they have been for years.

We are going to make a request of those who are using the piano contest tickets: It is quite a deal of trouble to count the thousands of tickets cast every week. Please do not chew them up before depositing them in the box. They must be preserved till the end of the contest. Don't cast votes "just for fun;" this isn't a funny business; besides, those who receive them when cast in jest do not appreciate them—or the joke. Don't "wad" them up in a lump like a dog's breakfast, it takes tome to straighten them out and count them when they are so badly crumpled. The list of names is growing rapidly; it costs money to keep the names in print, and while we are anxious to please every one, and would be glad if every young lady and young gentleman in Chilton county could get half a million votes, yet we cannot fill up the paper with names. The people wish to see something else in the paper. For this reason we are going to be compelled to limit the number of names that appear hereafter. There are quite a number of persons who have received five votes. Most of these were cast in jest; those for whom they were cast have requested us not to publish their names. After this date we will not publish the names of any one receiving less than 100 votes. A list of all votes cast will be kept and the ballots preserved, but we will not announce the names till the candidate has received at least 100 votes. We do this in fairness to ourselves and to all concerned. If you are in dead earnest about entering some one in the race it will not be a difficult task to secure 100 votes. Hereafter if you fail to see the name of your candidate in print remember it is because you have given that candidate less than the required number of votes.

More than half of Tuesday night and all of Wednesday was spent by The Press man trying to secure for its readers a line on the race for governorship. A number of telegrams were sent and communication established with Birmingham and Montgomery in a vain endeavor to secure reliable information. With the passing of the hours the apparent O'Neal majority has been steadily cut down and Mallory has forged ahead.

Several Wetumpka gentlemen have been in Clanton for a day or two looking after the interest of Tate as a candidate for solicitor. The vote between Tate and Askew seems to be so close that a few votes may decide the contest and these gentlemen seem to be afraid that we are going to practice old political schemes on their favorite candidates. "Set steady in the boat, boys;" we are going to give each candidate all that's coming to him.



If our favorite has won out, and it now seems as if he has, we shall be more than delighted; if on the contrary the other man has received the nomination we shall fling our hat in the air and "holler" as loud as our lungs will permit. The voice of the party is our command, and we shall gladly join the ranks under the leadership of either man and do our utmost to make the election unanimous.

Each of the big daily papers are claiming the nomination for their respective favorite and in the present chaotic state it is impossible to give any reliable information. The Press is giving its readers the very latest information obtainable. We have gone to considerable expense and trouble to secure this information and have it printed.

The vote for solicitor seems now to indicate the nomination of Tate by a very small margin. It may take the official count to decide this contest.

Indications this point to the election of Judge Pearson for circuit judge, but a

Is the most practical and useful tool that has been invented for the use of ranchmen and farmers during the entire history of the barbed wire fence. In fact, the tool is indispensable to any person who has to build or repair a wire fence of any character. It has a wire cutter, staple and nail puller, a wire stretcher, pliers, screwdriver and leather punch combined, so that it is equally adapted for splicing, repairing and building any kind of wire fence. The tool is eighteen inches long, weighs three pounds, and is conveniently adapted for carrying in the hand or tied to the saddle. It is made of the very best drop forged tool steel, with material and workmanship guaranteed, and will last a lifetime. The tool is an entirely new invention, in every way practical, and, as said by a number of stockmen and farmers who have seen it or used it, "It supplies a long felt want." Practical men often remark that it is astonishing that the tool was not invented long ago. It is so simple that every one, without exception, who has seen it is enthusiastic over it, and it is recommended by a number of the leading stockmen of the country. The price is so reasonable that no one can afford to be without it. Sold everyway for $2.50.

Capt. S. D. Dantzler and Col. H. E. Gibson made fine political addresses to a number of interested listeners at this place last Saturday. Of course, it was the very thing the people were looking for, as they were just then deeply interested in the election which was to follow on the Monday after.

The woods have been full of candidates for the offices that were to be filled and they have been busy handshaking and speaking in endearing terms to the "dear people." Wish it were possible for them all to secure office, but some of them were bound, in the very nature of the case, to be dasappointed.

How about that real white, feathery snow we had on the morning of April 25th? Who ever did see such awfully large flakes as that snow was, and who ever saw snow before on the 25th of April, anyway?

I guess we will have to accuse that on Mr. Halley's comet as I hear of no other things to accuse just now.

I presume the farmers are all through replanting by this time. Most of those here who had any replanting to do have about completed the task. It was not the snow that killed vegetation, but the fearfully heavy frost that followed on the morning after the snow.

Messrs. W. T. Patterson, J. S. Jones, J. L. Jones, W. C. Robinson, J. W. Clark, L. A. and Raymond Calloway, J. T. Allen and others had a most delightful visit to the reunion. Guess they have about recovered from their hungry spell by now. Goobers did not get any peanuts while in the Gulf City, so he has informed his friends.

Did you go to the Soldiers' home on the 24th of April to attend the memorial exercises? The programme for the occasion was simply excellent. Hon. J. Osmond made a magnificent speech. Glad to know that we have such a gifted orator in Chilton county.

Our Sunday school is doing fine now, though we are yet hoping for much better results. Our numbers are not what they should be and we are bending every effort to increase the attendance. Will be glad to welcome any who come to our school; we will do all we can to make it both pleasant and instructive for visitors. As we grow larger in numbers we hope to become more effective in the work accomplished.

It begins to look as if we are not to have a baseball team here this summer; if anyone has undertaken to organize a team it has not come to the ears of this correspondent. I sincerely hope that before many more weeks have elapsed we will have an organization here, and if we do you can count on its being a good one. Last year we had about the best team in the county and we can have it again this year if we try. Out of 17 games played last year we lost but two—a pretty good record, isn't it?

Should the team be reorganized Clanton may expect to hear from us. We will give you an opportunity to take revenge for the fearful drubbing the Cooper team gave you last year. BRONX KID.

EVERGREEN.

Editor Press:—Our Sunday school was greatly disappointed when we heard that we would not have the pleasure of entertaining the district Sunday School convention, but it goes to Mountain Creek, and we hope to have a good convention; which, of course, we will if we go and take part as we should.

I guess those that stood the state examination are anxious to hear what they did—passed or failed.

I hope all that are worthy of being teachers passed and I hope all of Chilton's applicants are. But they are not worthy of being called teachers if they are addicted to one or perhaps both of the two worsts habits that any one ever got into; namely, whisky drinking and tobacco using in any form to tempt the boys.

My friends, what good does it do you to drink whisky? The poison called whisky or the vile, filthy stuff called tobacco? Neither is fit to go into a gentleman's mouth—but both do go there.

The tobacco rage is ruining more boys than it ever has since the servant saw Sir Walter Raleigh smoking and thinking him on fire ran crying that his master was on fire and he was on fire, not on natural fire, but (excuse the expression, please) hell fire. It has ruined more boys than ever has been burned by natural fire.

Our society is doing fine and we hope to see it steadily improve.

If this escapes the waste basket I'll try to come again.

We are always anxious to get The Press. HENPECK.

COUNTY NEWS.

On last Saturday the Odd Fellows of Union Grove held their annual commemoration service to which all their friends were invited. It was the ninety-first anniversary of the founding of the lodge.

At 10 in the morning the lodge was called to order by J. M. B. Johnson, N. G., and after a short march from the lodge rooms to the church, a song service was conducted by Mr. G. D. Retherford, Miss Mattie Patton, presiding at the organ.

Prayer was then offered by the chaplain, after which commemoration services were held.

At the conclusion of the commemoration services Hon. E. B. Deason, being introduced by the noble grand, made a most interesting talk on the "Good of the Order," and was followed by Hon. L. H. Reynolds in a fine speech on "Secret Organization."

After the conclusion of these two most instructive and entertaining speeches a song service by the choir, after which the lodge again repaired to the lodge rooms, and adjourned till 2 o'clock.

During the intermission a most bountiful and excellent dinner was served by the ladies of Union Grove and surrounding communities.

At 2 o'clock the lodge was reassembled by order of the noble grand and a song service conducted by Prof. Hall, with Miss Genia Collins as organist, was held and prayer offered by the chaplain.

Then, last but not least, Rev. F. M. Woods was introduced and made a most happy speech on the "Good of the Order."

Another song service was then held, being conducted by Prof. Hall with Miss Carrie Dorminy as organist.

A second time was the lodge reassembled and the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

First, that the speech made by Hon. E. B. Deason be published in all the county papers, provided they will offer space therefor.

Second, that the corresponding secretary furnish the county papers with the proceedings of this lodge.

Third, that we extend to the speakers of the day our heartfelt thanks for their kindness in addressing us.

Awful Burning Itch Cured in a Day.

"In the middle of the night of March 30th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43d Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." John McKay Williams, Bedford City, Va., says: "For two months I suffered from sharp pains across the small of my back and I became so weak I could hardly stand. PHRENOLOGICAL FACTS.

Indications of Temperament Which an Employer Should Consider.

An employer who wishes to select an indoor business man needs a person who has the vital temperament, one who has the following faculties largely represented: Casuality, comparison, human nature, order, calculation, conscientiousness, veneration, and secretiveness.

The head of an indoor business man will consequently be broad in the upper part of the forehead, and will give him capacity to think out original plans and solve complex problems in his works, analytical capacity, and a quick realization of the motives and characteristics of others; broad on the outer angle of the brow, which will give him method in the arrangement of many details and great calculating powers; broad on the posterior lateral and middle parts of the coronal region, to give him honesty in all his dealings and respect for his superiors, and full in the middle lateral portion of the brain, to give him tactfulness and reserve in speech and action.

The general appearance of an indoor business man will be somewhat short, stout, and plump compared with the outer business man. His head will be well developed anteriorly, round rather than long or broad, and high in the front. His countenance will be ruddy, animated, and enthusiastic rather than serious, calm, and dignified.—Phrenological Journal.

TALES OF ADVENTURE

POISON THAT KILLS FEAR.

Curari, the vegetable poison with which the Indians of the Upper Amazon tip their hunting arrows, remains a mystery in its composition after 100 years of investigation by scientists. The Indians will sell it for its weight in silver, but will not reveal the plants from which it is derived. Not long ago a professor in a German university was sent to the Amazon wilderness for the express purpose of discovering the secret, for curari, or urari, as it is otherwise called, is now thought to be of great value in medicine. The professor lived two years in Indian villages, and while he was permitted to witness the boiling of the "witches' broth," which lasted several days, he could not tell what plants went into the brew. Returning from his baffled quest down the Amazon with a quantity of the poison the professor was met by another traveler, Dewey Austin Cobb, who had got possession of a native blow gun. The latter tells how he put some of the professor's curari on some of his blow gun arrows, which are like toothpicks feathered with cotton, and tried it on a buck deer in the forest.

"After a deliberate aim our hunter fired," said Mr. Cobb, "if I may use such a word for the little puff, scarcely heard by us, and entirely inaudible above the rustling corn leaves at the distance of the deer. The animal gave a slight start as it felt the prick of the arrow on its flank and turned partly around, sniffing the air for a scent, and looking about as if searching for the insect that had bitten or stung it. Detecting nothing, it stood still and unalarmed. At the end of a minute, or a minute and a half, at most, its head dropped a little, as if it was sleepy.

"When the hunter saw this he arose and stepped out in plain sight. The deer turned his head and looked at him, and moved forward, not away from him, a few steps and stopped. It showed no fear, but simply curiosity. After another minute the professor and I arose, and all three walked quietly to within reach of it. It made no movement to run away, but watched us intently, and shifted its position a little. Its movements seemed perfectly easy and natural. Absence of fear was the only observable change, until at the end of three minutes more; then it lay down, not falling, but as naturally as a cow or sheep when ready for sleep.

"We all approached its side, and the hunter laid a hand on its shoulder. It looked up at him, but showed no resentment or fear. Even its breathing seemed easy and natural, which surprised me, as I had heard that death resulted from paralysis of the lungs when caused by urari. At the end of ten minutes, though, it opened its eyes when touched, its breath became shorter and slower. Eighteen minutes after it was struck by the arrow it was dead."—National Geographic Magazine.

BABY LOST IN HILLS.

Adelesio, the little three-year-old child of the widow Benito Crespin, of Mineral Hill, while with his brother herding goats, was last seen alive about 3 p. m. last Saturday.

The children are not quite sure about the exact hour that they last saw their little brother; at any rate, by the time that they had taken their goats home and given the alarm, it was impossible to find the little barefoot tracks, even in the moonlight.

All through the bitter cold night seven men, warmly clad, shivered and shook while they searched for the tiny barefoot tot who had on no underwear, only a thin cotton shirt and knee pants.

About 8 a. m. next day R. A. Shearer found his barefoot tracks near the bank of Canyon Hondo Creek, probably a mile from where he had last been seen the day before.

Straight up the canyon the little fellow went, sometimes near—almost dangerously near—the water's edge; and it was always the water that turned his path. His course was straight—straight as an arrow—and the distance between the tiny tracks never varied the slightest degree. For three whole miles he walked, and it must have been intense agony that marked the automatic, measured beat of those tiny bare feet through thickest brush and ledges. How he ever did it will always be a mystery.

To add to the horror, his path had crossed a place where only a short time before a lion had killed and partly eaten a deer. The men, who had come from all directions in increasing numbers, shook their heads when they saw the padded footprints of animals that had followed and shadowed the unprotected child.

At the end of three miles, above the Shoo Fly Copper Mining Company's property, the little tracks stopped abruptly, and about ten feet from them were the marks of either a lynx or a mule bobcat, that had confronted him. It was then that he turned and ran up the side of the canyon, and nearly [illegible] of the logs that lay [illegible] of dead [illegible] crawled to hide from the gloating eyes until death from fatigue and exposure came to relieve him, and strange as it is, although animals had circled all around, not one had molested him.—Las Vegas Optic.

TIGER HARD TO SNARE.

The intelligent Japanese is taking an interest at present in zoological as in other matters. The writer overheard a couple of these gentlemen, newly come from official posts in Korea, discussing while standing outside the bars of the tigers' dens a couple of days ago, the means, otherwise than by powder and bullet, whereby the terror of the jungles could be kept within due bounds.

It appears that since the Japanese occupation of Korea natives have been forbidden to carry firearms, and as a consequence tigers have multiplied to an extraordinary extent. It is not safe to go out shopping after dusk in some of the inland villages, and as many as thirty or forty luckless natives have been devoured in certain districts within a week. The authorities will not raise the embargo upon firearms, how then is the number of these dreaded beasts to be reduced?

The tiger is possessed at times of an almost supernatural cunning, a wonderful sense of smell, and a fine instinct with regard to traps and the like, which make him as difficult an animal to take alive as any existing. Sometimes he can be snared, but not often. On one occasion the writer's Indian servant ran in in a great state of excitement to say a tiger was trapped in the jungle half a mile away, and the entire camp of course at once flocked over to see the prisoner.

The trap was exactly on the principle of a humble mousetrap with a falling door, and built of strong timbers laced together with rattans. The imprisoned tiger was a full grown male, and it would be difficult to imagine anything wilder than his rage as he roared and stormed and hurled himself in futile fury on each part of the structure in turn. There he was to stay until hunger had rendered him manageable, the incident showing that the tiger can be trapped, although not often. It is to be feared the Koreans will have to recover their muskets or put up with the sight of hungry tigers wandering about their village streets.—London Globe.

THE PUMA AND ITS PREY.

The puma is so fond of horseflesh that in Patagonia it is difficult to breed horses, as the colts are killed by this American lion. A native told the author of "The Naturalist in La Plata" that on one occasion, while driving his horses home through a thicket a puma sprang out of the bushes to the back of a colt following behind the troop.

The puma alighted directly on the colt's back, with one forefoot grasping its shoulders, while with the other it seized the head, and giving it a violent wrench, dislocated the neck. The colt fell to the earth as if shot.

Next to horseflesh the puma prefers mutton. He does not like veal, although he will kill a calf upon occasion. A cunning puma, which on cloudy nights raided a sheep ranch, used as a place of concealment the pen where a dozen calves were kept, while it was waiting to attack the sheep. But it did not injure a calf.

Pigs, when in large herds, defy the puma by massing themselves together and presenting a serried line of tusks. The ass also resists successfully the puma's attack. When assaulted it thrusts its head between its forelegs and kicks violently until the puma is driven or thrown off.

One day an Indian, while riding, saw a young cow watching his approach. Her manner showed that it was in a state of dangerous excitement, and the Indian conjectured that some beast of prey had killed its calf. He began searching for the calf's body. While thus engaged the cow repeatedly charged him. Presently he discovered the calf lying dead among the long grass, and by its side a dead puma with a large wound just behind the shoulder.

The calf had been killed by the puma, for its throat showed the wounds of large teeth. The cow had driven one of its long, sharp horns into the puma's side while it was sucking the calf's blood.

The First Elephant in America.

The statement that the first elephant was brought to America in 1821 by Hackatiah Bailey having been made, a present resident of Brooklyn, formerly of Salem, Mass., comes forward with another story.

It appears that one Joseph Crowinshield, one of five brothers who were masters of vessels sailing from Salem, brought home from India in 1796 "the first live elephant ever seen in America."

It is added that the Historical Collection of the Essex Institute of Salem contains the privately printed diary of the Rev. Dr. William Bentley, in which, under date of August 20, 1797, that worthy divine describes with great [illegible] which he saw on exhibition at Salem Market House [illegible] doctor was right [illegible] the trunk [illegible] removing the [illegible] New York Dispatch.

Beginning of Movement.

The burden of building the road from the farm to the town has been thought to be rightly placed on the tiller of the soil. That is unqualifiedly untrue. There is no more reason why the farmer should build the road to haul his bread and meat to the man in town than that the merchant in this city should build the road to haul the hardware and the clothing, the sugar and the tea and the coffee to the farmer. The man who has the purchasing power will find the market in which to buy his goods. And the farmer does not need the support of the city as the city needs that of the farmer.

Time was in this country in the old "homespun" days still within the memory of some of us, when the store bill of the farm was limited to a few essentials, such as nails and tea and calico. When the needle, the distaff, the loom and the candle mold had not been superseded by bargain day and electric lights, the neighbors exchanged receipts for mince meat and soft soap and class distinctions were unknown.

Just one hundred years ago we read that three-fourths of all the clothing worn in the United States of cotton or of wool was made at home. Scarcely more than a dozen cotton factories were operated in the United States. The laborers who built Spokane—I mean the common labor—earned as much in one month as those who laid the foundations of our national capital did in a year. The cheapest land transportation cost one hundred and twenty-five times as much then as it does to-day where the steam horse—then unknown—has supplanted the mule. And yet when the movement for better wagon roads started here in Washington the cost of wagon haulage was no less than in 1801. So far as I know the first accurate figures as to the cost of wagon haulage were had here when our blanks were placed in the hands of farmers at every railway station and filled in before he unloaded. This blank showed the name of the county and town and farmer, distance hauled to railway, tons or bushels hauled, time in hauling, number of horses, average cost per ton or per bushel per mile, freight rate per ton or per bushel to tidewater, price received in 1902 and 1903, average yield in 1902 and 1903.

Then he saw that his enemy was not steam transportation but an inefficient tool built and paid for by himself—a bad road—which was grinding him down. That if the railway charge of three-quarters of a cent were applied to his crop, if the railway could be made to begin on every man's farm and end in a great city, his troubles were at an end. But this could not be. He saw that the cost of wagon haulage was one hundred and twenty-five times as great as the steam haul and seeing the problem he set out to solve it.—Samuel Hill, in the Good Roads Magazine.

An Ancient Decree.

We must work through education, for we can not, as Ambassador Jusserand says, like the Bishop of Durham, grant remission of sins for work on the highways. By his decree in A. D. 1314 he said:

"Persuaded that the minds of the faithful are more ready to attach themselves to pious works if fuller indulgences are granted, we remit forty days of penances to those who should help by their charitable gifts or by their bodily labor in building or in the maintenance of the causeway between Brotherton and Fairy Bridge where a great many people pass by."—Good Roads Magazine.

The German Army's Strength.

Germany can assemble an army of over a million soldiers, ready, literally speaking, to the last button, at any point along her borders, in less than a week. Not drilling, courage, patriotism, intelligence, and military spirit alone give the German army the formidable strength it possesses, but also the painstaking labor that shirks no effort, and recognizes the value of the smallest detail. And in this work the general staff, the war department, and, in fact, every officer, is engaged year after year, restlessly trying to improve what appears perfect, always on the lookout for the chance of saving half an hour of the time required for the mobilization of the army, and always following the maxim of the great Moltke: "Only by striving for the impossible may we obtain the possible."—From George von Skal's "If Germany Were Called to War," in the Century.

Scotch Tailor a Garibaldi Veteran.

Alexander A. Walker of Edinburgh has been notified by the Italian Ambassador in London that by order of his Majesty the King of Italy, the Minister of War has granted him the right to wear the medal of the War of Independence and Unity in acknowledgment of the services rendered by him in the cause of Italy in the ranks of the British Legion during the campaign of 1860.

Walker was working as a tailor in Glasgow when Garibaldi came to the front and he became enthusiastic and volunteered. Sailing from London he landed at Palermo and took part in the advance to Naples. He was at the battles of Milazzo and Reggio and at the seige of Messina, and entered Naples on September 7, 1860. Mr. Walker served a year, and although taking part in many engagements was only once wounded slightly.—Westminster Gazette.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. R. HUEY, 713 Mineral Ave., Galena, Kans.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write forit to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

First English Actress.

No English actress made her appearance before the Restoration. On January 3 Pepys records:

"To the theatre, where was acted the 'Beggar's Bush,' it being very well done; and here the first time that ever I saw women come upon the stage." These, it is suspected, were mere "walking ladies."

The distinction of being the first English actress has been variously ascribed to Mrs. Davenport, Mrs. Knipp and Mrs. Davies. They all appeared the same year (1661). Mrs. Davies, together with the principal actresses in Sir William Davenport's company, being boarded in the manager's own house.—Stratd.

Country banks are required to maintain a 15 per cent. reserve, two-fifths of which must be in bank and three-fifths may be with correspondents.

Peasant Girls Treasure.

Members of the well-known Rumanian family of Ghika, who are resident in Vienna, received some interesting information from Jassy to-day. A number of cases filled with objects of gold and silver, with jewelry and diamonds, estimated to be worth several million kronen, were found in the course of a search made by the police in the house of a peasant woman named Safta Bradinariu, living in the environs of Jassy.

This woman, who was at once arrested, stated that the cases had been concealed in her house for twenty-six years. Her deceased daughter was in the service of Prince Nikolai Ghika, who died suddenly after an operation in Paris. The peasant's daughter Maria took several sealed cases which no one appeared to want, and conveyed them to her home. She was afraid to attempt to dispose of the valuable objects, which have until now remained hidden in her mother's house.—London Telegraph.

Missouri's Farmer Governor.

Governor Hadley bought a farm, 120 acres, five miles west of Jefferson City today. He will move his family from the Executive Mansion when warm weather sets in to spend the summer. Nothing is sweeter music in his ears, he says, than the lowing of the kine waiting to be pailed, or the cackling of Missouri hens as they industriously turn out eggs for the family larder.

The Governor has two cows, both good milkers, and they will more than supply the family with milk and butter. He has two horses, which will come in handy for ploughing. He has eleven dogs, which are expected to keep the rabbits from gnawing the young fruit trees.—Jefferson City correspondence St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

What Causes Beri-Beri.

Beri-beri always seems to awaken American curiosity. Beri-beri has been pretty clearly proved by the British Tropical Society to come from milled, beautifully polished white rice, and proved in a most curious way. The sort of rices that were suspected of causing it in man were fed scientifically to chickens. Fowls fed on the white milled rice got a general nervous inflammation which is just about what human beri-beri is. Five weeks fixed the clock for the chickens. Experiments also showed that chickens stayed healthy if fed on original old-fashioned "rice padi, as prepared by the country Jakes in Malay.—New York Press.

WOMANS GENTLE NATURE CALLS FOR GENTLE TREATMENT

Delicately formed and gently reared, women will find, in all the seasons of their lives, as maidens, wives or mothers, that the one simple, wholesome remedy which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally, and which may be used with truly beneficial effects, under any conditions, when the system needs a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. It is well known to be a simple combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic liquids, which are agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system when its gentle cleansing is desired.

Only those who buy the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna can hope to get its beneficial effects, and as a guarantee of the excellence of the remedy, the full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package, and without it any preparation offered as Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is fraudulent and should be declined. To those who know the quality of this excellent laxative, the offer of any substitute, when Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is called for, is always resented by a transfer of patronage to some first-class drug establishment, where they do not recommend, nor sell false brands, nor imitation remedies. The genuine article may be bought of all reliable druggists everywhere; one size only. Regular price 50 cents per bottle. Get a bottle today to have in the house when needed.

STORKS IN EUROPE.

Persecuted in Some Parts, Protected for Luck in Others.

In the Baltic provinces and throughout northern Germany and in Denmark the stork is met with everywhere during the summer months. While traveling the other day from Danzig to Marienberg I saw several in the fields and on nests upon buildings quite close to the railway. In Denmark, however, it is less numerous since the draining of the morasses was begun. It is still fairly common in Holland and Belgium, but in France, owing to its being persecuted and the fact of none of the original race surviving, it is seen only as a bird of passage. In Alsace and Lorraine its better treatment is rewarded by a certain number remaining during the summer to breed.

In passing through Savoy in April and in the early autumn it meets with heartless persecution, especially on its return toward the south, when the young birds are often much fatigued. It occurs generally throughout Turkey and is fairly common in Greece. It is met with occasionally in central Italy and Sicily and is plentiful in some parts of Andalusia.

It is believed that on one of their migrations which took place a little after the middle of the last century the white storks experienced some sort of catastrophe, as they returned in greatly reduced numbers, and ever since then they have been considerably less numerous than before. The periods of migration with the storks is very regular. They arrive in central Europe generally between March 20 and 25, and prepare to depart at about the end of August, first congregating in large bands, which break up as the adult individuals come and collect the young together to conduct them southward. It appears that they migrate in large flocks, flying mostly by night.

The males and females, it is supposed, migrate separately, the former undoubtedly arriving a week before the latter to take charge of the old nest or to settle on a favorable spot for nidification.

Wherever the stork is met with in Europe, excepting in parts where its occurrence is rare, where it meets with the common fate of rarity, it is protected. The peasants mostly hold it as sacred and consider it as a sort of protector or house god to the house on which it nests, and one will sometimes sell a nest to a neighbor to bring him luck, in which case the bird will discover the new situation of its nest and continue to occupy it. Often an old wheel or something else inviting is fixed on a roof to induce a stork to build. The nest itself is constructed of branches and twigs, neatly lined with grass, straw or any other suitable material. It takes up much space and every year it is added to, so that the peasant upon the roof of whose house it rests is obliged to remove a portion of it in order to lessen its weight.—Westminster Gazette.

Mistletoe Hunters in Brittany.

Ceuzy, in Brittany, annually becomes a centre of attraction for the mistletoe pickers, and the poplars that line the hillsides around about the village show an abundance of the precious evergreen, the sight of which would fill the heart of many a Norman mistletoe gatherer with envy.

Here, however, the trees are lofty and by no means so easy to despoil of their white berried parasite as the apple trees in northern France, which yield most of the harvest destined to find its way to the British market.

Nevertheless clambering up into the tree tops sixty or seventy feet from the ground is not so difficult a task as it may appear to those who are uninitiated into the modus operandi of the mistletoe hunters. With the aid of peculiarly shaped iron griffes attached to their feet, enabling them to get a firm grip of the trunk or stem which they wish to ascend, the skilled climbers make their way from branch to branch with monkeylike agility and in a few minutes the tree is stripped of its mistletoe crop.—Wide World Magazine.

We democrats are going to get behind Mr. Jones and put him into office."

The same thing practically was said by Mr. Lee Hayes and Sheriff Catts. That's the way to talk. It sounds like a love feast to hear democrats talking that way, and every one of them meant it, too.

Mr. Jones will make a good sheriff, he has the hearty good will of every democrat in the county, and will receive the enthusiastic support of every candidate who opposed him in the primary.

COURT NEWS.

The Circuit Court met on last Monday morning, with Judge Pearson presiding. The grand and petit juries were organized, the docket sounded and work of the court entered into almost immediately. The majority of the cases set for this week were either compromised or continued.

The grand jury will probably be in session for ten days or two weeks, as they have a very heavy docket. There are already three murder cases docketed and others to follow. Besides this there are several other criminal cases and a number of misdemeanor cases to be investigated. The grand jury is composed of the following gentlemen: E. L. Thornton (foreman), Jesse E. Haywood, R. J. Jones, Geo. W. Foshee, Jasper P. Cost, E. R. Calloway, Gideon Michelson, W. W. Nix, W. L. Honeycutt, W. E. Maddox, G. W. Marcus, R. Monroe Price, M. Jack Grooms, G. W. Fox, A. E. Wilkins, John W. Lightsey, J. E. Durham, Olaf Scheive.

Those composing the petit juries are as follows:

Jury No. 1—M. J. Mahan, Harvey Honeycutt, C. A. Peterson, B. H. Nelson, C. W. Mitchell, W. C. Roper, H. Archie Harris, E. J. Mims, J. N. Glasscock, G. W. Veasey, Alfred Pate, A. Baz Foshee.

Jury No. 2—E. Green Cofer, J. H. Morgan, O. C. Foshee, Geo. W. Gray, J. M. Fox, E. Cal Dawson, L. A. Calloway, W. I. Popwell, C. B. Rasberry, W. D. Cobb, W. A. Gulledge, G. G. Gray

Jury No. 3—E. D. Vanderslice, Simpson Driver, Ben F. Gardner, John Williamson, Geo. P. Thompson, H. F. Childress, Reubin Price, G. W. Mullins.

The most important case settled in court up to the time of going to press was the case of I. M. Tedwell versus the Western Union Telegraph Company, which was a damage suit for failure on the part of the defendant company to deliver a telegram. The case was compromised to the satisfaction of both parties to the suit.

Mr. Chairman, Brother Odd Fellows, Sister Rebekahs, Ladies and Gentlemen:

We have assembled here this beautiful day for the purpose of celebrating the ninety-first birthday of American Odd Fellowship, known as the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On such an occasion as the present it is but proper to give a "skeleton" outline of its birth, rise and objects, and what it has accomplished.

I have been invited to speak on this occasion, but I am apprehensive that my knowledge in Odd Fellowship is too inadequate for the task imposed upon me. However, when a man shows a willingness to do a thing and does the best he knows how, that is all that mortal should expect of mortal.

What is our Order, and whence came it? Tradition carries Odd Fellowship back to the early part of the first century, but little of which is known at the present day. From other sources we are reliably informed that Odd Fellow Lodges have existed in England in the year 1745, and it seems that they were originally formed by workingmen for social purposes and for giving their brethren aid and assistance to obtain employment when out of work.

The first recorded evidence we have of its existence dates from the formation of the Manchester Unity in England in the year 1809.

The father and founder of the American Odd Fellowship, Thomas Wildy, was born in London, England, on the 15th day of June, 1771. On reaching manhood he was initiated into an Odd Fellows Lodge in which he distinguished himself by his zeal and integrity. Desirous of spreading the Order to which he was so ardently attached, he emigrated to America in the year 1817, and landed in the city of Baltimore, Maryland.

As was natural to a stranger in a strange land, he sought to make the acquaintance of his fellow countrymen residing there, and animated by his former zeal for the order, he at once took steps to form a lodge, and on the 27th day of March, 1819, inserted an advertisement in the Baltimore American (newspaper), requesting a meeting of the brethren on Friday, April 2nd, for the purpose of forming a lodge.

This advertisement brought together Thomas Wildy, John Welch and John Duncan, only three. This number not being sufficient to institute a lodge, Brother Wildy inserted another advertisement in the Baltimore American, requesting all Odd Fellows residing in Baltimore to meet at a tavern known as Seven Stars on Friday evening, April 26th, 1819.

When Brother Wildy went to the appointed place on Friday evening, April 26th, he found there in waiting John Welch, Richard Bushford, John Duncan and John Cheatham, the requisite number of five who had been initiated in the order in England and were duly qualified.

Therefore, in accordance with ancient custom, they instituted themselves a Lodge, which they named Washington Lodge of Odd Fellows No. 1. Brother Wildy, realizing that said Lodge would have no legal standing without being granted a charter from legal sources, immediately applied for a charter to the Manchester Unity of England.

On the first of February, 1820, the Duke of York Lodge of Preston, England, a subordinate Lodge of the Manchester Unity, granted a charter to Washington Lodge No. 1 of Baltimore, Maryland, recognizing Washington Lodge No. 1 as a subordinate and the Grand Lodge of Maryland and the United States of America of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

The action of the Duke of York Lodge was subsequently confirmed by the Grand Lodge of the Manchester Unity of England. Therefore Washington Lodge No. 1 was both a subordinate and a Grand Body, and as it became necessary to remove the legislative from the operative body, on the 22nd of February, 1820, Washington Lodge surendered its rights as a Grand Body to a Committee of Past Grands to organize a Grand Lodge of legislative capacity, separate and distinct from the working lodge.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Maryland, and of the United States was duly organized with Thomas Wildy as Grand Master. Charters were granted to Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey to institute Grand and Subordinate Lodges.

On the 15th day of May, 1826, the Grand Master and Committees of the Manchester Unity of England again confirmed the charter heretofore granted to Washington Lodge No. 1 and in addition conferred upon that Lodge the right to act in a sovereign capacity independent of any other country.

For about twenty-three years thereafter the Order of the United States was closely allied to the Mancnester body, of which it may be truthfully said, is the parent of American Odd Fellowship. However, in the year 1843, all affiliations and connections existing between these two Grand Bodies ceased to exist, and since then they have become separate and distinct institutions.

The Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows still exists in England and are over one million strong, and quite a number of members of that organization have affiliated with our Order after they came to this country.

Until the year 1880 our present Sovereign Lodge was known as the United States Grand Lodge. However, during that year the United State Grand Lodge met in annual session at Toronto, Canada, it being the first time in the history of the oruer that this body met in session outside of the United States, and its title was then changed to the Sovreign Grand Lodge.

The first Lodge of Odd Fellows organized in Alabama was Alabama Lodge No. 1, at Mobile, April 25th, 1837.

The Most Worsnipful Grand Lodge of Odd eFllows of Alabama was organized in the City of Mobile on December the 13th, 1841.

American Odd Fellowship, organized in the City of Baltimore, April the 26th, 1819, by five English Odd Fellows, has during the 91 years of its existence increased to such an extent that it has earned the admiration of the civilized world.

To demonstrate practically the standing of American Odd Fellowship numerically, and the amount of relief it extended to poor, suffering humanity, we copy the following from the official records of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, as reported to that body on December 31, 1908, which is the latest official report furnished by its subordinate Lodges, Encampments and Rebekah Lodges.

The Order's Standing in Alabama.

The official report of the Grand Secretary at 1909 shows that there were in Alabama on December 31, 1908, 198 subordinate Lodges with a membership of 28,478.

Relief extended by these subordinate Lodges during the year 1908 was $115,92, which means the sum of $190.76 per day.

We also have in Alabama 146 Rebekah Lodges with a membership of 3,772 brethren, 1,614; sisters, 2,158. These Rebekah Lodges have expended $4,329.15 for relief during the year 1908.

These vast sums of money for the relief of suffering humanity were not only expended within the limits of our own organization, but in all the great calamities, by way of floods, fires, earth-quakes, cyclones, epidemics and mine disasters which have befallen other people in States, territories, cities and towns. Our order gathered from among our members thousands and thousands of dollars and poured it into the hands of committees appointed by lawful authorities for the distribution of the same among the needy and distressed.

Under our system of dispensing relief of this character, the Grand Lodge officers from which the contributions are furnished and the Grand Lodge Officers of the Jurisdiction which receives it, are in duty bound to keep a record of all receipts and disbursements, and make a report of the same to the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

To demonstrate the wisdom of our laws in this respect I will refer to the earthquake in San Francisco, California, in 1907. Millions of dollars were sent to California from the various States of the Union to relieve the suffering and distress. However, the secular press of this country disclosed the fact that the money thus contributed did not reach the needy and distressed, the governor of that State was forced to appoint a commission to and the guilty were brought to justice.

How about our system? After all necessary relief had been extended the Grand Lodge officers found that there was considerable money left unexpended, and decided to return to each Grand Jurisdiction a pro-rata share of the amount contributed.

The Grand Lodge of Alabama received a check for $764.0, a refund of the money contributed to the earthquake sufferers at San Francisco. I might go on and name more instances of this kind, but they are too numerous.

During the last ninety-one years of the existence of the Order, it has been writing history, writing it not only upon the records of its thousands of Lodges, but writing it in the beauty and grace of hundreds of buildings and Temples erected in all parts of our country, from ocean to ocean, and which stand today, elegant, majestic monuments, telling of the devotion of faithful hearts to undying principles.

Writing it also in the fifty and more "Homes" for its aged and indigent members, and the Widows and Orphans of deceased members, which the order has erected at a cost of more than a million and a half and in which the declining years of the aged brothers and widows may be passed in peace; and the orphan children surrounded by all the comforts and helpful Christian influences that characterize the best of the private homes, brought up and educated in a manner to fit them for honorable, useful manhood and pure, noble womanhood.

Our Own Home.

The Odd Fellows of Alabama now own a home at Cullman, Alabama, which was erected by the Grand Lodge at a cost of $50,000.00 for indigent Odd Fellows and Widows and Orphans of deceased Odd Fellows.

This home will be dedicated by the Grand Lodge on Monday, May 9th, 1910. There are at the present time, several widows of deceased brothers, and about forty fatherless and motherless children in that home, from three to ten years of age.

They are cared for and provided with all the comforts of life that love and money can procure.

In the contemplation of the Orphan we have the suggestion of both the cradle and the tomb, and it matters not now care free and happy an orphan may appear there is ever around it a halo of sadness that fills the heart with tenderest sympathy. One of the grandest works of Odd Fellowship is the erection of a Widow's and Orphans' Home.

A home for the orphan children
Desolate, lonely, oppressed,
Welcome the little ones
To comfort, plenty and rest.
Show them the pathway of duty
That upward their feet may tread,
That of such is the Kingdom of Heaven
May still, as of old, be said.

What Are the Principle Duties of Odd Fellowship.

To bury the dead, care for the widow, educate the orphan, and practice charity. Could purer motives and principles find lodgement in the minds of men?

These principles were born in the Kingdom of the Most High and Odd Fellowship has transplanted them to earth and rivited them into the minds and souls of men on earth. And is this day planting them firmly and surely in every civilized clime and country where the shaft of civilization is founded.

Odd Fellowship since its birth in this country has grown faster, taken deeper root and like a great tree planted by the rivers of waters, is rapidly spreading over our great land and doing great good in shading out crime.

Its influence for good is perceptible, being felt, its power to unite men into friendship is potent. How can it help but grow? How can it help but be powerful for good? How can its growth be retarded when its whole superstructure rests on the Word of God?

Politics and religious doctrines are never discussed in our Lodges, and the Lodges are opened and closed with prayer and songs. The Bible is on the Chaplain's table. A belief in a Supreme Being, the Creator and Preserver of the universe is required by our laws, and no person can be admitted in our mystic brotherhood who does not acknowledge this.

Odd Fellowship tolerates and respects all creeds and religious dogmas, toleration being its fundamental principle, and men of widely different opinions meet in perfect harmony upon its platform.

Under its platform all nations, tongues and creeds may unite for the good of suffering humanity.

Our Ritual and degree work are based upon "Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of men." One cannot be an Odd Fellow in spirit and in truth less he is grateful to his Creator and faithful to his country and fraternal to his fellowman.

Every Odd Fellow recognizes that duty to God is a higher law than duty to man. Our first allegiance is due to Him as our Creator and Preserver, then follows our duty to our fellow man. This is in harmony with the two great commandments, "Thou shalt love thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself."

Odd Fellowship teaches to visit the sick, relieve the distressed, bury the dead, educate the orphans and practice charity.

Dispensing of charity is one of the principle tenets and chief suports upon which Fraternal Orders are founded. We may preach brotherly love, repeat pages of the beautiful sentences so prolific in our ritual but "it is as sounding brass or tinkling symbal" if we have no charity to relieve the distress of a needy brother, his widow and orphan children, as a virtue teacher to every one who enters our Brotherhood. Charity is not only a virtue of a Fraternal Order, but it is, or should be, an individual virtue of every member.

Charity is a virtue that leads us to the side of a brother when stricken upon a bed of sickness, afflicted with some baffling disease, that we may alleviate his sufferings and to allay the power of man to relieve, and if possible death [illegible]

Therefore let us forget and overlook his faults and failings, remembering and speaking only of his good deeds and nobler qualities that have adorned his life on earth.

The Growth of the Order.

Odd Fellowship, founded in the City of Baltimore in the year 1819 by a man in obscurity, amidst difficult surroundings, in a time when British cannons were still booming in the Capitol of the young Republic; in a time when the spirit of patriotism and loyalty and brotherly love was the central thought of all that was truly American, it could but imbibe the spirit of devotion and self-sacrifice to the interest of its fellow man, which was then so prominent throughout the length and breadth of our fair land.

The development of Odd Fellowship has kept pace with the growth of American institutions; and in all its work and in every line of its great history there is not a word or a sentiment or a deed that does not reflect credit upon its adopted country.

In all its missions of love and mercy—giving strength to the weak, courage to the faint-hearted, hope and comfort to the desolate—it but endears to its devotees the country whose institutions have made such development possible.

No Fraternal Organization known to modern times can record so marvellous a growth of recent years as can "Our Order."

It is a universally recognized fact by all who are informed, that American Odd Fellowship has long since surpassed in numerical strength the ancient and grand Masonic Brotherhood. Not only is Odd Fellowship stronger numerically in the world, but even in our own State of Alabama, Odd Fellowship is stronger numerically than is the Brotherhood of Masons. Today we have in our ranks the brightest minds and most sublime intellects the world boasts of.

Surely there must be something true, good and noble in an institution which takes such hold upon a popular feeling in an enlightened and civilized community.

The gentler sex—the Rebekahs, God bless them—have been enlisted under its banner to assist in the fight against poverty, vice and innumerable woes incident to life. Their labors have been crowned with unqualified success.

Odd Fellowship has saved thousands of young men, and old men too, from the demon, intoxication, with all its attendant crimes and horrors. Although absolute temperance is not a tenet of the Order, yet, it inculcates that virtue and deprecates the use of intoxicants. Yes, Odd Fellowship is the first Fraternal Organization on the American Continent which had the moral courage to make it a constitutional law debarring saloon keepers and gamblers from becoming members of the Order.

Odd Fellowship has, by timely aid and advice, saved thousands and thousands from a life of degredation and crime, men who, but for such aid and timely advice would have been bad men, but are now men of honor and fair standing in their communities, with kind, loving, God-fearing families around their firesides.

The peaceful victories won by the valiant army of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs in its assaults upon the strongholds of selfishness, ignorance and intolerance, have been greater and grander in their results, and infinitely better for humanity than all the triumphs of the battlefield since the dawn of civilization.

An order that teaches toleration in religion, obedience to law, loyalty to government; that lifts up the fallen, visits the sick, buries the dead, cares for the widows, and educates the orphans, will ever receive the plaudits of a grateful people in every civilized country and Odd Fellowship teaches and practices all these things.

Therefore my hearers, if my statement of the history and achievements of our Order is worthy of your consideration, I appeal to you that you will not only consent for your sons and brothers and husbands to become Odd Fellows, but that you will advise them so to do. Be assured that in our lodge room they will find no lying, no stealing, no cheating, no immoral jokes, but they will bend their knees in homage and raise their voice in song and praise to the Great I Am.

Young men, become Odd Fellows, for, by so doing, you will gain the confidence of your parents and that of your employers and sweethearts, as they will know, if you are in the Lodge, you are beyond the temptation of card playing, whiskey drinking and indecent jokes.

To you, my fair hearers, I make a special appeal in behalf of Odd Fellowship. Every Odd Fellow recognizes the fact that the rapid growth of our Order within the past few years, is mainly due to the exertions and influences of the Sister Rebekahs.

There are no more beautiful, more chivalrous, no more charitable women on God's green earth than are our women of the South.

They are the fairest flower that ever emanated from the Creator's hand, at whose knees we said, "Now I lay me down to sleep." Our guide in childhood's happy hours, the guardian spirit that smiles with the merry, weeps with the afflicted, praises the brave, and consoles the despondent, who travels the weary path of life with men till the meridian has passed, and then with a martyr's devotion and angelic tenderness, soothes the rugged descent which leads to that last bourne from whence none return.

I beseech you in the name of friendship, love and truth, to lend us the potent influence at your command to spread in our beloved State of Alabama, the benign principles of this Order of benevolence and charity.

EDWARD VII. DIES OF PNEUMONIA; GEORGE V. REIGNS OVER ENGLAND

British Sovereign Expires in Buckingham Palace, London, From Bronchial Affection After a Short Illness.

ROYAL FAMILY AT DEATHBED

Prince of Wales Succeeds Without Ceremony—"I Have Done My Duty," Says Dying King—All England in Mourning—Crowds at Palace During Day—End Just Before Midnight.

LATE KING EDWARD VII.

London.—Edward VII., King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas and Emperor of India, died in Buckingham Palace here of pneumonia a quarter of an hour before midnight, in the age of sixty-eight years, five months and twenty-seven days; his eldest surviving son, George Prince of Wales, reigns in his place as George V. He was born June 3, 1865, and Prince Edward, grandson of the late monarch, a stripling not yet six-teen years old, stands heir apparent to the imperial throne and has assumed the title of Prince of Wales.

Thus is bereaved city and empire exist in the spreading popular conviction in each passing hour death has claim the beloved sovereign. The Prince succeeded to the crown formally, according to the laws of England, without official ceremony. His first official act was to send to the Lord Mayor the announcement of his father's death, in the form of custom. His telegram read:

"I deeply grieved to inform you of my beloved father, the King, passed away peacefully at 11.45 to-night. GEORGE."

The physicians soon afterward issued their official bulletin, which was as follows:

"11.30 p. m.—His Majesty the King passed his last at 11.45 to-night, in the presence of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Royal, the Duchess of Fife, Princess Victoria and Princess Louise, the Duchess of Argyll.

LAKING,
REID,
POWELL, DAWSON."

RULER OF GREAT BRITAIN

KING GEORGE V.

Short, Terrifying Illness.

The late King's illness in its final stages progressed with terrifying rapidity. It was only at 3.30 p. m. that he was prevailed upon to allow himself to be laid in bed. Since morning he had been reclining in an invalid chair. At 3.30, however, he had a violent attack of coughing, which so exhausted him that he held out no longer against the wishes of his physicians.

He still retained full consciousness, and between that hour and 5 o'clock asked for news about his horse Witch of the Air, which was running at Kempton Park. His Majesty was told that the horse had won.

Not long afterward it became apparent that the patient was rapidly growing worse. All five physicians who had been called into consultation were in attendance, and soon after their public announcement that his condition was critical the King began to show signs of approaching dissolution.

Late in the afternoon in one of his last wakeful intervals, the dying King said:

"Well, it is all over, but I think I have done my duty."

For some hours prior to his death the King had been comatose. The scene in Buckingham Palace throughout the day was extremely sad. Not only members of the royal family and court officials, but the servants were weeping bitterly when it became definitely known that their royal master could not long survive.

It is said the last words of His Majesty were addressed at 5 o'clock to Sir Edward Laking, his body physician, to whom he said:

"I know this is the end; tell the Queen."

The dramatic end came just before the stroke of midnight. It was known that His Majesty had been constantly sinking, and recourse had been taken to oxygen throughout the evening by the physicians in a desperate effort to prolong life, but, not prepared to understand the seriousness of the King's illness, an imperial people found it difficult to believe that death could vanquish in such a brief time.

By the administration of oxygen a further rally was brought about, but from 6 o'clock upward the King lapsed into unconsciousness, the efforts of the doctors being directed entirely to minimizing the pain of the successive attacks of choking.

His death is said to have been due not to any growth in the throat, but to pressure on the lungs caused by inflammation of the bronchial tubes, from which, owing to the extreme shortness of the King's neck, it was impossible to afford him any relief throughout his illness. To the end he was not in bed, but in a half-sitting and half-reclining position on an invalid couch.

Greets Prince as King.

When the end came, in addition to the royal family and the doctors, Home Secretary Winston Churchill was present, and to him fell the duty of kneeling to the Prince of Wales and first greeting him as King.

The royal family immediately withdrew from the death chamber, Dowager Queen Alexandra being led away by the new King and Queen, who shortly afterward returned to Marlborough House.

The End is Announced.

Just at the stroke of midnight the crowds massed at the palace gate saw a carriage drive swiftly out and caught a glimpse of the Prince and Princess of Wales—the former then the reigning King—within, haggard and grief stricken.

"Is the last news about the King's condition being critical true?" asked one in the throng.

"The King, sir," was the quiet reply, "is dead."

Yet in the silence of the night, though stricken beyond belief, the hundreds stood mute about the palace gates, loyal and sympathetic in their sorrow.

The actual illness from which the King suffered was an asthmatic cardiac affection.

The King died as he had lived—in harness. He refused to stay in bed on Friday morning, but got up, and even transacted business as usual, with Lord Knollys, his private secretary.

He faced his illness, the Times says, with courage and determination, and except during his attacks of coughing and choking conversed as usual. He had a bad paroxysm of coughing in the forenoon, and in the afternoon such paroxysms recurred, until in the evening the attacks took the form rather of a failure of breath and he became comatose, but throughout he remained up.

Outside the palace early in the afternoon long strings of motor cars and carriages had begun to fill the courtyard of the entrance in Buckingham Palace Road. The streams continued without intermission until 6 o'clock. All the well-known people in London were leaving calls and making inquiries—politicians, Ambassadors, dignitaries of the church, great leaders, men of note in the world of sport, writers, painters, one or two actors, even—every class was represented in the line which advanced slowly to the door and then drove away with saddened faces looking out upon the people gathered round the gates.

Prince of Wales in Palace.

All this time the Prince and Princess of Wales were in the palace.

Latest Photograph of British Sovereign, Taken at Biarritz.

They had driven thither from Marlborough House at 10.30 and remained in the room next to that in which the dying King lay. Here Queen Alexandra and the Princess Victoria also spent the day. The King was very glad he was able to command once more the services of the sister who had nursed him during his recovery from the operation in 1901, and several times sent out word to his family that he was as comfortable as he could expect to be. The Queen watched over His Majesty with the utmost devotion.

Queen at His Bedside.

The Queen was not content to leave the care of the King in the skilled hands of those who surrounded him, though Sir Francis Laking and Sir James Reid had for years carefully studied His Majesty's physique. Sitting for hours by his bedside Her Majesty did not relax her loving vigilance. She watched the doctors at their work, and they also never left the sickroom, except for briefest intervals. The Princess of Wales is a very able nurse, and she also rendered some assistance in the sick-chamber. The Duchess of Albany was another member of the royal family who came to see His Majesty, and when she left she was weeping bitterly.

The King's death leaves the empire in a grave political situation. It is believed that the struggle between the Lords and the Commons will be temporarily abandoned.

Messages of grief and sympathy have been received from all British dominions and from foreign nations which have heard the news of England's loss.

LATE KING EDWARD VII. AND QUEEN ALEXANDRA IN THEIR CORONATION ROBES.

Notable Achievements of the Late King.

During his nine-year reign King Edward's efforts were especially devoted to furthering the cause of peace. It was mainly through his influnce that the Anglo-French-Russian Triple Entente became an accomplished fact.

As a direct result of this pact a European war was prevented when France and Germany clashed on the Moroccan question in 1905.

The Balkan crisis of 1908, which threatened a general European conflagration, was solved without war.

Other results of King Edward's peace campaign were:

The Anglo-French and Anglo-German Arbitration treaties of 1903, followed by more than a score of similar treaties between other Powers.

Giant strides in the movement for the limitation of naval and military armament. Even Germany, following an interview between King Edward and the Kaiser at Cronberg in 1908, showed a decided change in this respect.

1841, November 9—Born at Buckingham Palace.

1860—Visit to the United States and Canada.

1863, March 10—Marriage to Princess Alexandra of Denmark, at Windsor.

1875—Visit to India.

1896—Won the Derby with Persimmon.

1901, January 22—Succeeded to the throne.

1902, June 24—Operated upon for perityphlitis and thought to be dying.

1902, August 9—Crowned King of England and Emperor of India.

1910, May 6—Died at Buckingham Palace.

NEW PRINCE OF WALES AND HIS TUTOR.

A Despairing City.

London, with King Edward lying dead, is a despairing city. All the West End theatres were practically empty that evening. Even the physiognomy of the streets showed a sad change. Thoroughfares which are normally scenes of life, bustle and gayety resembled the streets of a city through which the shadow of death had stalked. Pedestrians were rare. Cabs and taxis passed by at intervals instead of in a ceaseless file, and motor buses rumbled past empty.

Washington

According to Secretary Wilson, who is continually startling the world with the results of his scientific and economic discoveries, rats have become a common article of food in the markets of the East and Middle West. It is not the ordinary variety of rodent to which the Secretary refers, but the muskrat, the meat of which he declares has become a staple article of human food. Nor does Secretary Wilson deprecate this custom. On the contrary, he apparently regards the consumption of muskrats as food as a highly desirable method of checking the rapacity of the Beef Trust, for he announces that he is preparing to issue a bulletin furnishing information on the best methods of increasing the supply. Members of the committee on the cost of living vehemently assert that the recent consumption as food of two missionaries in the South Sea Islands had no relation to the tariff or the high price of beef, but they will probably find it more difficult to convince the public that the consumption of muskrats as food is not due to these causes. Hence they have declined to attempt the futile argument and have determined to assist Secretary Wilson in the dissemination of his conclusions as to the cost of living.

After a long debate the Senate passed the House bill providing for the establishment of a Bureau of Mines in the Interior Department. The purpose of the bill is to provide such scientific inquiries and investigations as will aid in making mining less wasteful of life and resources. One of the principal duties of the new bureau will be to discover the various causes of each type of mine accidents and the best preventive measures, to aid in the development of a uniform code of signals for use in mine operations, etc. The bureau will also collect data concerning the best practices for safe and efficient mining followed in other countries. A number of amendments were adopted. Senator Root took a prominent part in the debate. He said he realized he was in a hopeless minority in opposing the bill, with the beneficent purposes of which he was heartily in accord. He desired, however, to register a protest against this effort toward the usurpation by the National Government of functions and prerogatives which belong to the States. Realizing that the bill would pass, Mr. Root made various suggestions to perfect its phraseology, and did not ask for a roll call on its passage.

Representative Nicholas Longworth is relating to his colleagues in the House a pathetic tale which he calls "the sorrows of a son-in-law." Mr. Longworth declares that ever since the announcement of his engagement to the daughter of President Roosevelt his every utterance has promptly been assumed to have been inspired by Mr. Roosevelt. When the colonel went to Africa, however, Mr. Longworth avers, he expected to get credit for at least a little originality, but he admits his hope was baseless. He has just received a letter which reads, in part: "Whenever you get off anything worth saying, which is mighty seldom, we all know it is inspired by your distinguished father-in-law, and most of your constituents congratulate you on the colonel's early return. When he lands on American soil you may expect us to read your speeches, but in the meantime you might as well save yourself the trouble of mailing them." Mr. Longworth submits that the public life of the son-in-law of a great man is hardly worth the living.

Sorrows of a Son-in-Law.

It is not necessary to say that Colonel Roosevelt does not sympathize with the Taft-Ballinger attitude toward the policy of conservation. He naturally believes that the Roosevelt and orders he issued with-drawing from settlement considerable areas of the public domain were legal and require no ratification by Congress, and that further withdrawals may be made by the Executive without specific statutory authority. The policy of awaiting legislative authority he regards as inimical to the broad policy of conservation, especially as Congress is loath to convey the needed authority to the Executive. On the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt is quite broad enough to give to those who hold views opposed to his own credit for their entire sincerity. He has long understood the extreme legal views which Mr. Taft entertained, even as a member of the Roosevelt Cabinet. He appreciates that Judge Ballinger is in entire harmony with the views of his chief in the course he is pursuing. And, moreover, it will not be a surprise to Colonel Roosevelt if he becomes satisfied that Mr. Pinchot, in the excess of his zeal, misunderstood the Secretary of the Interior and was easily misled by the charges of Glavis. This interpretation of the attitude of the former President comes from a source which cannot be questioned and is based on recent private communications.

It now seems from the tabulated returns that Emmet O'Neal has captured the nomination for Governor. The manner of the capture is not altogether to our liking but he seems to have it. Three cheers for Mr. O'Neal.

There were several surprises in the returns of the primary eletcion. The vote of Hon. John Purifoy for Treasurer was perhaps the most surprising of all.

We salute you, Mr. F. Loyd Tate, the next Solicitor for this the Fifteenth Judicial circuit.

Speak it easy—When Mr. O'Neal takes his seat as governor, as he is sure to do, now that he has received the nomamiton, he will have to stay close by his job for Walter Seed is to be Lieutenant Governor. O'Neal will have no time to get lost in Monroeville.

We hear of several throughout the county who went into the recent primary and voted the state ticket but refrained from voting the county ticket. A vote in a democratic primary, regardless of what candidates are voted for, carries with it a promise to support the ticket, both state and county, in the general election.

We are giving considerable space this week to the speech of Hon. E. B. Deason delivered last week at the ninety-first anniversary of Odd Fellowship. The speech makes good reading and we have no apology to offer for reproducing it. We publish it at the request of the Lodge before which it was delivered and because we believe that many of our readers will be glad of an opportunity to peruse so able a document.

The newly-elected democratic committee has not yet been organized but it is safe to predict that the organization will be perfected within a very short time and everybody will "get busy."

Farmers generally are complaining of the extremely cool nights and mornings. It retards the growth of cotton especially and they are anxious to see this money crop progressing more rapidly.

We hear of quite a few men whose cotton stand was destroyed by the extremely cold weather in April who are putting their fields in corn and potatoes. Wise ones! Cotton may be the "money crop" but corn, potatoes and hogs are the "live at home amid contentment crops."

The republicans are a little at sea just now as to who they want for Probate Judge; they are halting between two opinions in this county. Well, it doesn't matter who they want; we know who they are going to have for the next Probate Judge—his initials are E. B. D.E.A.S.O.N. and though a staunch democrat who loves his party he will nevertheless make an excellent Probate Judge for both democrats and republicans.

The little "amalgamation" scheme which was in process of formation some days ago seems to have slipped a cog of late. The pipe dreams of certain republicans whose longing eyes turned toward the Upper House and sundry other offices have gone up in vapor. It was a pretty trick if it had worked but that was the rub—it wouldn't work. "You had orter known better than to try any sich game on us fellers anyhow. What yer think we're heer for?"

The Press has some spicy reading for its subscribers that it will publish later on in the game of politics now being played. It relates to the most beautifullest scheme of sacred republicans to bolster up a forlorn hope that's been hatched hereabouts for many moons. We're saving it up so it will hit with a dull thud when it does come down. Some people will think Halley's comet has made a ten strike upon this mundane sphere when they see a recounting of their antics in cold type. But we mustn't tell yet. When it does appear it will be genuinely good reading, of that you may rest assured.

Contentions and controversies over small matters never help a town. The water wagon had scarcely arrived before there was bickering among certain ones about advantages being taken in the matter of advertising. The best way to settle that controversy is for all to advertise in the Press, the best paper ever published in Chilton county. Then the water wagon ad. would not prove such a bug-a-boo.

After all the question of Whiskey or no Whiskey will not be settled. The State Convention at its meeting on the 17th will be compelled to take some action on this great economical and social (not political) question. It matters not in what form they incorporate it into the party platform there is going to be some who will not like the pronouncement. Whether it be local option or statewide or saloon-take-the-land-again somebody is going to be disappointed. We suggest to these wise men that the least said about the matter the better for the party and for all concerned. We have had contention and discussion and convulsion enough over it to last a decade without injecting it again into party politics.

A few more weeks and cotton chopping will be over; the crops will be layed by for a season of growing. Would it not be well during this time to put a little extra work on the public roads so as to enable the farmers to market their crops. Sometimes the profits of a cotton crop are taken from the producer in broken vehicles, overstrained stock and harness because of the fact that to get to market they have to pull their product over roads that are almost impassable. A little work in the Summer season will save much annoyance in the Fall and Winter.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wiley Littlejohn went to Tuscaloosa Sunday last to attend commencement exercises of the Alabama Central Female College.

Speaking of the above commencement exercises, we notice that Clanton has two sweet girl graduates among those who this year retire from the arduous duties of college life, in the persons of Miss Ruby Vaughan Downs, who graduates with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and Miss Carrie Littlejohn, who had the degree of Bachelor of Science conferred upon her. These two young ladies returned on Wednesday night to their homes, much to the delight of their many friends.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of the public schools of Clanton the work of this scholastic year was carefully gone over and the business affairs of the school gotten into proper shape for the closing exercises. Among other things of general interest to the public transacted by the trustees was the re-election of the entire corps of teachers now associated with the school. This will be gratifying intelligence to the patrons of the school and to its friends.

And, by the way, the teachers and scholars are making great preparations for the closing exercises. In addition to an address by that finished scholar, Hon. Henry Fitts, of Birmingham, the pupils of the school are now busily engaged in staging quite an enterprising play for the delectation of their visitors. The Press is getting out the programs, and, judging from the cast of characters, those who fail to go out will miss a treat.

Rev. T. B. Tichenor, editor of the Dadeville Courier, and withal a most affable gentleman and scholar, was in one day this week to see The Press folks. We appreciated his visit very much indeed. Mr. Tichenor is here for a short rest, visiting his family. Now that he knows where The Press office is located we shall expect him to come frequently during his stay here.

On next Tuesday week the Daughters of the Confederacy will meet at the home of Mrs. S. A. Stewart. Every lady who had father, brother, nephew or other relative connected with the service, or who has a heart for Southern chivalry and who feels an interest in the work of this noble band of ladies, is most cordially invited to attend this meeting and to enroll their names as members of the association. The old heroes of the Lost Cause are fast crossing the Great Divide, and we should lose no opportunity for honoring them or the cause they represented. Let our ladies take the matter in hand and increase the local membership as greatly as possible.

The State Association of the Daughters of the Confederacy met on last Wednesday at Montgomery in annual convention. Clanton was ably represented by Mrs. Belle George and Mrs. Dr. A. N. Johnson.

On Friday the entire body of ladies went to the Old Soldiers' Home at Mountain Creek, where they were hospitably entertained by the war veterans "encamped" at that place. But, as we have a lively representative in the home in the person of Capt. William Bell, who enlisted at the firing of the first gun of the war and went through the entire conflict, we are waiting on him to give our readers a full account of the visit of the "daughters."

Last week County Court, Judge Reynolds presiding, was in session. Several cases came up for adjudication, among which was that of Zeb Barrow, charged with selling liquor. Mr. Barrow was represented by E. W. Price, Esq. of Mountain Creek, while the State was ably represented by Hon. W. M. Adams. This being the second time Barrow was charged with the same offense, and the testimony being strong and direct, the judge assessed a fine of $50 and in addition imposed a penalty of ninety days at hard labor. The judge in passing sentence, stated that under ordinary circumstances he would give the extreme penalty of the law, but as the grand jury is now in session and will at once begin an exhaustive investigation into the case we prefer to let the matter rest with them. Cleve Holditch will doubtless be remembered by quite a number of our Clanton people, his father, Mr. Hatrison Holditch, having at one time been section foreman at this place.

Five negroes have been arrested and lodged in jail charged with participation in the crime. The citizens of Maplesville were stirred up not a little over the killing, and it was at one time thought that Deputy Sheriff Curlee would have a hard time of it making it to jail with his prisoners.

The following marriage licenses have been issued during the week:

O. L. Davenport to Miss Lizzie Mims.

Thomas Sayell to Miss Mamie Bearden.

W. M. Davenport to Miss Florence Davis.

W. B. Liveak to Miss Susie Foshee.

E. I. Dillard to Miss Cora Welch.

J. N. Davenport to Miss Bettie Hamilton.

Dan Hayes (colr.) to Sallie Bowers (colr.)

the man was a man of family sentence would fall heavier upon the poor wife and children than upon the defendant, and for that reason he showed mercy.

The question is: Do men of this character appreciate the leniency of the court, and do they take into consideration the great hardship that they bring to their dear ones by their persistency in violating the law? Would not the family of such a man be really better off without him?

On account of defectiveness in the indictment found against Mrs. Pope for the slaying of her mother last year the present grand jury will have to bring in a new true bill against her. The case is set for rehearing on next Wednesday.

The grand jury is also engaged in an investigation of the murder of Julia Belle Miller, whose body was found last winter in Rushton's mill pond.

The shrewdness of Deputy Ed Smitherman averted a lynching on last Sunday night. In bringing the two prisoners to jail who are charged with the murder of young Holditch at Maplesville Deputy Smitherman, hearing that a crowd was gathering with the avowed purpose of lynching the accused, took a by-path and eluded the mob. But for this precaution the county would have been spared the expense of a trial, but her fair name would have been besmirched and the citizenship of the county put to shame. Better let the law take its course. It's the safest and best way.

Mr. Editor:

Please say for me to the good Democrats of Chilton that I am deeply appreciative of the magnificent vote accorded me in the recent primary election, and that I shall ever hold this mark of esteem and confidence as one to be pleasantly remembered.

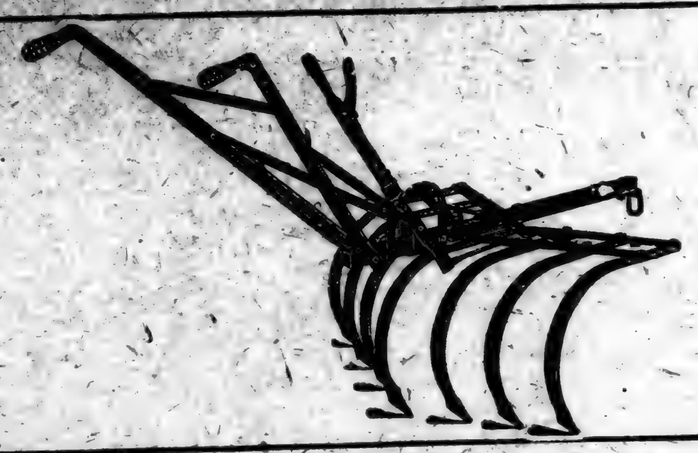
Respectfully,
E. B. DEASON.

Mr. Editor:

I wish you would permit me space to return my sincere thanks to the people for the magnificent vote given me in the primary election. The vote given me and the other candidates shows that the Democracy of old Chilton is at last united and that by continuing this unity we may expect victory in November. To this end let us all work.

Again, I say to my friends, I thank you for your votes. Cordially,

H. M. SIMPSON.



The spring term of the Circuit Court is now in session and also the grand jury, hence there is a great concourse of people in town during the week—witnesses, defendants, prosecutors, sightseers, onlookers and all. So we will not undertake this week to give an extended list of the visitors to town. Everybody and his cousin is here.

On last Sunday afternoon quite a serious accident happened to Mrs. Annie Fox, a most estimable lady of Clanton. While coming into town to spend the night with a relative and walking along the right of way of the L. & N. Railroad her little 3-year-old child, in attempting to cross a culvert over which a broad plank had been placed, lost its balance and was in the act of failing when the mother rushed to its rescue. In her excitement she lost her balance and fell from the crossing, a distance of four or five feet, breaking her right limb just above the ankle.

The wires brought the news of the murder of young Cleve Holditch by parties unknown near Maplesville on last Sunday night. From the best information obtainable it seems that young Holditch was with several negroes during Sunday night, and for some cause unknown they took his life. It appears that the trouble arose over money matters, but just what passed between the unfortunate young man and his slayers is yet a matter of speculation. Several rumors are afloat as to the cause of the killing, but as the grand jury is now in session and will at once begin an exhaustive investigation into the case we prefer to let the matter rest with them. Cleve Holditch will doubtless be remembered by quite a number of our Clanton people, his father, Mr. Hatrison Holditch, having at one time been section foreman at this place.

Five negroes have been arrested and lodged in jail charged with participation in the crime. The citizens of Maplesville were stirred up not a little over the killing, and it was at one time thought that Deputy Sheriff Curlee would have a hard time of it making it to jail with his prisoners.

We own the whole entire state agency for the Tate Wire Tool

Is the most practical and useful tool that has been invented for the use of ranchmen and farmers during the entire history of the barbed wire fence. In fact, the tool is indispensable to any person who has to build or repair a wire fence of any character. It has a wire cutter, staple and nail puller, a wire stretcher, pliers, screwdriver and leather punch combined, so that it is equally adapted for splicing, repairing and building any kind of wire fence. The tool is eighteen inches long, weighs three pounds, and is conveniently adapted for carrying in the hand or tied to the saddle. It is made of the very best drop forged tool steel, with material and workmanship guaranteed, and will last a lifetime. The tool is an entirely new invention, in every way practical and, as said by a number of stockmen and farmers who have seen it or used it, "It supplies a long felt want." Practical men often remark that it is astonishing that the tool was not invented long ago. It is so simple that every one, without exception, who has seen it is enthusiastic over it, and it is recommended by a number of the leading stockmen of the country. The price is so reasonable that no one can afford to be without it. Sold every way for $2.50.

Call at HEADLEY & COMPANY'S STORE and see the most marvelous tool with which to handle wire fencing that has ever been invented.

We will be glad to show you this wonderful little machine. It is a marvel of inventive genius. It does all the work with the aid of one man.

FAIRVIEW.

The primary election is now over and some of the democrats feel like congratulating themselves for electing such a good ticket. Now the thing to do, is for each democrat in Chilton county to strike hands with the nominees and help them to be elected. It is important to us, as well as to the candidates that they should fill the next offices.

Sunday school at Mt. Nebo is progressing nicely. Those who do not attend are missing a great deal.

School, here, is fine. Although small, its students are doing excellent work.

The democratic club met at New Cedron Saturday night. The club had for one of its honorary members Hon. E. B. Deason, who made an excellent speech on democracy. The next meeting will be held at Popwell School House, Saturday at night, May 21, and will be entertained by the following speakers: T. L. Dickinson, J. S. Bone, B. L. Jones, H. M. Simpson, and W. S. Cox. We expect to have some good speaking by these gentlemen who are able to propound democracy and its sound doctrines. Therefore we expect them to have a large audience of listeners. Candidates are invited to come out and let the people know how they stand.

The piano contest is getting interesting in this part of the county, as we have one of the best girls of the community in the contest and everybody desires to see her win, and by the way she is not working "on the sly."

Best wishes to The Press. May it live long and soon see its great desire firmly established. That is—Chilton county going solidly democratic.

COOPER COMMENTS.

Cooper is as ever, and will always be that way.

The farmers of this community are grumbling about the cool mornings that we are now having.

Mr. Warren Jones from Texas, is visiting his brother, Mr. J. L. Jones, of this place. He will return to his Texas home in about two weeks. Mr. Jones preached a most interesting sermon on last Saturday night to a fair audience.

Rev. Mr. Hughes, of Coosa, the pastor of the church at this place, preached on last Saturday and Sunday two as fine sermons as any one could wish to hear. He also made a fine talk to the Sunday school just at tthe close of the Sunday school session.

The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was not as large as was expected. Some other attraction seems to have drawn the people away from the church. Ladies, gentlemen, boys, girls, why it is that we cannot persuade you to attend Sunday school and assits in building up that institution which is to be, has been, and is now such a force in character building? We need you and you need the Sunday school.

We had a most enjoyable singing here last Sunday afternoon. Messrs. S. M. Yates, Jr., L. F. Grant, O. C. Rich, Hubbard Curlee and Arthur Neeley we erthe leaders and most excellent music was had. Misses Exa Grant, Beula Patterson and Verna Grant conducted the class music which was greatly enjoyed.

Why can we not have such entertainments here, say, every other Sunday afternoon? It would not only prove a most pleasant occasion but be highly instructive to the young people in Sunday school work.

Our boys have at last gotten down to work on the baseball team. We have fine material here for a good team—all we need is a little practice and we will be ready to meet the best of them. In Bob Headley, Sydney Driver, Sam Driver, Rudie Jones, Jake Jones, Jesse Jones, Philip Barrett, Hughey Taylor and others Cooper has an opportunity for organizing one of the fastest teams in the county. Bob Headley or Sydney Driver either or both have it on all the boys when it comes to the twirling act—at least that's the way we think down in this neck of the woods. And when it comes to the initial sack Rudie Jones or Phillip Barret can play rings all around the youngsters who pride themselves on their ability to protect the first base from encroachment Pretty soon we'll come up toward Clanton-way and give you an article of baseball that will be worth the while.

But I guess I'd better close for this time.

KINCHEON.

Editor Press:

Last week my man for governor was Mallory; now it is O'Neal. My party has said so and if I refuse to support O'Neal because of certain things on the prohibition question to whom can I look? What party will put up a man who will suit me in all things since Mallory is not now in the race? Will the republicans suit us in this? Does anyone think they will nominate a man who is a prohibitionist when ninety per cent of that party was against the prohibition movement less than a year ago. When they had an opportunity to give the state prohibition if they had desired it?

No, not them! You have missed your guess considerably if you think so. When the republican party nominates and runs a man against O'Neal, the Democratic nominee, he will stand about as much chance at the close of the campaign of seeing the governor's office as a watermelon stands at a negro camp meeting or a keg of bock beer stands at a Dutch picnic.

And then it is rumored, so we hear out this way, that there is to be another man out for the State senate. This man, whoever he is, will have no party to which he can look so far as this campaign is concerned. My democratic friend, what good would your vote do except to disrupt your party?

Even if he should be elected and go to Montgomery he would receive about as much recognition from the legislature (which, of course will be strictly democratic, and regularly elected), as a newspaper editor would receive from a National bank, and you, Mr. Editor, know how much that is.

There were certain members of the democratic party who failed to go to the polls at the recent primary election. That is too bad.

Cannot the democrats of Chilton county get together just one time and by a good strong pull elect to office the splendid ticket nominated last week? Lets all try; we can do it if we will.

Success to The Press.

A DEMOCRAT.

(Note by the Editor)—Thanks for the "impled compliment." The Press has no use for banks, friend, it wants subscribers. Then again. You mustn't "rub the fur the wrong way;" these Chilton county democrats are going to get together and they are going to elect that splendid ticket. You need not doubt that any more than you do that watermelon vale or the boar story.

There's going to be no independents this year, the love feast of democrats is just a little ahead of us and they're all coming in to enjoy it.

THE ICE OF THE NORTH.

White, immaculate, storm-beaten beaches,
Lonely sea beyond seas, beyond ken,
From the ice of your farthermost reaches,
Re-echoes your challenge to men!

They have sought you with worship and wonder;
In despair they have sent forth their breath—
And for answer—the crash of your thunder,
The shiver and silence of death!

You have wooed them, aroused them, and quelled them,
You have prisoned them fast in your floes,
You have drawn them, betrayed and repelled them,
And their bones lie a-bleach on your snows.

Is your diadem, gemmed with star-flowers
From those far-flaming fields of the sky,
But the sign of a Tyrant whose powers
Overthrow and destroy and defy?

Oh! imperious, pitiless regions—
Snow-panoplied hills that entice—
Are those silent impassable legions
But guarding a bosom of ice?

Or is it the radiant duty
Of your rapturous heart of delight
That crimsons with current of beauty
The dark span of your desolate night?

Through the long voiceless twilights that darken
Your virginal, slumbering plain,
Do you dream of the sunlight, and harken
For the voice of the southwind again?

Oh! mysteries never beholden
By the ages, we question and wait
For the ultimate answer withholden
In the mist-woven mantle of Fate.

By your star-vestured beauty still haunted,
In the wake of your moons, we set forth—
By your perilous silence undaunted,
We follow the call of the North!

The Old Schoolmaster.

By DAVID LYALL.

No one would have thought, looking at his benign face, or listening to the calm and measured tones of his voice, that the wind of tragedy had once swept across the old schoolmaster's life.

When the beginning actually was, nobody seemed exactly to know. The place without the old schoolmaster would have been inadequate, incomplete; in fact, altogether inconceivable.

Those who had been his contemporaries had died out one by one, and the only one who remembered the coming of the schoolmaster in the far back days was Captain Drew of the White House, where he had lived for seven and fifty years.

The schoolmaster had arrived in winter, dropping down suddenly from nowhere, a tall, slender, dark-eyed man, with youth in his step, but experience and sadness on his face. It was long before the advent of the School Board, in the days when education was for the few, and not for the many. The Loaning was glad to welcome the pale-faced stranger, when it was discovered that he had store of knowledge—classical knowledge, too, which he was willing to impart at a modest fee.

These were the days when great men were cradled in village homes, and trained in unpretentious schools by men who loved learning for its own sake, and imparted that love to others with thoroughness and care.

There was no standard then save love alone, and the few for whom books had the immortal message went out when the time came to deliver that message to the world with all the power that was in them.

Of such men, whose names are now upon the roll of history and of fame, the old schoolmaster had trained not a few.

His pride in the gallant boys who passed through his hands was only equalled by their affection for him. Indeed, he had a singular power of winning hearts, and many wondered how it was that one so gentle and yet so strong, so fitted in every way for the making of a home, should have elected to walk solitary through life.

The school was a broad, low building of the black whinstone peculiar to the neighborhood. It stood in an ample playground in which a few sparse trees that had survived the hard usage of many generations of Loaning boys made some slight shade in summer, and broke the force of the moorland gale in winter.

The schoolhouse was hard by, a small, low, picturesque, though highly inconvenient dwelling, embowered among green, its outside a picture at which many paused to look.

Here the old schoolmaster had lived for nearly forty years, ministered unto for three parts of that time by one Christina Fellows, a capable serving woman of the better sort, who alternately mothered and ruled him and hoped to close his eyes in death.

Christina had a hard face and did not wear her heart on her sleeve; but she had had her tragedy, too, and had peritably been a brand plucked from the burning by the schoolmaster's beneficent hand.

Accused of theft in her previous place she had been set adrift and might have gone under had not the schoolmaster taken her, without a character, when the hand of every man and every woman in the parish was against her, and she had literally not a place wherein to lay her head.

She had repaid that Christ-like act with a life-long devotion, but even Christina knew very little of her master's inner life.

"Gie him bulk," she would say, "he's a terrible man for books. If it wasna for me he wad read himsel' intil his grave."

The School Board and all its newfangled ways, which in fulness of time robbed the old schoolmaster of his official position and placed him on the retired list, was the main object of Christina's hatred and contempt. It was noticeable that from the day when the schoolmaster gave up his active duties to another and a younger man he perceptibly declined both in health and in spirits. Happily for him they suffered him to remain in the little house, which did not meet modern requirements or satisfy the aspirations of the new schoolmaster, who wished everything up to date. This was a very happy thing for the old man. Dig up the old tree, root and branch, and there is small chance of its safe or successful transplantation.

The old schoolmaster and Christina dwelt together in their green bower with a perfect understanding, though in all these years the veil was never once lifted from the old man's heart and life.

At the very last, it seemed as if fate had relented and determined to make late amends. It happened on a bleak day in winter when the lowering sky seemed to breathe out threatenings, while the scudding snowflakes presaged the coming storm.

The Loaning moorland was very bleak on such a day, and the few passengers in the village omnibus, which plied from the station in the afternoon, were glad of the shelter of the old leather cover, kept for hard weather. There were three passengers only, one an elderly lady, richly though very quietly dressed, and wearing a thick veil over her face.

When she lifted it at the inn door to put a question to the landlord there was a haunting sweetness in her expression, and a dignity in her bearing which instantly commanded attention and respect.

She asked for a room, and for some light refreshment, and gave her name as Mrs. Grantley. About an hour later she walked through the falling snow along the village street in the direction of the school, and turned in at the gateway of the old schoolmaster's house. The daylight was fading as she lifted the latch of the wicket gate, and at the very moment Christina Fellows happened to be at the sitting-room window, for the purpose of drawing the blind after having lit the cheerful lamp.

"There's somebody at the yett," she said curiously. "A leddy, an' I dinna ken her. She must has made a mistake."

The schoolmaster, deep in his book, returned an absent answer, and Christina hastened to the door to interview the stranger, and, if need be, put her in the right way.

"Yes, Maister Thornton lives here, an' he is at haime," she said in no little surprise. "Will ye step in?"

The invitation was not very graciously given, but was instantly accepted. Christina preceded the visitor to the sitting-room door, which she flung open.

"Somebody to see you, sir," she said excitedly; then, her curiosity getting the better of her good manners, she stood still to watch the effect, and if possible get a clue to the stranger's business.

The schoolmaster rose quickly to his feet, and came forward smiling benignly, blinking a little as the lamplight shone full on the eyes from which he had removed the reading glasses. Then Christina Fellows beheld a strange thing, from which she shrank with the secret shame of a strong, reserved nature incapable of any emotional display.

The strange lady, with her veil thrown back and her sweet face all aglow, spoke the schoolmaster's name in accents of tenderness, and laid her two hands on his shoulders.

"I've come at the long last, Tom," she said. "Thank God, it is not too late."

Then Christina, in a mortal panic, not over sure that she had heard or seen aright, closed the door in haste, and retired wringing her hands to her own domain. "Mercy me, sic on-gauns! I wonder wha she is! It's hardly decent, but I maun wait or I see."

She felt, however, as if the end of all things had come.

The schoolmaster's face flushed, and he took the hands from his shoulder and held them close, then stooped to kiss them, and she drew herself a little away.

"I know everything, Tom," she said nodding and smiling, too, though her voice had an unsteady note. "I have known it only three days. In that time I have traveled seven hundred miles, praying God that when I came to the journey's end I should find you able to hear me speak."

"It is wonderful, Mary, wonderful," he said, speaking like a man in a dream. "I never thought that you and I should meet in this world, though I have long been certain about the next."

She made a gesture of fine scorn.

"I know of the lies that parted us, and of the noble part you played to save the good name of a man whom you thought I loved. He won me by these lies, Tom, and you bore the brunt. He was not even honest in his death," she said, and her voice took a tense note of scorn. "If he had been I should have found you long ago, and so we might have had a few more years together. It was a Christ-like act. You practically laid down your life, not for your friend, but for your enemy."

"Nay my dear," said the old schoolmaster quickly. "It was done for you."

"Well, but it was not wise nor well done for any of us, for I have had a hard life. But, please God, we shall have a few days of happiness and peace together; for since I find you alone in this little house I will never go away again."

She spoke like a woman who had counted the whole cost, and whose quest was ended absolutely. She laid her gloves on the table, untied her bonnet-strings, and pushed it, with a little thrill of laughter, to the floor, and the lamplight on her bright hair revealed not a trace of gray.

"You have kept your youth, Mary," he said, tremblingly, for in a moment the gulf of the years was not only bridged, but utterly swept away. "Look at me, a broken old man! Yet, if it pleases God to give me the sweet of your friendship for the few years that are left, I will give Him thanks."

She only smiled again with a deep, mysterious sweetness in her eyes, and sat down by the hearth as if she had found the place that was her very own.

Later in the evening an interview took place between the stranger lady and Christina Fellows, an interview which not only appeased the ire of that somewhat hard-visaged spinster, but spread out a new vista before her bewildered eyes. A message was sent to the Hawk Inn, and the lady's belongings were forthwith brought to the schoolhouse, and the new era began.

It made a great talk in the Loaning, it being freely rumored that a mysterious rich relation had suddenly swooped down upon the old schoolmaster and was desirous of carrying him off to live in the south. Christina, for her own part, and to add to the dignity of the occupation, accidentally let fall bits of information concerning the which presently shook the place to its very foundations.

One fine February morning the schoolmaster and his guest departed from the Loaning, being accompanied to the station by Christina, who bade good-bye to them in tears.

Two days later this announcement set the county by the ears.

"At Edinburgh, by special license, on the 19th inst., Thomas Bradbury Thornton, to Mary Carton, widow of the late Sir Charles Grantley, of Garth Castle, Pembroke." — British Weekly.

MODERATION.

"WE may grasp virtue so hard, till it becomes vicious, if we embrace it too straight, and with too violent a desire.

"A man may be both too much in love with virtue and be excessive in a just action. I have known a great man prejudice the opinion men had of his devotion, by pretending to be devout beyond all examples of others of his condition. I love temperate and moderate natures. And immoderate zeal, even to that which is good, though it does not offend, does astound.

"Those who attempt to regulate the manners of men, theology and philosophy, will have a saying on everything. There is no action so private that can escape their inspection and jurisdiction. They are best taught who are best able to censure and curb their own liberty.

"There is no just and lawful pleasure, wherein the intemperance and excess is not to be condemned; but to speak the truth, is not man a miserable creature the while? It is scarce, while in his natural condition, for him to have the power to taste one pleasure, pure and entire; and yet, man must be contriving doctrine and precepts to curtail the little he has; he is not yet wretched enough unless by arts and study, he augments his own misery."—Michael Seigneur De Montaigne.

HOUSE DESIGNED BY SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN

Famous Mansion in Belfast Suffers Damage by Fire, Losing an Ell

Since the fire a few days ago, which destroyed the ell or back wing of the Edward Sibley residence, at Belfast, the attention of the public has been called to this grand old mansion standing back from High street, with its wide spreading lawns surrounded by fine old trees, says the Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

It is known to but few, however, that this structure was designed by none other than Sir Christopher Wren, the famous English architect, who also designed St. Paul's Cathedral. The mansion was built in 1842 by the late Judge Joseph Williamson, of Augusta. It came into the possession of Timothy Thorndike, Quartermaster in the Twenty-sixth Maine Regiment, in 1873, and later to his daughter, Mrs. Edward Sibley.

The house is handsomely furnished and is frequently the scene of society affairs, Mrs. Sibley being a charming hostess and entertaining royally.

The main house stands practically intact, although somewhat damaged by smoke and water. It is one of the show places of the city and one of which all are very proud.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Reform is always headed for reaction.

It isn't safe to make love, even to an engaged girl, for she can break it off.

A man's idea of indulging his wife is if she will spoil him.

The longer a man can stay away from his family the more he can lie about how he misses them.

If there were no telling of lies we'd have to disbelieve the truth.

A man starts out expecting to get rich and ends up thinking he is lucky to keep out of the poor house.

One good deed can deserve another a long time without getting it.

The more money a man will spend on flowers for his wife the less he will want to spend on necessaries for her.

A woman can forgive her husband most anything if nobody else will.

A girl is awful smart to be cross with a man so as to make him think he is the one.

The danger to a girl of being pretty is she thinks she's prettier.

The reason a man bets is so he can brag if he wins and forget to mention it if he loses.

The good investment is for the fellow who lets you have it for some of your money.

A woman spends her money for what she wants; a man for what he thinks he wants.

A little cold nerve will get a man a bigger reputation for ability than a head full of brains.

Money doesn't give a person virtues, but it makes people act as if he had them all.

A man might beable to spend some of his own money on himself if he had no family.

The kind of popularity a man buys by spending money on people he couldn't sell for one cent on the dollar.

A woman is an exceptionally good card player when she deals her partner a poor hand and doesn't blame him for it.—From "Reflections of a Bachelor," in the New York Press.

Japanese Floral Calendar.

The Japanese are extremely fond of all flowers, and they have therefore made a calendar from them, giving to each month a favorite blossom or leaf.

Thus the pine, the emblem of lasting prosperity and life, belongs to January. Its branches are used to decorate all houses on New Year's Day.

To February belong the blossoms of the plum tree, which stand for purity, and the beautiful blossoms of the peach tree, to which young girls are compared, are associated with March.

Next the cherry blossom, the most beloved of all flowers, is held to belong to April, and to May are assigned the gorgeous clusters of the wistaria.

The iris flower, in which is compared the strength and beauty of young boys, belongs to June, and July has the glory and perfume of the water lily. The flowering bibiscus tree attaches its beauty to the month of August. While September claims the exquisite scales

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS

Oilcloth For Shelves.

A busy housewife can save herself and her maids a great deal of labor by covering all the larder, cupboard and scullery shelves with oilcloth.

This is very easily kept clean. My kitchen table is also covered in the same manner, while a few odd floor tiles on which saucepans can be put are equally useful, as they are so easily wiped clean.—Home Chat.

Cleaning Lace.

Pure alcohol can be used with wonderful success as a means of cleaning black Spanish or chantilly lace. The alcohol should be poured into a clean basin and whipped with the hand until it is frothy, when the lace should be dipped into it and well worked about with the fingers until the dirt is removed. After gently squeezing out the spirit the lace should be laid on a folded cloth, the patterned edge pulled out, each scollop or picot being fastened down with a pin. When perfectly dry the lace should be unpinned and pressed gently between the palms of the hands until smooth in lieu of ironing it, as this would flatten the pattern and spoil the color.—Indianapolis News.

Household Science.

At a recent meeting of the Department of Household Science of the Illinois Farmers' Institute, Miss Ruth Connibear, in the course of a talk on the problem of living economically and yet buying nutritive foods, said: "The State University School for Housekeepers has broadened my horizon in domestic work; it has taught me to make the household duties a pleasure when before I thought them drudgery. When I go into a house or store I cannot help but observe and take an interest in the things that were taught to us at the short course. There is a steadily growing sentiment in favor of furnishing to every girl, high or low, rich or poor, somewhere in her regular education, systematic instruction and drill in housekeeping, and home making, in food value and domestic economies."

Mrs. Jennie C. Barlaw in her report said:

"The housekeeper of to-day must read more, think more, study more and know more in order to meet the demands. There is no business in which brain work is needed more to be able to apply principles underlying right living. Let me urge more work to interest and instruct the girls. Teach them how to cook, not blanc mange and fruit cake, but the essential foods and to do it properly. Teach them how to make good bread and cook meats and vegetables properly rather than angel food or floating island. Teach them, not point lace and embroidered pillows, but to make aprons, dresses, children's clothes, to cut economically and fit carefully. Teach them how to care for the home, to have it sanitary, and to care for their bodies in health and sickness. Teach them system and economy, how to keep accounts and spend money wisely. Then better homes will be assured, better health and happiness."

Recipes

Corn Chowder—Melt a small piece of butter in the bottom of a kettle and in it fry an onion. To this add three potatoes cut in dice and one-half can of corn. Season well with salt and pepper. Cover with water and cook until potatoes are soft. Then add one pint of milk. Reheat and serve.

Eggs in Nests.—Take the whites of the eggs and whip to a stiff froth; pile it irregularly on a flat buttered baking dish and make hollows here and there; sprinkle with salt and pepper and drop into each the yolk of an egg; put a small piece of butter on each yolk; place the dish in the oven from five to eight minutes; serve at once.

Corn Oysters—One cup of cold sweet corn, one-half cup of flour, one beaten egg, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder; seasoning. Make a batter of the corn, flour, egg and baking powder. Melt the butter and drop batter into it by the teaspoonful. Fry until brown. These are good with maple syrup.

Fish Chowder—Fry one-half pound of salt pork until brown. Then remove pork from kettle and to fat add one onion sliced, two pounds fresh fish cut in small pieces and six sliced tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; cover with cold water and let cook about forty-five minutes. Then add two or three pints of milk and six common crackers broken in halves.

Ginger Cakes—Mix and sift together six cupfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of ginger, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, and one tablespoonful of soda. Heat one-half cupful of lard or butter, one cupful of New Orleans molasses and one cupful of boiling water. Take Charity by Proxy.

There is an Oregon statesman who is very prudent with his money, rarely spends anything if he can get some one else to do the spending for him. One morning he was walking down the street with a friend when they met a beggar who had a tale of woe that was amazing. The statesman listened and asked some questions. Then he turned to his friend and said: "John, this man's case effects me greatly. Give him a quarter."—Life.

SISTERLY HOPE OF MRS. CASSAD

She Writes, Telling Her Experience With Cardui, the Woman's Tonic, and How it Cured Her.

Bringhurst, Ind.—"For three years," writes Mrs. Jennie Cassady, of Bringhurst, Ind., "I suffered from womanly weakness.

"I had serious female complaint, and was so bad I could hardly get around, but I took Cardui and it brought great relief. It cured that awful misery, from which I suffered every month, after I had taken it for two months.

"I hope all suffering women will try Cardui, as I did, for by doing so they can benefit themselves at home."

You can always depend on Cardui for every bottle contains the ingredients necessary to help you. It is prepared in large quantities, according to the very latest methods, from herbs especially imported by the manufacturers, its preparation, from first to last, is under the superintendance of an experienced chemist and graduate physician, who takes every precaution known to science to perfect the finished product.

Ask your druggist. He knows and will tell you to take Cardui.

NOTE—The Cardui Home Treatment for Women, consists of Cardui ($1), Thedford's Black-Draught (25c), or Velvo (50c) for the liver, and Cardui Antiseptic Wash. These remedies may be taken singly by themselves, if desired, or three together as a complete treatment for women's ills. Write to: Ladies' Advisory Dept. Finds Attic Slab.

Word has been received at the Johns Hopkins University that an important discovery has just been made by Dr. Allan C. Johnson, who was fellow at the university last year, and who is now holding a fellowship at the American School of Classical Studies at Athens. While pursuing his investigations in the Acropolis at Athens, Dr. Johnson was prompted to examine carefully the stones which compose the retaining wall of an ancient cistern, and found that one of them had engraved upon it an inscription which had previously escaped observation, because it was built into the wall in such a way that no letters were visible.

When the slab was removed the inscription proved to be an Attic decree of 303 B. C., which was enacted in honor of Nikon of Abydos for having saved Athenians from drowning in a previous war. This valuable document, which is thirty lines in length and contains historical information hitherto quite unknown, will be published by the discoverer at an early date.—Baltimore American.

Scientists at School.

The mother of the new pupil informed the teacher that Freddie was a Christian Scientist.

"Is he?" said the teacher. "Then for goodness sake tell him not to tell the rest of the children find out. They will pummel the life out of him if they do. One of the hardest tasks a teacher has to do at recess is to protect an acknowledged Christian Scientist from his playmates. Christian Scientist isn't a religious war. The children don't mean to be fiendish, but they are. Somehow they get it into their heads that nothing can hurt a Christian Scientist and they punch holes in him to see if he can be made to bleed."—New York Sun.

A Lavender Town.

One of the minor harvests that promises well is that of the lavender fields. I have seen some flourishing crops in the Hitchin neighborhood recently. Comparatively few know of this quaint Hertfordshire town as an important lavender-growing center, yet it has grown the sweet old herb (which the Romans called Lavendula when they used it to scent their baths), has distilled the flowers and sent their extract into all parts of the world for more than a century. At cutting time people come in from miles around to inhale the sweetness of the fields, and when the distilling begins the fragrance of lavender is borne on the wind two miles or more from the town. The flowers are put into the still with the fresh bloom of their maturity on them, and from six pounds of such flowers about half an ounce of oil is extracted.

OPERATION UNSUCCESSFUL.

A Terrible Tale of Kidney Suffering.

Mrs. Emily H. Murdock, 6 Lorraine Place, Rochester, N. Y., says: "Kidney trouble came upon me when living in Cape Town, South Africa. I consulted the best physicians and an operation was ordered at B—— Hospital. After the operation I managed to 'pull together,' but was far from a well woman. I grew worse; the kidney secretions had to be drawn with a catheter. In despair I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I rapidly recovered and really do not know what I would have done without them."

Nuts as Food.

Nuts are distinguished by the large quantity of both proteids and fat that they contain. As a class they contain more fat than any plant food. Hence nuts possess a very large nutritional value, and when well masticated, and particularly if cooked thoroughly, they make a wholesome and nourishing food.

All nuts contain a varying amount of fibrous or woody material which is known as cellulose. Some nuts, such as cocoanuts, contain a considerable amount making them difficult of digestion unless great care is taken to chew them thoroughly.

Walnuts are among the finest and best nuts which come to our table. The juicy fresh walnut makes a very toothsome as well as wholesome article of diet, but the skins are tough and difficult of mastication. It is necessary for those who have a weak digestion to peel the skins from the fresh nuts, and even then the nuts must be masticated most assiduously in order to prevent gastric disturbances. Dried walnuts are usually regarded as more digestible than the fresh nut, but they also require the efficient mastication which we are emphasizing so much.—Good Health.

SCIENCE

The technical committee of the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain, has been asked to consider the expediency of undertaking a test of motor horns on similar lines to those adopted in recent head lamp trials, in order that motorists may "gain information as to the most effective and least objectionable form of warning instruments for general use."

The most effective means of life saving in the event of a storm is the lifeboat, the first one of which was launched on the Thames on January 4, 1785, by Lionel Lukin, a coachmaker of an inland town near London. The first lifeboat was a Norway yawl, which he had fitted with watertight compartments, a heavy iron keel and other essentials in buoyancy and stability, which are the cardinal and requisite features of lifeboats now.

No use has yet been discovered for tellurium. It is classed as a metalloid, and is supplied as a chemical curiosity in the form of a black powder and as a metallic-looking substance with a fine columnar crystal form, in color somewhat resembling tin. Some of the compounds of tellurium have an offensive, all-pervading and ineradicable odor. Chemists who have been experimenting with tellurium say, according to the United States Geological Survey, that after three months' exposure to sun, wind and rain the clothing worn by them while they were making these experiments, although it had not come into contact with the tellurium compound, was still so unpleasantly scented that it had to be destroyed.

A new form of mercury interrupter has recently been invented in which there are no reciprocating parts, but the interruptions are produced by a ripple formed in a stream of mercury. The mercury is contained in a revolving vessel within which a contact piece is fixed. The mercury is thrown by centrifugal force to the inner periphery of the vessel. At one point the stream of mercury is obliged to pass over a deflector, producing a ripple or wave, and the contact piece dips into the mercury stream at this point as it revolves with the vessel. The frequency of the interruptions may be varied by making the deflector revolve slowly in the same direction as the vessel is revolving, or in the opposite direction, or letting it remain stationary.

The Important Problem

confronting anyone in need of a laxative is not a question of a single action only, but of permanently beneficial effects, which will follow proper efforts to live in a healthful way, with the assistance of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, whenever it is required, as it cleanses the system gently yet promptly, without irritation and will therefore always have the preference of all who wish the best of family laxatives.

The combination has the approval of physicians because it is known to be truly beneficial, and because it has given satisfaction to the millions of well-informed families who have used it for many years past.

To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. AN UP-TO-DATE STOVE

Do you realize there is no longer any reason why you should use a coal range? Oil is cheaper than coal; it is lighter and easier to handle, and gives an intense heat. Provided you have the right stove, oil is more economical, cleaner and less trouble. Have you seen the

WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

The accompanying illustration gives you only a rough idea of its appearance. You really can't appreciate it until you either use it yourself, or talk to someone who has used it. It does everything that a coal range will do—except heat the room. The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove will do anything, from heating a kettle of water to cooking a course dinner, but it won't heat a room. It doesn't "smell," it doesn't smoke. It can't get out of order. Light it and it is ready. Turn it down and it is out. Only a woman who knows the trouble of carrying coal and cooking in a hot kitchen can appreciate what it means to have a clean, perfect stove that will cook anything, boil, bake or roast, and yet won't heat the kitchen. How is it done? The flame is controlled in turquoise-blue enamel chimneys, and directed against the bottom of pot, pan, kettle or oven, and only there. The flame operates exactly where it is needed—and nowhere else. With this stove your kitchen is cool.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

The nickel finish with the bright blue of the chimneys makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Tuning a Church Bell.

No matter how great may be the care taken in making the mold, a bell has to be tuned before it will ring a clear, true note. As a matter of fact, every bell sounds five notes, all of which must blend together harmoniously. If one is the least bit out the tone will be spoiled. The first of these notes is produced by the vibrations at the mouth of the bell, the second by the vibrations a little higher up, and so on to the fifth, which is produced quite near the top. As the character of the sound which rings depends upon the thickness of the metal it is possible by taking thin shavings from various places in the inside of the bell to alter the five notes until they are all in harmony. —Montreal Standard.

Have you noticed any of the swell stationery that The Press job office is now turning out? The merchants are not slow to take advantage of their opportunity to secure up-to-now office stationery.

We call attention to the ad. of the Mountain Creek Brick Company, which appears in this issue of The Press. Those needing building brick would do well to communicate with this firm.

Some complaint having been made about the advertisement of the Gamble Hardware Company that adorned the water wagon, Mr. C. Fenn Jones, manager for the firm, promptly settled all controversy by painting a broad green stripe across the wagon and totally obliterating the advertisement.

Dr. P. I. Hopkins made a hurried trip to Birmingham last Monday, returning Tuesday morning.

Mr. Julius Palmer complains that some sneak thief came to his place and purloined his piano contest tickets. These little slips are becoming real valuable of late and those possessing them would do well to guard them carefully.

Avers the Boston Globe: The way to get at the meat trust is through the law, not the law of diet, but the law of the land.

Some men, observes the Atchison Globe, have such an exaggerated notion of their own importance they think they should be promoted fast enough for their salaries to keep up with the increased cost of living.

There is no people in the world like the American, boasts the Boston Herald, in the number of men and women who look upon their title to wealth as involving stewardship and disposition of income and principal for public ends. During the last seventeen years the amounts of gifts, in sums of $50,000 or more, to religious, educational, philanthropic and civic causes has been many millions over a billion dollars, the record for the year just closing amounting to $141,250,000, or $40,449,000 more than during any previous year. Add to this the enormous sum that is given each year in sums totalling less than $50,000, and the total for "stewardship distributing" becomes astounding.

Mr. H. C. Young, of Beat One, Route Five, one of the staunch men of the County, was a pleasant caller at The Press offices this week.

Mr. W. T. Callen is enjoying the breezes of Florida, having gone down one day this week to spend his time fishing and otherwise enjoying himself.

Hon. F. A. Gulledge, of Verbena, was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

Jemison was represented in Clanton last Saturday by several of its distinguished citizens, among them being R. H. Gaines, W. T. Hand, D. L. Langston and W. A. Reynolds.

Miss Edwina Moore, of Mt. Carmel, is the charming guest of Mrs. Gamma Anderson.

Miss Eva Williams, than whom no more popular young lady ever comes to Clanton, is visiting the family of Mrs. J. E. Robinson.

Mr. Jno. M. Robinson and wife, of Birmingham, were here last Sunday on a visit to the parents of the former Mr. E. Robinson, Sr.

Mr. J. R. Mullins made a business trip to Montgomery Monday last.

Dr. E. A. Matthews went up to Birmingham and Anniston the early part of the week, returning Tuesday.

Messrs. J. A. Maham and W. J. Lambert, two of Chilton's progressive citizens, were callers at The Pres soffice Tuesday; we appreciated their visit.

It has been suggested that the water wagon be painted a bright, clean white and that a large, dull gray snout be frosted upon the white. We're not saying from whom the suggestion came, however.

Miss Margaret McKinney, of Birmingham, spent Sunday with Miss Dovie Roper.

Mrs. Troy Reeves, of Montgomery, is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. E. Luckie.

Mr. H. Gordon continues to find Columbiana attractive; he can scarcely stay away even during meal times.

Little Miss Gertrude Willilams, who has been attending school at Talladega, has returned home for the vacation season.

Dr. Samuel Hopkins came in last Monday night from Vanderbilt University where he took his degree as a Doctor of Dentistry. Dr. Hopkins has not yet decided where he will locate permanently; for the summer season he will doubtless remain in Clanton.

Mrs. Horace Fulton, of Montgomery, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Pryor, the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cannon, of Tuskaloosa, are visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Shepherd.

Remember that Carter, the Furniture Man, is selling out at cost, preparatory to moving to Prattville. If you need anything in his line now is the time to secure it at absolute cost. He gives piano contest tickets, too. tf

Mr. T. S. Vines has returned to his home in Ennis, Texas, after a pleasant visit to friends and relatives here.

Mr. F. A. Bates to Miss Sarah Headley.

Mr. C. C. Johnson to Miss Cylember Easterling.

Notwithstanding the fact that the court has been busily engaged during the week and the jurors summoned for service have ben kept close at hand but little real business has been dispatched by the Court. This is due, as stated elsewhere, to defective indictments.

Only two cases have thus far been tried by jury.

The case of the State against Jeed Ray, charged with trespass after warning was tried on Tuesday, Ray acting as his own attorney and upon submission to the jury a verdict of not guilty was rendered.

The Court entered Tuesday afternoon into the trial of George Middlebrooks, charged with cruelty to animals. This is a case in which the defendant is charged with overdriving a horse.

Hon. Thos. A. Curry represents the defendant, while the State is represented by Hon. Tipton Mullins.

The case of the State against Mrs. Pope will scarcely be called at this term of the Court.

In the civil suits of Forest Lumber Company against Robuck and James Broadhead and Son against Jones, judgment was rendered in each instance against the defendants.

News was received in Clanton on Tuesday morning of the death of Mrs. Cooper, at Andalusia, which even occurred on Monday night last. Mrs. Cooper was the mother of Messrs. Allen R. and John D. Cooper of this place. Mr. Allen R. Cooper was at her bedside at the time of her death; Mr. Jno. D. Cooper had been with his mother for some days but had just returned home when the intelligence was wired him. He left immediately for Andalusia.

Rev. S. M. Adams, of Thorsby, left Monday for a visit to Tampa and other points in Florida he will be gone several days.

Mrs. S. W. Collins, of Thorsby, spent several days this week in Clanton visiting friends and shopping.

Mr. J. W. P. Murphy was confined to his bed for seevral days in the early part of the week with a bilious attack.

It will be noticed that another young lady takes the lead this week in the piano contest. Six weeks have we been running and no person has held the lead any two weeks. This surely should be an incentive to those who are in the contest. The fact that one person leads this week does not indicate that the leadership will be held for any length of time.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES.

The planing mill plant of the Forrest Lumber Company is fast assuming proportions. The frame of the tremendous building is about completed and workmen are busily engaged in putting on the finishing touches. Within the next few days the machinery will be installed and another wage earner for Clanton will be in operation. The gladsome sound of another steam whistle will thrill the hearts of the bread winners of Clanton and the bright smiles of happy children whose fathers have found continuous employment will adorn our streets.

Let the good work go on; the more the merrier.

Said a gentleman to The Press man the other day: I noticed your article some time ago about the canning factory and had hoped by this time to hear of some enterprising individual or company who would undertake the erection and installation of such a plant. If we had a first-class canning factory our farmers would keep it supplied with fresh vegetables and we would not be so dependent upon the markets of the West.

The Press is compelled in a spirit of fairness to call a halt. We have asked the merchants handling the piano contest tickets to place the firm name on the back of each ticket as a protection to themselves, to us and to those who are in the contest. Some of them do not seem to understand the importance of this action and have failed to comply with our request. One firm has already complained that their tickets have been stolen; if the firm name was on the back the thief could be easily traced and the tickets either recovered or disallowed, but where there are several who fail to comply with the request it is impossible to say from what source these stolen tickets are coming.

We do not wish to reflect upon any one, we will not do so, but in strict fairness to those who are in the contest we shall have to discontinue the counting of votes which are not duly stamped or otherwise endorsed with the name of the firm which gives them out. Let cash customers take note of this and see that each ticket they receive is stamped on the back with the firm name of the party from whom they are received.

This contest must and shall be fairly conducted and we earnestly bespeak the co-operation of those who are either receiving or distributing tickets to help us in the matter. See that all your tickets are endorsed hereafter or by reason of negligence your friend may lose a vote.

No one can complain of a rule that is enforced on all alike and that is made for the protection of all.

The Clanton Furniture Co. is [illegible]

On account of a misunderstanding between Rev. R. J. Mills, the pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. F. M. Woods, the pastor of the Baptist Church and the Rev. Mr. Kline, the evangelist who is conducting the services at the Methodist church, there was no religious services in Clanton last Sunday morning. Rev. F. M. Woods whose regular appointment it was, had kindly given way to the Methodists in order that they might begin their meeting without any other services conflicting and knowing that his church would be closed on that day had gone on a visit to relatives at Montevallo; after Mr. Woods' departure a message was received from Rev. Mr. Kline that it would be impossible for him to reach Clanton before Monday night. Rev. Mr. Mills had previously made an appointment to preach at Mt. Nebo and so the whole preaching programme was thrown out of kelter. Both Sunday schools were well attended, however. On Sunday night Rev. Mr. Mills returned and conducted services at the Methodist church.

Thorsby readers and especially those interested in the Piano contest, are notified that Mr. J. J. Stanley is now handling the tickets. In making purchases from this enterprising merchant be sure to call for the tickets and vote them for your "onliest" girl.

Mr. R. O. Headley, of Fairview, is also handling the tickets and says that he finds them the best butter and egg and chicken drummers he has ever had. They come from far and near bringing to him these staple products of the farm and trading with him in order to secure the piano contest tickets. Verily the war waxeth warm and the battle of the ballots is becoming interesting.

Remember that the Clanton Furniture Co. is selling most of its stock below cost now; its the opportunity of a life time to secure household utensils and furniture. tf

Clanton was treated to a scene one day last week that has perhaps never before been witnesesd in these parts. The engine pulling the fast Southbound train Number One lost a tire at Lomax and had to be side-tracked at this place for repairs. The tire came completely off one of the large driving wheels thus disabling the big steam monster.

The passenger coaches were side-tracked at Lomax and another engine substituted for the disabled one. The work of replacing the tire was done at Clanton. It took but a few minutes to do the work but while it was going on it was interesting to the onlookers.

The time to buy household furnishings is when Carter, the Furniture man, is selling below cost. That's the time to get those kitchen utensils your good wife has been wanting so long. tf

We clip the following sad intelligence from the Advertiser of last Monday. The name, however, is incorrect, it should be Wilkins instead of Wilkinson. Mr. Wilkins has a brother living in Clanton, and to him and the other bereaved ones the community extends its heartfelt sympathy in this their sad hour.

Birmingham, May 15.—(Special.)—David Washington Wilkinson, aged 52 years, who was brought here from Maplesville for an operation just a week ago, died today at noon in a hospital. The deceased is survived by three sons and three daughters. The remains will be taken back to Maplesville for interment.

The meeting at the Methodist church is now in progress and much good is being accomplished. Rev. Mr. Kline is a pulpit orator of no mean ability and his presentation of the great truths of life are forceful in the extreme. The interest manifested in the meeting is good, yet it is not what it ought to be. Let every one who can attend every service.

In counting up the tickets for the piano contest this wek The Press man found a number of tickets that seemed never to have been handled; they were perfectly fresh and new as if they had just come from the printing press and there was no name on any one of them to indicate from whom they came. These tickets and all others like them will be counted this time but hereafter they will be consigned to the lot to be identified. They will not be destroyed but we must know from whence they come before they go into the calculation.

In an interview with Hon. E. L. Thornton, foreman of the Grand Jury, he states that that body has much work before it and that the probability is they will be unable to make their final report before the latter part of the week. The Press has made an effort to get the report, but up to this time it could not be secured.

Samuel Scott, for twelve years one of the leading photographers of Birmingham, a highly esteemed citizen and man of property has opened a first-class photograph gallery in Clanton after a rest from business of two years made necessary by ill health. At Mr. Scott's studio one can have executed the very latest work known to the photographic art. —Ledger. tf

The Press has received a number of compliments on the tabulated vote of the county as cast in the recent primary, including the total vote for State officers and also upon the reproduction of the speech of Hon. E. B. Deason delivered at the ninety-first anniversary of Odd Fellowship before the Shady Grove Lodge. Some have sought to find fault because the speech had no caption. This was neither the fault of Judge Deason or The Press. He had it prepared for publication at the request of the paper expecting The Press man to put the caption and The Press man thought the stenographer who prepared the copy had arranged all the necessary "fixins" for publication, hence it was given to the printer without further investigation. If, however, there is any criticism let it come this way; don't blame the next Probate Judge. He did his full duty. By the way, the speech was published exclusively in The Press—the paper that strives to please.

This office is now turning out the programs for the closing exercises of the Clanton High School which takes place on Monday night, May 23rd. The programs are works of art and the play to be presented will be highly entertaining.

We do not wish to be forever harping on one string but it is necessary to do so just now in order to correct any irregularities that may have crept into the piano contest. We have asked that all tickets be cast as soon as received but this request has been ignored. The necessity for this will be seen by reading an article printed elsewhere in this paper. Some of the merchants have not endorsed their tickets and some have been stolen. We are not going to count any more unendorsed tickets after this week. Look yours over and if they are not endorsed have them in the box as quickly as possible. After this week none will be received and counted unless some merchant's name appears on the back. We are writing each merchant to advise him of this fact so that he can protect himself, his customers and us. We also request them not to lend their rubber stamps to anyone. This request is made because some persons have made a call upon some of the merchants for the loan of their firm stamps in order to endorse the tickets. We want the party receiving the highest vote—honestly received—to get the piano and we are going to do all within our power to see that it goes in this way. Help us merchants and contestants by complying strictly with the rules of the contest.

And just here we might say that every ballot cast is kept; we count them then seal them up carefully and file them away in the vaults of the Clanton Bank. At the end of the contest these tickets can be seen by any one interested and their genuineness tested. Please put in this week every ballot you now have and then if you wish to trade back we shall offer no complaint.

The Grand Jury made a partial report on last Saturday returning [illegible] true bills.

We call the attention of our readers to the change of advertisement of the Gamble Hardware Company in this issue. This firm is now putting on its summer sale and invites those who contemplate a war against the mosquito and the house fly to investigate their offerings.

Lieut. Governor Seed passed through Clanton Monday afternoon on his way to Montgomery to be present at the official count of the recent primary election and to take in the meeting of the State Convention. Governor Seed took advantage of the stop here to shake hands with several of his friends who were at the depot. By the way, Gov. Seed is to be in Clanton on the fifth Sunday to deliver the dedicatory address at the unveiling of the Wilson monument by the Woodmen.

Before Esquire Enoch Foshee last Thursday Maria Brown, Freddie Brown and Mary Stanford, three dusky damsels, were arraigned charged with assault upon the person of Cora Hooks, another young woman of color. It seems that the three defendants become offended at some trifle with which the plaintiff was connected and proceeded to administer a sound thrashing. Esquire Foshee assessed a fine of Five Dollars against each defendant for their little entertainment.

On last Thursday night about nine o'clock the fusillade of the ever present six-shooter announced to the citizens of Clanton the presence of fire in their midst. The whole face of the western sky was illumined by the blaze which proved to be a tenement house belonging to Alfred Rucker and occupied as a residence by Cora Hooks. The entire belongings of the occupant were destroyed. Before assistance could reach the home it was consumed and considerable effort was expended in saving the adjacent property. Rumors of incendiarism were afloat and investigation held but the proof did not seem to justify the charge. The Grand Jury, however, has the matter in charge and they may probe deeper into the affair than has yet been done.

The Press is anxious to offer a proposition to the piano contestants that will be of interest and profit to them but we cannot do so until the outstanding tickets are cast. We want to be perfectly fair to all and they must be fair with us. Propositions cannot be made now with the large number of tickets being held back that would be fair to all. Cast your tickets and let us offer you a proposition that will both be pleasing and inviting.

News comes from out near Fairview that a little stranger has entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Headley and captured the hearts of both. A letter from the proud father states that he proposes to make a Methodist Bishop of the youth and that the atmosphere is balmier, the flowers sweeter and the birds sing merrier than ever before in his life. Mother and R. O., Jr., are doing well but not so with R. O. Sr.; he's so proud he can not confine himself to this mundane sphere.

Carter, the Furniture man, is fast disposing of his stock of goods, and it is not to be wondered at, since he is selling below cost. tf

The Press received the following letter to which it gladly gives space.

Please allow me, through your paper, to thank the democrats of Chilton County for their loyal support in the recent primary. I am more than pleased with the results and will promise to do all that I can for the success of the ticket in November. With best wishes to all I am in the fight to win.

We are giving considerable space this week to our Mountain Creek correspondent's account of the visit of the Daughters of the Confederacy to the Soldiers' Home. This handsome instrument is to be given away absolutely free of all cost to contestants, and will be a means of bringing joy into some home in Chilton County—that home may be yours.

With each cash subscription of one dollar to the Clanton Press—the new paper published at Clanton—will be given a ticket entitling the holder to five hundreds votes in the Grand Piano Contest.

The person receiving the largest number of votes at the end of the contest will receive this handsome instrument absolutely FREE.

In addition to the Grand First Prize, we have in our possession a receipt from the manufacturers for One Hundred and Fifty Dollars as part payment on another handsome Piano, which will be offered as a second prize in the contest. This prize goes to the person receiving the next highest vote. This prize represents One Hundred and Fifty Dollars in cash and will be accepted as such payment by the manufacturers.

No citizen of Chilton County, of good character, is debarred from the contest. Every one is invited to participate and will be given every assistance and all information possible to enable them to become the owner of this elegantly finished Piano and receipt for partial payment on another fine Piano.

READ THE PLAN CAREFULLY AND START EARLY; EACH DAY MEANS MUCH IN THE RUNNING.

In addition to the five hundred votes for cash subscriptions to the Clanton Press, the proprietors of the paper will give five votes in the contest for each one cent of cash advertising or cash job work that is brought to the office of the Clanton Press.

These votes are to be cast at the pleasure of the holder for the person nominated by the holder of the ticket.

Each ticket is plainly printed and contains a space for the name of the person for whom you wish to vote to be written thereon.

In case of a tie between contestants receiving the highest and next highest votes the prizes, or an amount equal to the value of the prizes, will be equally divided between them.

In addition to the votes given out by the Clanton Press we have arranged with several merchants to handle these Contest Tickets so that you may receive the benefit of your cash trade with them.

Below will be found the names of the merchants who will distribute Contest Tickets. With each one cent of cash trade done with them you are entitled to receive a ticket for one vote in the contest. Remember, one vote for each one cent of cash trade. If you spend one dollar in cash with them you are entitled to one hundred votes. If you spend ten dollars you are entitled to one thousand votes and so on. To obtain these tickets you will have to trade in Cash as no tickets will be given out for credit purchases. Each ticket will denote the number of votes to which you are entitled. For the convenience of the people two boxes will be used, one will be kept at the Upchurch Drug Company and the other at the office of The Clanton Press. Write on the ticket the name of the party for whom you wish to vote and deposit it in one of these boxes.

From time to time the names of the contestants and the number of votes each has received will be announced in the columns of the Press. Keep your eye on these announcements so that you can put your "best girl"—be she wife, sweetheart or daughter—up at the top of the column.

When you trade with merchants handling the contest ticket be sure to ask for them; you are entitled to them and they will gladly give them to you.

$600 A YEAR FROM PIGEONS.

One Way a Farmer's Wife Can Earn Extra Money—This Woman Tried Bees and Chickens, Found Chickens Unprofitable and Then Took Up Raising Squabs—Her Experience With Pigeons Highly Satisfactory.

"On 200 pairs of pigeons I have cleared $600 a year for the last four years," declared the wife of a Pennsylvania farmer when the reporter asked her about the chances women on the farm had of making money. "I had been a school teacher when I married, and having seen a lot of farmers and their wives while teaching in rural communities I determined that I would be different. I would keep a hired girl, paying her wages by money earned by keeping bees and chickens for profit.

"I stuck to that idea for nearly ten years, and during that time never cleared more than $50 a year on my chickens. It was always the bees that paid my girl. Finally I heard of a man in Montgomery County, this State, who was making a fortune raising squabs.

"The children had always had a few pairs of pigeons flying around the place eating up the garden and doing everything else we didn't want them to, but I had never thought of making money by raising the birds. Being discouraged by my experience as a chicken raiser, I determined to pay the man in Montgomery County a visit. Again it was the bees that paid expenses.

"There were several thousand pairs of pigeons on this Montgomery County farm, and it was quite evident that the owner not only knew his business but was interested in his birds. He gave me all the information I wanted, and I was so much encouraged that I went back and invested in twenty pairs of homers and an equal number of runts.

"Following the advice I had received, I bought only mated birds, and as a consequence I began to make money from the start. At the end of that year my profits were sufficient to lead my husband to advise me to sell the chickens, excepting just enough to keep the family supplied with eggs and devote my money and time to pigeons.

"According to my experience it takes four times as much time and money to raise chickens as to raise squabs. Incubators and brooders are not needed for one thing. Pigeons hatch their own eggs. They are careful to keep the young squabs covered for the first few days, or until the young birds grow feathers. They also attend to feeding their young, which relieves you of mixing and sometimes even cooking food as you have to do for young chicks. All you have to do is to give the old birds the proper food.

"When the squab is from twenty to twenty-five days old it is ready for market, and if properly fattened should weigh something under one pound. Squabs are sold wholesale by the dozen, and the standard weight is eight pounds to the dozen, but where there is a cross of runts and homers the weight is almost four pounds heavier. I often have squabs that weigh a pound each.

"Many persons prefer the homer crossed with dragoons because of the larger number of squabs, but I have found most money in the larger size squabs. When it comes to the question of health I have found them about equal.

"The pigeon house must be kept clean or the death rate among the squabs will eat up all profit. The roofs of all my pigeon houses are as impervious to rain and snow as the roof of the best dwelling, but at all times there should be an abundance of ventilation. Concrete floors are the best because they keep out rats, which are about the worst enemy of the squab raiser. I keep my floors covered at least an inch deep in sand and air slacked lime. This is raked over once a week and a fresh sprinkling of lime added.

"The nests are built along the back of the house in six tiers, allowing two nests for each pair of birds. In each nest there is a shallow earthen dish in which the nest is built. I use these dishes or saucers because they are easily removed and cleaned after the squabs are taken out.

"Tobacco stems and refuse from tobacco factories make the best materials for the birds to use for nests. A good supply should be kept in each pen for this purpose. Where hay or straw is used it is next to impossible to keep the nests and birds free from vermin. My runs or flying yards are all covered with wire netting, and built in such a way as to have a tree or the shade of one over at least a part of it. Though pigeons are fond of the sun and take delight in sun baths there are days in the summer when they seek the shade.

"In the winter my houses are heated with hot water pipes, which I am sure saves enough squabs from perishing of cold to make the additional expense an economy. At feeding time the windows and doors of each house are opened regardless of weather to allow the birds to fly. I keep a plentiful supply of clean drinking water within reach, in summer in the fly, in the winter in the house. The drinking troughs are all of iron, and are cleaned once each day, Sundays included. I feed my flock three times a day, except during July and August, when two feedings are enough.

"As the aim is never to give the birds too much or too little I have found the best way to feed them is to scatter food in one fly and then go on to the next, giving a little to each until all have had some. Then I go back to where I began and do it all over again until the birds give indications of having had enough. I do this in a leisurely manner so that the birds will have an opportunity to feed their young and so partly to empty their crops before my return. This is one way of insuring the feeding of the squabs.

"All the food is raised on the farm, and I pay my husband market prices for it. I have no particular mixture, but usually give just about what there is on hand of Kaffir corn, wheat screenings, millet, hemp, rape, peas and hulled oats. During the summer I usually give less corn and more peas and oats.

"Green food is not necessary, though pigeons will eat grass. I have heard that pigeons require meat in some way, but have never seen any indication of it. Plenty of good grain and an abundance of clean water is all that I have found necessary to get large healthy squabs to the age for marketing.

"I believe it is well to introduce new breeding stock every year or so, though I don't feel that I have been in the business long enough for my opinion to be worth very much. In the beginning I would always advise the buying of well mated birds. When you raise your own breeding stock it is necessary to have a separate pen to put the young birds in until they mate. After they have mated they should be put in a nesting pen and allowed to begin breeding.

"Where a farmer's wife has no children, or where her children are old enough not to require her constant attention she can make money by devoting her extra time to chickens. Where she is situated as I am, with three little ones to look after, pigeons are much to be preferred.

"In calculating the cost of my pigeons you must remember that all my foodstuff comes from the farm, and at the rates my husband would receive from an outsider. That makes it cheaper than it would be if the cost of delivery had to be taken into account. The market price of squabs ranges from $3 to $7, the best prices being received in the winter. As our farm is quite near Philadelphia the cost of expressage is not heavy. That is an item that should always be considered by persons thinking of raising squabs for profit."—New York Sun.

HOW TO GROW OLD.

Observations by Eminent Yale and Kansas Professors.

When the secret of changing iron gray hair to black was whispered to Professor William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, a few weeks ago he cheerfully answered that he believed there was no cause for alarm unless he saw his hair turning purple. Then, at the first opportunity that the professor had to speak to genuine young folks, he expounded his philosophy of what it means to grow older. He told a high school audience in Kansas City that youth was not the happiest chapter in a successful career, nor the farmer's life without labor a worthy ideal:

"A person who would stand before you and advise you to get the most out of youth—that it is the happiest season of your life—is not telling you the truth. You grow happier as you get older. As I stand before you young folks I don't envy any one of you your youth. I had as fine a time with you when I was young, but I would not go back to my youth for anything. I am much happier now. I really believe that by the time I'm eighty I'll be having the time of my life."

By an interesting coincidence Mr. William W. Howe, in Atchison, just sixty miles away, was that same day taking a Globe Sight at about the same problem, with this for his conclusion:

"When a man is real young there seems to be so much going on in the world that he regrets the loss of the little time he has to devote to sleep; but in time he learns that sleep is about as interesting as the rest of it, and more satisfactory."

It is only fair to Professor Phelps to explain that he is not such an enthusiastic sleeper as the Epictetus of Atchison might appear to be. The professor long ago found a guiding precept in an epigram from a former teacher, Professor Dwight:

"The happiest person is the person who thinks the most interesting thoughts."

All the comment that a communication writer feels it safe to add is: the presence of these philosophers is: may we all grow old with as much grace as these savants of the new century! Happy Mr. Howe! Happy professors!—C. H. S. in The Sun.

ART IN TRYING HER NEW SHOES.

Clever Woman Gives Man Several Points in This Painful Task.

"When a woman has a pair of new shoes sent home," said the cynical salesman, in the Washington Post, "she goes to work at 'em very unlike a man under similar circumstances.

"She never shoves her toes into them and yanks at 'em till she's red in the face, nor after getting them on at last does she go stamping around, telling those shoes with great frankness what her opinion is of 'em and of herself for ever countenancing 'em. No.

"She pulls 'em carefully part way on; twitches 'em off again to take another look at 'em to see whether she has got the right one on the left foot and the left one on the right; pulls 'em all the way on; looks at 'em dreamily; says they seem to fit so well that she's afraid they'll get too big by and by; takes another look at 'em; twists 'em around to take a side view of 'em; gives a little scream, and exclaims:

"'Oh, my! there's a wrinkle already! Mercy, how loose they are!'

"Then she looks at 'em again, square in front; works the feet around to find if she can't induce the shoes not to hurt quite so much; takes the shoes off, looks at the heels, the toes, the soles and the interior; puts 'em on again, walks up and down the room once or twice and declares positively to her husband, sitting by:

"'They're horrid! I won't have them at any price!'

"Then she tilts down the looking glass on the dresser so she can see how they appear viewed from all the positions the mirror will reflect 'em to her, backs off, trips sidewise, steps nearer, nearly dislocates her neck trying to see how they look from impossible points of view, takes a farewell glance at 'em, moves away, takes another farewell glance at 'em from all positions, sits down and says:

"'They make my feet look too horrid for anything, and as if I were wearing at least threes and a half. They never will do in the world.'

"Then she takes 'em off, turns 'em over, inspects the heel, toe, sole and inside, all over again, smoothes out a wrinkle, pulls at the buttons and says:

"'Every button on them will drop off the first time I go out in them, I know. And those heels! They look almost ridiculously low enough to be common sense heels. The idea!'

"Then she draws 'em on again, takes 'em off, puts 'em on, looks 'em over again in the mirror this, that and the other way; takes 'em off, and says to her husband:

"'John, dear, won't you give me your idea about these shoes? You have such excellent taste and judgment in such things.'

"Then if John is wise he will look 'em over and say that they look to him absurdly high as to heel, thin as to sole, and certainly too tight around the instep.

"'Oh, do you, dear?' she will say, and thank him sweetly.

"Then she will try 'em on again, show them off before the mirror, sit down, run her hand over 'em gently, smile, ring for the maid, and say to her:

"'You may tell the messenger, Jane, that I will keep the shoes.'

"And everybody is satisfied. So much better than a man's is the way of a woman with a pair of new shoes."

Two "Green" Reporters.

The inexperienced reporter is likely to have an undeveloped "news sense." Every one will recall the story of the journalist who was sent to report a fashionable wedding. He returned an hour or so later empty-handed. When asked what happened, he said, "Nothing at all; the groom didn't come." A writer in Lippincott's Magazine recounts an incident not dissimilar.

At a certain school of journalism a part of the practical work is to do regular reporting. One time a student was sent in haste to "cover" a railroad wreck at a town a few miles away.

It grew to be almost time for the paper to go to press, and still no word from the young man on the assignment. In desperation, the dean of the school telegraphed to ask why the story was not forthcoming. The reply was:

"Too much excitement. Wait till things quiet down."

Could Do Better.

The lecture was on the economics of nature and showed that her great destructive powers were used only to transform the elements into other channels.

"To illustrate," said the professor, "there is on one of the Pacific islands a volcano which has for sixteen years been pouring molten lava into the ocean over a precipice 400 feet high and eleven miles long. Eggs are boiled in the open sea twenty-two miles away."

"My goodness!" cried a feminine voice in the audience, "what a big pan and what a waste of fire and water and time over a little plain cooking!"—New York Times.

Conservation of Energy Demands Continuance of Soul

By Dr. Guilie, of Michigan University

OUR life is a constant growth of the human intellect, closely connected with the development of the body. But we know that there is a continuous interchange of cells, decaying and forming, and yet, though the living tissues may in the course of time be entirely renewed, the individual continues to exist; it remains one and the same. But even the matter and energy which have been given off from the living body have not disappeared; they are still in existence, though disconnected from the life-giving principle. Should we not demand that there should be a similar conservation for the invisible part of our life? I have not the power to directly what the life after death is; the [illegible] will not tell us.

EDITORIAL.

The death of King Edward and the coronation of King George seem not to have as much effect upon the markets of the world as does the election of a governor in one of our great states.

If Halley's comet has had anything to do with the speckled weather we've been having of late we are glad that the old thing is going tail first; no telling what would happen if it came head first under a full head of steam and a down hill pull.

The announcement from Montgomery that O'Neal's majority was decisive and that the gallant Mallory has conceded the nomination of his opponent should cause every democrat to fall into line and prepare to face the common enemy in November. Surely if Mallory can bow so gracefully and offer his services so gallantly no democrat in the ranks has a right to sulk. We all had our preferences but that was week before last; let us all unite now on those who are our standard bearers whether we like the election or not.

Chilton County must go democratic this year. We need Deason and Jones and Simpson in office and we can have them if we will bend our energies in that direction. The political horizon never looked brighter for the party of Jefferson and Tilden than it does today. Let no man be discouraged; let none be a knocker.

Soon the repubs will name their candidates and then the fur will begin to fly in dead earnest. Old Democracy has run many a race in these parts and usually she has cleaned up first money. It's a safe bet that the old steed will come under the wire a winner again this year.

Many have been the inquiries we have received about the news article that The Press promised its readers. Even the republicans want to know more about that little amalgamation proposition but it's entirely too soon. The cards have been dealt but the hand has not been played yet. Later on when the big bugs begin to tell what "weuns and youns has did" we will tell them what weuns and youns has failed to did and herein they made the failure.

The recent demonstration in Clanton shows the necessity for speedy trial and prompt execution of the law.

A foul murder it seems has been committed and the friends of the victim feared the usual shrewd practices and customary delays in defeating the ends of justice, therefore they proposed to take the law into their own hands and mete out swift vengeance, which they considered to be justice.

As soon as they were informed that indictments had been found and that a speedy trial would be accorded the accused persons they went to their homes in peace.

Men are not prone, as a usual thing, to step beyond the pale of the law but they become dissatisfied with the modern delays that are practised and their patience finds its limit in the frequent excuses offered for postponement of trial.

Clanton never has shown to better advantage than now. With her streets brilliantly lighted at night she presents the appearance of a modern city. Now with a system of water works and sewerage we can boast indeed. With these two modern necessities added to the fast increasing list of public utilities and improvements Clanton need look with envious eyes upon none of her sister cities.

The final judgment in the new famous Swope case, in which Dr. B. C. Hyde was accused of poisoning several members of his wife's family in order to obtain money from the estates, proves the fickleness of petit juries.

On last Saturday night the jury stood eleven for acquittal of the physician and one for conviction. The twelfth man held out for his side of the contention and on Monday they brought in a unanimous verdict sentencing the doctor to imprisonment for life. Nothing seems to be so uncertain as the verdict of a jury.

The Press man ran across the following truism which it gives to its readers for what it is worth. It especially commends it to Alabama farmers with the suggestion that they ponder it for a few minutes. Here it is, see how nearly it fits your case:—

A GROWL.

The average Alabama farmer buys canned and dried fruits—likewise other canned and dry goods. He gets up at the alarm of a Connecticut clock, fastens his Chicago suspenders to his Detroit overalls, washes his face with Cincinnati soap on a Pennsylvania washpan, dries it on a North Carolina towel and sits down to a Grand Rapids table to eat Indiana hominy, fried in St. Joseph lard on a St. Louis stove. Then he tops himself with a Boston hat, puts a Virginia cheroot between his teeth and stalks out to hang a Louisville bridle upon a Tennessee mule to plow a farm covered by an Ohio mortgage. When bed time comes he reads a New York printed Bible, repeats a prayer written in Jerusalem and crawls under a blanket made in New Jersey out of Michigan wool only to be kept awake by an Alabama dog—which is about the only home-raised product on the place.

And if more be necessary we might add that his wife wears Massachusetts shoes made from a Texas steer and eats eggs layed by a Rhode Island hen; seasons her custards with Vermont nutmeg and perfumes the kitchen with Maine cod-fish, decorates her dining table with Kalamazoo celery and prepares the piece de resistance from Oregon salmon. If the family happen to have buckwheat it is raised in West Virginia and floated in New Hampshire Maple or Georgia Cane syrup. The daughter sings a New Orleans tag time accompanied by a Richmond piano or a Pittsburg organ, writes a note to her "steady" on Baltimore stationery scented with Florida orange blossoms and sends it by a Georgia coon whistling Arkansas Traveler; the love lorn swain pays the dusky youth with a Nevada mined dime or gives him the Mississippi marble heart and harnesses his Kentucky thoroughbred to his Columbus buggy, purchases a quantity of California fruit — but what's the use, the dog's treed a possum!

NEAR LYNCHING.

Clanton barely escaped a lynching bee last Sunday night. On the Sunday night previous a murder was committed in the usually quiet little village of Maplesville in which Mr. Cleveland Holditch, a popular young man of that place, lost his life at the hands of several negroes. At the time of the killing excitement was intense and expressions of lynching were freely indulged. In fact a mob did form, so it is said, with the express purpose of taking the prisoners from the deputies who were sent to make the arrest, and to lynch them before they reached the jail in Clanton. In some way the deputies became acquainted with the project and succeeded in eluding the mob, thus landing their prisoners safely in the County bastile. Notwithstanding the fact that the Grand Jury was in session and had made an exhaustive examination into the murder affair, and had returned indictments against the accused parties, all of whom are to have an immediate trial at this term of the Court, the citizens of Maplesville, or rather a part of the citizenship, fearing that even handed justice might not be meted out to the black hearted and blood stained brutes, determined that summary punishment should be dealt to them forthwith. With this object in view a determined crowd of fifteen or twenty white citizens made their way to Clanton bent upon revenging the death of their friend and fellow citizen. It seems from all that The Press can learn that the crowd was most orderly and extremely determined. Everything necessary for the quiet yet thorough execution of their plans had been done and the crowd waited patiently during the chilly hours of the night on the outskirts of the town for the lectric lights to be turned out and the pall of darkness to cover the town. Under ordinary circumstances the street lights are extinguished at midnight, and this particular Sunday night would have been an ideal night for a "neck-tie party"—if indeed any night can be so called—for it was extremely dark. The rain fell in intermittent showers and a black cloud overhung the town completely obscuring the stars and the moon light. No better night could have been selected for such a purpose. But, fortunately or unfortunately, some member of the crowd took a "smart Alex" into confidence who proceeded to inform all his friends of the proposed lynching. Who this party was or who he told can not be ascertained but the fact remains that just before midnight the officers of the law were apprised of the intention of the mob and immediately made hasty preparations for defending the jail. It seems that Probate Judge Reynolds had received a communication from Maplesville informing him of the plans set on foot and he had communicated this to the Sheriff and Judge of the Circuit Court on Saturday; but nothing serious was thought of the matter as the Grand Jury was then in session and had found a True Bill against the suspected and incarcerated negroes. When, however, news of the gathering of the mob reached the ears of the officers orders were immediately given to those in charge of the lighting plant to keep the electric fluid flowing till the coming of the dawn on Monday morning. This was done. Preparations were also made at the jail for the reception of the mob and the protection of the prisoners. Communication was in some way established between the crowd and the officers and a compromise was effected. The crowd was informed that the prisoners had been returned that a speedy trial was [illegible] This [illegible] murderers of young Holditch they dispersed and Clanton again assumed its normal condition.

Thus another chapter in the lynching history of the state is averted and the fair name of Chilton County is left unfarnished.

Now if the officers of the law will insure the safety of prisoners and put an end to discussions of lynching and the taking of the law into the hands of infuriated citizens let them see that these negroes receive a speedy trial; let the juries and the witnesses be here on time and let nothing retard the progress of the case. When the verdict of the jury is rendered let it be in strict compliance with the law, leaving no opportunity for attorneys on either side to make an appeal and let the verdict of that jury be imposed without unnecessary delay.

Create confidence in the law by executing the law; subdue the anger of the friends and loved ones of victims by refusing to submit to unnecessary and tedious delays and soon the mob spirit will die out and the majesty of the law be upheld.

It is this everlasting habit of appealing every case that carries with it extreme punishment, the useless and nonsensical delays that create mob law and enrages citizenship.

We confidently believe that in this instance those in charge of the execution of the law will do their full duty and do it without delay.

When this is done the murder of young Holditch will be avenged by the law, enacted for the protection of all alike, and the supremacy of organized society will be upheld rather than the rule of the disorganized.

May equal justice be done to all—both to the prisoners and to the State. If this is done none should complain.

Judge Reynolds was principal performer but third person in a very romantic marriage that took place at his residence last Thursday night. The Judge is a great lover of good, sound sleep. He enjoys a good article of sleep as but few do and when he gets an opportunity to snatch a few blinks in the dead hours of the night he never refuses. This is most commendatory of that courtly gentleman for it is evidence that he loves home life and knows where to find perfect peace and rest.

Thursday night, however, he was rudely awakened from his accustomed sleep by a gentle tingling of the door bell and when the summons was answered he found awaiting his arrival a blushing bride and graceful groom.

With his accustomed chivalry they were invited into the parlor. The Judge, suspecting the mission of the happy couple, began to make preparations for the ceremony but just then a doubt popped into his head. The young lady, pretty as she was and lady like, seemed to be altogether too youthful to become a bride even in this day of young brides.

To make assurance doubly sure the Judge decided to telephone the parents of the bride, gain their consent to the performance of the ceremony. Now the parents live some distance in the county and there are quite a number of phones on the same line. Whenever a phone rings at night those on the line feel that "something is doing" and an investigation at once begins. The Judge succeded in getting connection with every one on the line except the very one he most desired. The purpose of his quest became known to everyone along the line and they in turn imparted the news to others. The Judge having become satisfied that everything was perfectly satisfactory turned from the phone to begin the ceremony but there was a vast difference in the appearance of the room from what it presented when he first led the happy couple in, for instead of three persons present there were then three dozen or more. Hearing of the nuptial knot soon to be tied, through the medium of the phone, a number of friends and well wishers hastened to the residence to witness the ceremony. Some stood, not on the order of their going but went dishabille, some not dishabille but not in costume de rigor, while yet others knowing that it is unlawful to be present at a marriage without a marriage garment donned their best and repaired to the scene.

Those present, besides the prospective groom and the bride were: Mrs. Carrie Mullins, Mrs. J. C. Jones, Mrs. C. W. Reynolds, Misses Myrtle and Maud Mullins, and Miss Bertha Devaughan, Messrs. Mallie White, Sam Cox, Sam Johnson, James Huckabee, Grady Reynolds, Claude Reynolds, Eric Hart, E. W. Parish, Thomas Parish, Elijah Devaughan, Benjamin Mims and Dr. Amzi Gowen.

Last Sunday was rocking day for Clanton. Those who did not attend the District Sunday School Convention at Mountain Creek made their way to Jemison or to some other point where singing was had. The town looked practically deserted during the morning and the arrival of the afternoon trains [illegible] the appearance of a [illegible]

JEMISON—ROUTE FOUR.

As I have seen nothing from this section of the county I will send you a few items.

Because of the dry weather which we have had the farmers have been forced to catch up with their work.

Quite a number of our planters spent several days last week on Coosa river fishing; they reported that the fish were not biting so well.

I would like to say in regard to the Waddy-Thorsby game of ball played last week that your Thorsby correspondent must have been misinformed.

To begin with there were but three Thorsby men in the game, the others were from Jemison and Mulberry.

The report also had it that Thorsby made 14 hits off Dorminy while he only made but three off Mims. The correspondent surely does not know a hit is; Thorsby made but five and two of them being home runs. They fanned more men than we did. Thorsby made their runs on Waddy's errors and not on Thorsby hitting ability.

If the Thorsby correspondent will get that Thorsby aggregation down on a diamond we will show them how ball playing really is and how the score will stand. I like to play ball and I like to see it written up just as it is played and published just as it is written.

C. A. R.

(Note by the Editor).—Guess C. A. R. did not know that our Thorsby correspondent was a handsome and charming young lady. She'll scarcely whip the team down to Waddy but she gives them the word they'll go and you Waddy fellows had better look out when they come for with the encouragement those Thorsby girls ought to win any game.

VERBENA.

Dr. B. K. Ponder left Tuesday for Montgomery to have an operation performed upon his eye.

Mrs. W. A. Gulledge and little daughter visited Wetumpka the latter part of this week.

Miss Katie DeRamus has returned from a pleasant visit to friends in Montgomery.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge returned last week from a visit to the West.

Miss Mary Carr Gibson left on Tuesday for Washington City, where she goes to attend the session of the World's Sunday School convention.

We are glad to see Mr. F. V. Dansby on our streets again; he has been confined to his home for some days.

A goodly number of our young people went up to Mountain Creek Sunday to attend the session of the Sunday School Convention held at that place. All report having a most enjoyable time.

Miss Maime Bethea, of Montgomery, gave a week-end house party to a number of her friends last week, entertaining them at the Bethea summer home here.

Mr. F. G. Caffee, of New York is now here the past week visiting parents and friends.

CORRESPONDENT.

We copied the following from Verbena not from our regular correspondent but of general interest to Verbena and the entire County:

Verbena District Sunday School convention was held at Mountain Creek on Sunday, May 15th. It was the finest convention we have ever had. Every Sunday School being represented and giving a better report than ever before. Before the convention began the Sunday School met and enjoyed a fine talk on the lesson by Mr. E. L. Thornton. After the Sunday School President Robinson and those present began with the regular program.

Mr. T. E. Williams who gave us a fine talk and then we enjoyed another excellent talk by Mr. Glass, of Birmingham. At the conclusion of Mr. Glass' talk dinner was announced and all repaired to the table where a most bountiful and delightful repast was had.

When the dinner hour was over the program of the day was resumed when Mr. E. L. Thornton made a most interesting address; then came short addresses by Mr. W. S. Alston and Mr. L. N. Henderson, both of which were greatly enjoyed. Last on the program was a talk by Miss Mary Carr Gibson, of Verbena which was most interesting indeed. All who know Miss Gibson came prepared to expect something extra fine from her and none were disappointed; if we but had more Sunday School workers like this excellent young lady our schools would be greatly improved. Up to this date there have been but two Sunday Schools to pay dues to the County Association during the year. The County Convention will be held this year at Verbena and we request the several Superintendents to see that the dues are paid to Miss Mary Carr Gibson before the meeting in July.

We wish especially to return thanks to the kind people of Mountain Creek for their hospitality and kindness.

Respectfully,
MRS. AGNES FARR,
Secretary.

MAPLESVILLE.

News is scarce in our town this week.

Miss Elcise Durbin of Clanton is visiting Mrs. Foshee. We are glad to welcome Miss Durbin as a visitor.

Maplesville was made sad last Sunday by the death of one of her citizens, Mr. David Wilkins, which sad event took place at one of the hospitals in Birmingham whither he had gone for treatment. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his death, besides numerous friends who will deeply regret to hear of his demise.

The funeral services were conducted by the Woodmen of the World at Stanton.

Mrs. Hooks and Miss Jessie Wilson, of Selma, spent Wednesday and Thursday of this week in Maplesville visiting Miss Jessie Mae Morris.

There was a good congregation at the Methodist church on last Sunday night. Rev. Mr. Simmons from Randolph preached a most interesting sermon; he stated that the revival would begin on the second Sunday in June and urged all to get in readiness for it.

Mr. McBride and family have moved here from Dermott, Arkansas. Mr. McBride has accepted a position with the Twin Tree Lumber Co. We are glad to welcome him and his family in our midst.

There must be something especially attractive at Plantersville, for every Sunday a crowd of our Maplesville young men go down that way.

Mr. Embrey Grimes left on last Monday for his home in Tuskaloosa.

THORSBY GLEANINGS.

Mr. J. Bice was a passenger to Clanton Tuesday of last week.

On the evening of the tenth of May a number of our people attended the play, Men, Maids and Matchmakers, given by Jemison talent at their home town. Friday evening the same play was very ably presented at the Thorsby Institute to an appreciative audience and a full house.

A week ago Sunday two families of Swedish immigrants arrived in our city. They will make their homes here, provided they can find suitable locations.

Mrs. S. W. Collins made a brief visit last week with relatives and friends in Clanton.

Mrs. A. M. Johnson was a passenger to Clanton Thursday morning.

Mr. Andrew McLain left for Birmingham Thursday evening for a

Mrs. P. D. Wilson, of Clanton, was a business visitor in this city a day last week.

Mrs. Skoglund left Thursday morning for her home in Chicago, having made a stay here of about two weeks.

Mrs. S. M. Adams, accompanied by her two grandchildren, were Clanton callers Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peterson and two children spent Thursday in Clanton.

The strawberry season, lasting only four weeks against twelve weeks of last year, has now come to a close, the dry weather making the season unusually short.

The short season did not cut down the quantity, in some cases the yield per acre was larger than last year, but the receipts were not so good on an average as in the year 1909 on account of the dry weather forcing the berries on the market in larger daily quantities than usual. Next year the acreage will be nearly doubled and the Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers' Association expects to go into car shipment from the beginning of the season.

The association has about fifty members all located within one and one-half miles of Thorsby. The membership list is increasing yearly and old members are adding to their acreage.

The prospects for peaches, plums and grapes are good at the present time.

Mr. J. J. Stanley was a Clanton visitor Saturday.

Mr. Jess Ray, of Helena, formerly of Thorsby, pased through here Thursday morning on his way to Clanton.

The May Party, given the 14th inst. by the Ladies' Guild, is a thing of the past, though not soon to be forgotten. Throughout the afternoon theer was plenty doing on the Institute Campus. In a game of baseball played the forepart of the afternoon, between Jemison and Thorsby, our boys carried off the honors in a score of thirteen to two.

There were children's marches and May pole revels. Mistress Luella Winslow was crowned queen of the May while twelve girls in white took part in weaving the gaily colored ribbons in and out around the pole. Refreshments were served both afternoon and evening.

RED WING.

MOUNTAIN CREEK—SOLDIERS' HOME.

On Friday, May 13th the U. D. C. of Montgomery, hostesses, tendered to the delegates to the State Convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy an outing to the Confederate Soldiers' Home at Mountain Creek.

On a special train to the number of one hundred and forty-six they came and were received by the officers and inmates of the Home with the honors due to their noble deeds and lovely characters. At the Home they found prepared for them a bountiful and delightfully cooked barbecue, to which they added pickles, salads, cakes and other delicacies, and with the veterans and guests present to assist them, proceeded to enjoy the delightful repast. After dinner a meeting was held at the Auditorium which was addressed by Mrs. B. B. Ross, President of the U. D. C. of Alabama, in a most stirring and heart warming speech. Capt. Simpson, Commandant of the Home, explained to the Daughters why it was right to exclude from the Home certain veterans who had been inmates for some time and how they could regain a place in the Home. With appropriate music and exchange of heart felt greetings the meeting adjourned.

But to understand the true significance of this outing it would be necessary to have been on the ground and to have seen the faces of these noble women when speaking to the veterans and inquiring of their welfare.

This has been the greatest occasion that has come to the Soldiers' Home.

Among the visiting delegates were the recently elected officials of the Alabama Daughters of the Confederacy. Besides them we noted: Mrs. C. S. Tatwiler, Troy; Miss Mary G. Pickens, Greensboro; Mrs. Bryan Pittman, Union Springs; Mrs. Frank Bell Webb, Talladega; Mrs. Hartley Jordy Brophy, Lawyers; Mrs. W. S. Hannah, Eufaula; Mrs. Chas. N. Besides these there were many others whose names, we regret to say we failed to get, but we did not fail to get the inspiration which gazing upon and mingling with this band of women whose lovely characters and noble deeds mark them as the creme de la creme of Alabama's fair daughters.

A MEDAL WINNER.

Last week the oculists of the State held their annual convention at Montgomery and among the many interesting documents read at the convention was one by our specialist, Dr. J. V. Higgins. This paper attracted wide spread attention among the oculists and for its excellence Dr. Higgins received the second prize offered by the association.

A WARNING IN TIME.

The Press wishes to speak a kindly word of warning; not an interference but merely a suggestion. Complaint has come to this office that there are persons offering money in exchange for piano tickets. We have nothing whatever to do with this, the merchants can purchase the tickets back from their customers if they choose to sell them and the purchasers can sell them to outside parties if they so desire but we wish it distinctly understood that The Press is selling tickets to no one except those whose names are advertised in this paper, and will not under any circumstances sell or otherwise dispose of tickets to individuals. When a merchant offers to purchase tickets from customers he ought to state the value of the tickets and for what purposes they are given.

JUST ANOTHER WORD.

Certain persons have called upon merchants asking for the loan of rubber stamps that are used in endorsing piano tickets. Piano ticket merchants are notified that they are possibly assisting in fraud when they lend their stamps to other persons for this purpose; if the tickets are received in the regular course of trade the merchant from whom they are received will stamp them.

Saving the Peach Crop.

The Department of Agriculture wants to save all of the peach crop and has therefore issued a bulletin showing how this may be done in a large measure wherever peaches are grown. It says that the losses peach growers endure from the "peach brown rot" is $5,000,000 annually. The department is at work trying to discover a completely satisfactory remedy, but apparently has not reached any satisfactory conclusion, but it has of the peach scab or black spot which causes a great deal of damage.

A cheap and simple remedy has been found for this disease in self-boiled lime-sulphur wash, which can be applied during the growing season with little danger of injuring the fruit or the foliage. It is declared to be very effective. By mixing arsenate of lead with the fungicide the curculio can be destroyed at the same time. The department has prepared a pamphlet describing the preparation and use of the remedy.—Washington Special to the Boston Advertiser.

TREATMENT OF BURNS.

When the Pain Is Most Severe—Danger from Shock and Poison.

The medical books describe several degrees of burns, according to the amount of damage the fire has done to the skin or the parts beneath.

The first degree consists merely in redness and stinging of the skin, such as is caused by the flame of a match touching the finger for an instant, or a drop of hot wax from a candle falling on the hand. Ordinarily this is a trivial accident, and the pain of it if annoying may be subdued by applying a cloth wet with a solution of cooking soda, but if a large surface is burned, as when a cambric night dress catches fire and blazes up for a moment but is quickly extinguished, the patient may suffer severely from shock.

In the second degree blisters form on the injured part. Care must be taken not to tear the blisters—in removing the burned clothing, for example. A little snip with clean scissors or two or three punctures with a clean needle should be made in the part of the blister which protrudes most, and as soon as the water has drained away the part should be covered with a cloth wet with soda solution, or with equal parts of lime water and olive oil—called carron oil.

In the burns of the third degree the upper layer of the skin is destroyed. This is the most painful of all burns, for the sensitive cutaneous nerves are exposed. The first thing to do is to cover the part so as to protect the bared nerve endings from contact with the air. The same dressing as that for burns of the second degree will give relief until the physician comes. Carron oil is best, but the soda solution is better than nothing, and much better than plain water or oil.

In the burns of the fourth degree—the third and fourth degrees usually occur together—the skin is burned through and the bare flesh is exposed. This strange as it may seem, is less painful than a third degree burn, for now the nerve endings which receive and transmit the painful sensations, are entirely destroyed. It is more serious in its after effects, because it always leaves a scar which is disfiguring and may contract and draw the part out of shape.

In burns of the fifth degree the muscles and other tissues are more or less extensively disintegrated, and in those of the sixth degree the entire limb—finger, hand, arm, foot or leg—is destroyed.

In all these severe burns there is more or less shock, which may be so profound as to kill, and there are also serious symptoms caused by congestion of the internal organs, and probably also by a poison formed in the burned tissues.—Youth's Companion.

See Always the Bright Side.

We must somehow get joy out of the pain of life. We must see the beauty and the wonder of the world's misery. We must admire the evil as we admire the good. We must lick the dust with the homage that we pay the heavens. We must realize the sweet in struggle, in defeat in destitution.

Interpretation of Bach.

Where the idea came from that to play Bach in the true spirit it must be made as angular, dry and dull as perverted human minds could conceive is a mystery. That Bach, with the most enormous output credited to any musician, pouring from him in an unbroken stream all his life long with spontaneity stamped on every measure, desired his music to be played with the metronome going, and all individuality, all imagination, all freedom scared out of the artist, is arrant nonsense. Small wonder most people dread the very sound of his name, and what a shame it is that he must usually be heard through a medium so inelastic and false that no conception of his real character is possible.—Chicago Post.

London Cabmen.

London has over nine thousand four-wheeled and two-wheeled one-horse cabs. The cab drivers rent these cabs and horses from different companies. They pay the owners in winter season $1.94, and in the summer season, when London is full of tourists and their business is very active, $2.92 rent a day for cab and horse. Their compensation for driving is the difference between the rental they pay and the fares they collect. The men interviewed stated that only in the busy season can they make from $10 to $12 a week, and in winter months they cannot realize more than $7 weekly.—Consular Report.

Baby Wasted to a Skeleton.

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come out on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad that I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk.

"My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I sent to a drug store and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of the Ointment and followed directions. At the end of two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. I can sincerely say that only for Cuticura my child would have died. I used only one cake of Cuticura Soap and about three boxes of Ointment.

"I am a nurse and my profession brings me into many different families and it is always a pleasure for me to tell my story and recommend Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. 1, Litchfield, Conn., Oct. 23, 1909."

The right kind of a conscience has handicapped many a man in the race for wealth.

You may not be able to eat your cake and have it, too, but you can drink your drinks and have 'em bad.

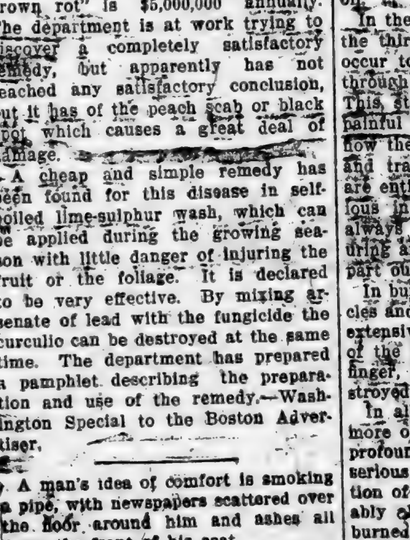
BOYS' INTENSIVE FARMING.

How the Productiveness of Land May Be Increased.

More than 12,000 Southern boys less than 18 years old planted and cultivated an acre of corn each last year under the direction of the Department of Agriculture. Persons interested in the experiment in Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina and Virginia, offered to pay the expenses of a trip to Washington for the boy in each State who raised the greatest amount of corn on his acre. The winning boys will soon visit the national capital.



The average yield of corn to the acre in 1909 was a little more than twenty-five bushels. The South Carolina boy, who made the best record, produced 152 1-2 bushels. The winning Mississippi boy raised 147 bushels, the Arkansas boy 135 and the boy in Virginia 122. The average raised by each of the 12,000 was sixty bushels.

The instructions given to those boys by the Department of Agriculture are available to every farmer in the country. If they should be followed exactly the yield of corn to the acre could easily be doubled in a single year.

Intensive cultivation is worth while on all crops. The average yield of potatoes to the acre in 1909 was 107 bushels, but the Maine farmers averaged 225 bushels and some of the most progressive of them dug 400 bushels to the acre. The yield of corn and potatoes depends more upon cultivation and fertilization than upon the soil, and there is practically no part of the United States in which these crops cannot be raised successfully.

It is beyond doubt that larger crops can be produced from our small theretofore tilled than from two or even three times that acreage cultivated as they usually are. The boys' [illegible]

SIT IN THE SADDLE AND RIDE.

BY ANON J. AUGHEE.

Do you envy your fellow who's taking the pole?
Do you fail of his action, and stride?
Don't bunch with the quitters who turn from the goal—
But sit in the saddle, and ride!

Have they jockied you out to the last of the field?
Is the cup you had tried for denied?
Stay game to the end! There are chances concealed,
And the least you can do is to ride!

Is your hair growing gray, and your face growing old?
Are your dreams their fruition denied?
To stay to the finish! Who trades that for gold?
Sit close in the saddle, and ride!

Is your course leading out to the shadowless land,
Where the years of fulfilment abide?
Good luck to you, comrade! The grip of my hand!
Sit tight in the saddle, and ride!

The Scent of the Roses.

By ANNIE REYNOLDS.

X—X—X—X—X—X—X—X—X—X—X

Holworthy frequently found himself strolling by the house with the bay window, beneath which was displayed the neat sign, "China Painting." Between the muslin curtains hung the cage of a yellow canary, and on the window sills potted purple crocuses sat in cheery array. Not that Holworthy was interested in canary birds or potted crocuses; neither did china painting hold any allurements for him. In fact, he could not have explained what was the lodestone that drew his footsteps down this commonplace street of abandoned residences, nor what the attraction for him in the room behind the bird cage and the crocuses. The first floor was occupied by an upholsterer, and the floors above had been remodelled into small tenements, grandly referred to as "apartments" in the sign at the third story window.

One afternoon without the slightest forethought he entered the doorway and pressed the bell belonging to the second story "apartment." The latch clicked spasmodically, and before Holworthy had quite come to himself he was upstairs, face to face with a sprightly-appearing elderly lady, enveloped in a paint-bedaubed apron, and who balanced a plate carefully upon the palm of one hand.

"Pardon me—er—do you fill orders for china painting?"

This was rare presence of mind on the part of Holworthy, for he lived at hotels and had as much use for hand-painted china as he had for the canary singing shrilly in the bay window.

The sprightly lady lost no time in assuring him that she did take orders for all manner and kind of china painting, and no doubt had visions of furnishing forthwith a breakfast, dinner and tea set for this handsome, well-dressed stranger.

The visitor glanced curiously about the littered room. How changed it was since he had last seen it. He strolled to the window. The broad window seats were still there, and the panelled shutters with little glass knobs, that folded back into niches in the wall. In this very window, in the soft spring twilight ten years ago, he had asked her to be his wife, and the lovely head had lain upon his breast. Good heavens, how it all came back to him. What a dream it was, and how rudely shattered.

"Would you like to see some of my work?"

The cheerie voice of the china painter broke upon his reverie.

She regarded his gloomy face intently as he turned abruptly and went with her to a curtained recess where her dainty wares were spread. A faint, fleeting perfume saluted his nostrils. Instinctively he picked up a piece of a broken Japanese jar of exquisite design and coloring. It was that which held the sweet odor.

"This must have been a rose jar," he said idly.

"It was. You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, but the scent of the roses hangs over it still," she quoted prettily.

"That is true. However complete the wreck the scent of the roses clings." He sighed heavily, seemingly forgetful of his companion. "'Twas the 'scent of the roses' that brought me here," he added, absently.

Her bright glance rested on his youthful features and took in the touches of silver in the thick black hair at his temples.

Presently she broke gently into his abstraction. "A lady left that with me to be mended. Such a sweet woman, but so sad at times. She used to live here when it was a one-family house before the street was so run down. Sometimes she tells me of the pranks she used to play in that bay window when a little girl. On April Fool's day evening she used to throw down packages tied to a string and then twitch them soaring above people's heads when they tried to pick them up."

An electric shock ran through Holworthy, and he drank in every word.

"And did she tell you how the boy who lived across the way hooked under the window one night and cut away the package and tied the string to the [illegible]"

"Why, did you know her?"

"Know her, when I was a boy," he said

The painter busied herself for a moment with her chinaware.

"She thinks everything of that rose jar," very softly. "She preserved in it all the roses given to her by her lover. She was going to marry him, but he stopped caring for her and she released him. She's taking lessons from me, and sometimes she talks about those days when she used to live here. I suppose I ought not to reveal her confidence, but somehow I feel that it isn't any harm to you. She never married, and she says she never will—and she is just as sweet and pretty and young—" All this time she was moving lightly about among the bowls and vases, and a faint flush tinged her withered cheek and her voice trembled slightly. "She takes lessons Wednesdays and Fridays at 3 o'clock."

Holworthy gave a large order and on the following Wednesday at a little past 3 o'clock called to see how the work was progressing.

A fair-haired woman was seated in the bay window in a long-sleeved apron, bending over a piece of china. It was the 3 o'clock pupil. The teacher had disappeared.

"Phillis!" At the low appealing tone the woman turned. When she saw Holworthy she rose slowly to her feet as if dazed, and her rich color fled from her face and lips. He advanced impetuously, his dark eyes burning into hers.

"Here in this room where I first offered you my love I offer it again! It has never wavered, but has grown stronger and higher and surer after all the misunderstandings and misery of the past ten years. Phillis, can you ever love me again?" She closed her eyes and the color surged back, even to her brow.

"Why do you say again?" she reproached him, as the open arms closed about her. "I've never stopped loving you!"—Boston Post.

The Lake Skipper.

By RALPH D. PAINE.

There was a salt water captain who, for reasons of his own, accepted a berth as first mate in a big passenger steamer on the great lakes. He was a capable seafaring man, but he did not know what "hustle" meant until he went aboard at Buffalo. The lake skipper to whom he reported for duty remarked in the most casual manner:

"Just give her a coat of paint this morning, and, if the sun stays hot and she dries in good shape, give her a second coat this afternoon."

The salt water mate staggered in his tracks and made amazed protest. This was a 5000-ton vessel, and giving her two coats of paint was several days' work by his reckoning. The lake skipper was a person of discernment, wherefore he had pity on his new mate and forebore to deal harshly with him, explaining with a tolerant grin:

"All right. I suppose you'll have to learn to move lively after snoozing around salt water all your life. You just pass that order along to the bo'sn and tell him it's got to be done, and then you sit up and take notice."

The bos'n took the order calmly, as if it were in the day's work, and by nightfall the big steamer was spick and span with two coats of paint from her water line to her guard rail. The sailor from deep water had learned his first lesson in the ways of the great lakes during the navigation season, when the hard-driven shipping must be forced to do twelve months' work in half a year.—Ralph D. Paine, in Outing Magazine.

French Taxes.

According to statistics of taxes, while there were 94,123 billiard tables in France in 1892, in 1906 there were only 89,230, whereas if the game were holding its own the number should have increased as the children grew to billiard playing age. The decadence of the game, which has had famous votaries, is ascribed to the success of outdoor sports, and especially to the intense and widespread interest now taken in motoring.—Vogue.

Notes for the Girls.

Statistics show that baldness and higher education go together. In other words, the woman with a haystack of hair on her head doesn't know as much as the woman with a coiffure of door-knob size.—Atchison Globe.

Oldest Known Adulterant.

At the recent meeting at Lille of the French Association of Science M. Dorveau traced the history of what is perhaps the oldest known adulteration of food, the adulteration of coffee with chicory. The name of the gifted inventor of this mixture is unknown, but, after a long discussion, the date of the invention has been fixed at 1690, when the Dutch practiced it. It does not seem likely that William III brought it to England, but Prussia adopted chicory in 1763 and the French who did not use it till 1771, have since then been more active than any other people in spreading the adulteration.—London Globe.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Black Duck, Minn.—"About a year ago I wrote you that I was sick and could not do any of my housework. My sickness was called Retroflexion. When I would sit down I felt as if I could not get up. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and did just as you told me and now I am perfectly cured, and have a big baby boy."—Mrs. ANNA ANDERSON, Box 19, Black Duck, Minn.

Consider This Advice,

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Wishing Too Much.

When Wilberforce was a candidate for Hull his sister offered a new gown to the wives of all the freemen who voted for her brother.

"Miss Wilberforce for ever!" shouted the enthusiastic crowd when she made the announcement.

"Oh, no, gentlemen," she replied, smiling. "It is very good of you, but I really do not wish to be 'Miss Wilberforce' for ever!"—M. A. P.

Bridge Raised For Steamers.

To permit two steamers to pass from the Wisconsin River to the Mississippi River near Prairie du Chien, Wis., a railway bridge on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway was raised by break-down cranes a few weeks ago.

There is no navigation on the Wisconsin River, but the two steamers were sent down to inter service on another route. The railway crosses the river near its mouth and a sixty-five foot span was raised about 80 feet to clear the steamers' funnels.—Scientific American.

Another Remarkable Cure of Serious Kidney Trouble.

H. W. Solomon, 228 Market St., Harrisburg, Pa., says: "Kidney disease afflicted me for years and dizziness was so severe that I staggered as if drunk. My back was so lame that often I couldn't stir. Three or four doctors had examined my urine and all had found albumen. My family doctor said I had Bright's disease and could not live three weeks. I had run down from 195 to 135 pounds. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills as a last resort and was cured. I have had no kidney trouble in over two years."

"I tried to interview Rostand in his Basque home," he went on, "but it was useless. I did see his son, though. The young man talked excellent English.

"He cracked a lot of jokes about his father's rooster play pretending that they were all jokes from the text. Why, he even declared that the play opened with Chantecler, the rooster, calling one of his older wives aside and saying:

"'My dear, you must beware. The farmer told the cook this morning that he would have a chicken for dejeuner. He's laying for you now.'

"'Well, love,' sighed the hen, 'I suppose I've no right to object. I've been laying for him, you know, these many years.'"—Washington Star.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

Over a Score of Convicts Roasted Alive When Stockade Burns

Blocton.—Twenty-eight state convicts suffered death when the prison and stockade at Lucile mines, operated by the Red Feather Coal company, of which W. H. Perry is president, were completely destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock Tuesday morning. Three negro convicts who were attempting to escape by setting fire to the prison are responsible for the terrible holocaust. Lucile is four miles south of here in Bibb county.

Twenty-seven negro convicts were burned to death.

One of the negroes who set fire to the building was shot and instantly killed, while attempting to escape.

Twenty-two prisoners were more or less seriously burned and several of them may die.

Two men were shot seriously while attempting to escape by climbing over the stockade fence.

From the best information obtainable here the fire was started by three convicts who stole oil from their lamps which they used in the mines. It is stated that they spread oil promiscuously about one section of the prison and when they set it off the fire spread rapidly, and many of the sleeping men confined were caught by the angry flames before they could make their way to the door leading to the prison yard. The buildings and stockade, being of dry pine, and parts of them being saturated with oil, burned with startling rapidity.

Wife of Doctor Hyde Tries to Rush Into his Arms as Verdict is Read

St. Louis, Mo.—J. W. Vancleave, former president of the Manufacturers' association, died of heart disease at his home here Sunday. His death was a shock to his relatives and friends, who had been hopeful of his recovery during the last few days, in which he had shown marked improvement.

Mr. Vancleave was nearly 61 years old. H. C. Thompson, for 30 years his business associate, said Sunday night Mr. Vancleave's breakdown could be traced to his war with the labor unions.

Mr. Vancleave attracted international attention and became a power to contend with in both of the large political parties in national conventions by reason of his uncompromising attitude toward the big union labor leaders.

When the Buck Stove & Range Co., of which he was president, was boycotted, following a dispute with a local union, he obtained an injunction against Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; John Mitchell and Frank Morrison.

The three labor officials were sentenced to jail for contempt of the federal court of the District of Columbia. An appellate court sustained the sentence and an appeal was taken to the supreme court of the United States, where the case is pending.

At the time of his death Mr. Vancleave was a member of the executive board of the Manufacturers' association.

Van Cleave Dead; Former President of Manufacturers Association

Kansas City, Mo.—After deliberating sixty hours the jury in the trial of Dr. B. C. Hyde, found him guilty of murdering Col. Thomas H. Swope, the millionaire and philanthropist, with a sentence of life imprisonment.

Thus ended one of the most remarkable murder cases of a decade in which it was charged that the doctor planned to secure the immense Swope fortune by killing off his wife's entire family with disease germs and subtle poisons. As the verdict of murder in the first degree was announced by the foreman of the jury, Dr. Hyde bowed his head. His wife broke into sobs and tried to rush to his arms as he stood in the dock.

Judge Latshaw said that Dr. Hyde would be remanded to jail without bail and treated like every other convicted man.

"Dr. Hyde cannot be admitted to his attorneys full limit of time within which to make their motion for a new trial and shall then endeavor him in open court. This will probably be next Thursday or Friday.

Dr. Hyde will file an appeal.

No members of the Swope family was in the court room when the verdict was rendered.

The Grand Jury was busily engaged for the first four days of the week investigating the Maplesville murder. The public should be patient in matters of this kind. Circumstantial evidence unless well conducted is the poorest kind of testimony and should the Court go into the trial of the accused parties without sufficient evidence to convict, or rather should the Court go into the trial with the State unprepared to substantiate its side of the case the public generally would be much louder in its condemnation than the circumstances would warrant. Give the officers sufficient time to work up the testimony and to return indictments which can be maintained, then call upon the Court officers to do their full duty, but do not condemn them for not coming into a matter without proper investigation and preparation.

GRAND JURY REPORT.

The Press in Demand for Better Roads.

Honorable W. W. Pearson, Judge, Presiding:

We, the grand jury organized at the spring term, 1910, of the circuit court of Chilton county, Alabama, having finished our labors, beg leave to submit this, our final report:

We have carefully investigated all indictable offenses, so far as possible, and have returned true bills when, in our judgment, the facts justified it. We have investigated 44 cases, examined one hundred and ninety-three witnesses, and returned nineteen indictments. We have made diligent inquiry into violations of prohibition laws in this county, and while a great many cases have been brought to our attention, we have found it impossible to secure sufficient testimony to justify indictments. We do not believe these laws can be enforced unless the good citizens of this county will do their duty. As we find upon examination most of the witnesses brought before us will not testify as to having bought it; and unless the good citizens will take the necessary steps to bring the offenders to justice the violations will continue. We further find that the majority of these witnesses are boys and young men, and we have reason to believe that a great many of them have sworn falsely.

We also find that the churches in the rural districts are having considerable trouble on account of unbecoming conduct on the part of young men, especially, and in some cases the grand jury has acted within the powers conferred upon it by law.

The justices of the peace of the county who have reported to us have complied with the requirements of the law.

We have examined by committee the poor house of the county and find it well kept and in good condition. There are 12 inmates, three males and nine females. The sanitary conditions are good, and we find the inmates to be well pleased with their superintendent. We would recommend that the county provide more room for the care of stock and produce raised on the farm.

We have examined the books of all the county officers and find them neat and correctly kept. We have examined the bonds. We have examined the books and accounts of the County Treasurer, see exhibit "A."

We have examined the court house and jail in a body. We find the court house in good condition with the following exceptions: We find the court room is in bad condition as to the floor, and we would suggest that the commissioners provide a sufficient number of cuspidors for the room, and we would further suggest that the officials of the county see that they are put to the proper use. We also find that the toilet room on the first floor of the court house is in bad condition, and would suggest that the officials put it in a sanitary condition and see that it is properly cleansed daily. We also find that the courthouse roof needs over the judge's chamber, and we leave to call the commissioners attention to having this repaired shortly.

We found the jail in good shape so far as safety is concerned. We would recommend that the two small rooms in the first story of the jail be cleaned out and provided with the necessary sanitary connections. We note that the former grand jury called the attention of the commissioners to this fact. We also find that these rooms have been badly used during the last two weeks, and we believe that it would be better to the good of the county if the work could be done at once. We also find that the beds and bedding of the inmates of the jail are in bad condition, and would like to suggest to the proper officials the importance of supplying and keeping supplied with beds and clothing for all the inmates. We would further suggest that the county commissioners visit the jail as soon as possible and provide all things necessary for the safety and protection of the prisoners. We would also recommend that the sheriff make proper requisition according to the county commissioners for what supplies he may need at any time. Some complaint was made to us by the prisoners in jail to the effect that they were not properly fed. We would suggest to the sheriff that he look after this closely.

We have made diligent inquiry into the condition of the public roads of the county and find them bad. We find that the overseers and appointees are negligent as to their duties in this line. We beg leave to call the attention of the overseers to the fact that they are required by law to put, at least, one day's work on their respective roads. The Grand Jury unanimously favor the proposition of a bond issue for the improvement of the roads of the County, and would suggest that the proposition be put before the people at the general election in November, 1910.

We desire to thank the Sheriff and his deputies for their prompt service of all papers put in their hands. We also thank our bailiff for his polite attention and constant care for our convenience. We also desire to thank all other County officials for their many courtesies. We especially desire to thank our County Solicitor for the assistance given us in our deliberations and for his careful attention to the details of every question that was presented to him for his opinion. We desire to thank your honor for the able and instructive charge given us before entering upon the discharge of our duties.

We respectfully recommend to the County Commissioners that they reimburse the sheriff to the amount of ten ($10.00) Dollars for the feeding of witnesses necessarily held by him during the investigation by us of the killing of Cleve Houlditch at Maplesville, provided there is warrant of law for such action.

We further recommend that the County Treasurer be provided with office room in the Court House.

And now having finished our labors we ask to be finally discharged.

Respectfully submitted.

E. L. THORNTON, Foreman.

BLIND TIGER ENTRAPPED. CAUGHT IN HIS LAIR WHILE NAPPING.

Monday last a new face was presented at the Hotel de Catts in the person of Geo. Williams, a colored individual who claims Riderville as the place of his domicile and also of his misdeeds.

George was corralled while disposing of the Cup that Cheers contrary to the peace and dignity of the State of Alabama.

George knew it was contrary to the peace and so forth but he "fuck de chances" and got "tuck" by the officers.

He will be permitted to eat at the County's expense till the next term of the Court and also to cogitate upon the ways of the transgressor.

A DOUBLE HEADER AND A DIVIDE

The Clanton Invincibles and the Lightwood baseball teams played two games of ball here last Saturday resulting in one game for each team.

The score of the first game stood three to four in favor of the Lightwood aggregation while Clanton captured the last game by a score of eleven to nothing—scoring a complete shut-out for the Lightwood boys.

The batteries for the two games were:

First Game—Clanton: Pyron and Pyron. Lightwood: Wingard and Brown.

Second Game—Clanton: Reynolds and Byron. Lightwood: Wingard and Brown.

During the last game Clanton secured three base hits off Wingard.

The Press has been told of a new enterprise that is on foot for Clanton. Just yet we are not able to divulge the nature of the enterprise of those behind it, but we can say that if it is put through it will mean much toward the material development of the town.

Mrs. R. P. Bassmore of Montgomery came up on last Saturday and spent Sunday with Mr. Bassmore in Clanton. She returned on the up Monday morning [illegible] with her visit. [illegible]

CLANTON ACADEMY COMMENCEMENT

The Commencement exercises of the Clanton Academy began last Sunday at the Methodist Church when Rev. Mr. Kline delivered to the student body a most polished and highly instructive sermon. The churches of the city all gave way to the Academy and the services at the Methodist church were impressive in the extreme.

The front seats of the large auditorium were reserved for the student body who were marched to the church from the Academy each grade under the chaperonage of its teacher. The music, especially arranged for the occasion, was inspiring and excellently rendered by a select choir of voices. Rev. Mr. Kline was in excellent spirits and for more than an hour he held the closest attention of his auditors as he unfolded to them the great truths of life and stressed the points which go to make life not only beautiful and useful but which as a crowning glory give assurances of the everlasting life.

On Monday night a beautiful operetta was rendered at the Academy by half a score or more of the students which evinced the careful training of the instructors and the aptitude of those in the caste.

Notwithstanding the very inclement weather the Academy was unable to accommodate the vast throng which had gathered to witness the performance.

The students taking part in the operetta acquitted themselves in the most admirable manner, reflecting credit upon themselves, and upon their trainers.

We have not space this week for an extended account of the play and so have deferred lengthy mention of it till our next issue. So remarkably well was the play rendered that it deserves more than passing mention, and rather than to leave any portion of this excellently rendered play unnoticed we are going to ask our readers to wait till next week when we promise them an extended notice.

On Tuesday night the star attraction was Hon. Henry Fitts, of Birmingham, who delivered a most pleasing address, polished and chaste as is always the case when this learned gentleman appears before an audience.

In a most masterful manner did he discuss his subject, showing thorough preparation and an intimate acquaintance with his theme.

At the conclusion of the address Mr. W. M. Adams, President of the Board of Trustees, delighted the audience by the announcement that the entire teaching force of the Academy had been re-elected for the coming session.

Though some of them have not yet signified their determination to return it is sincerely hoped by all that Clanton will again have the pleasure of her present corps of teachers.

But there was another interesting feature of the program—the delivery of medals.

The trustees, at the beginning of the session had announced that there would be a number of medals to be contested for during the term and these were delivered to the fortunate winners.

Mr. Felix M. Wood, in a few well-chosen remarks, made the deliveries on behalf of the Board of Trustees as follows:

High School, Miss Ruth Kate Mullins; eighth grade, Julian Latham; special grade, Mack Wyatt; seventh grade, Miss Mary Davis; sixth grade, Miss Lilla Belle Mullins; fifth grade, Omer Reynolds; fourth grade, Miss Kathleen Mullins; third grade, Miss Mary Sue Mullins; Second grade, Cottie Williams; first grade, Lee Sartor. For perfect attendance, neither absent or tardy during the entire session: Newton Miner, Grady Broadhead, Miss Pauline Woodyard, Miss Delane Hayes, Miss Mary Sue Mullins, Pink Cooper.

THE REVIVAL.

The revival meeting which is being conducted at the Methodist Church by Rev. Mr. Kline has already been productive of much good to the church going portion of Clanton's citizens and to the unsaved. Mr. Kline is a speaker of convincing power; he presents the gospel truths with earnestness and clearness. His invitations to the unsaved to surrender to the Christ and to turn from sin and condemnation are meeting with numerous responses on the part of those who realize their unsaved condition.

The meeting will [illegible] at the Methodist Church as the minister and [illegible] wish [illegible] closing soon.

DOES HISTORY REPEAT ITSELF? IN THE WRONG HOUSE BY MISTAKE?

Last Saturday night while the inmates of Mr. Ed Smitherman's home were wrapt peacefully in the arms of Morpheus and were dreaming of better days to come some one tanked up on the Oil of Joy, the Juice that Inebriates, the Fluid that Fires the Brain, the Portion that Prepares for Hell, went into the best room in the house, the room usually reserved for sober company and welcomed guests and appropriated to his own use the recently laundered linen and the carefully made bed.

Nor was he careful to remove his muddy boots, but stretched himself full length upon the snow white sheets, whiskey, boots, mud and all, and there rested until the rising of the sun. With the coming of the "Day King" the weary traveller (weary of toting liquor) aroused himself and made a sneak for the outside.

Up to this time Mr. Smitherman has not discovered who his guest was but he has a line on him and is now looking for a light suit of clothes and a black suit of hair.

NO OCCASION FOR ALARM. SMALL-POX PATIENT RECOVERING.

Last week Henry Kennedy (charged with shooting his own brother, and not with the Maplesville murder as was erroneously stated by others) developed a well defined case of small pox in the County jail. Judge Reynolds was invited over to look at the negro and as soon as he saw him pronounced it a case of small-pox. A physician was sent for and he substantiated the diagnosis made by Judge Reynolds.

Immediate preparations were made for removing Kennedy from the County jail in order that the infection might not spread among the other inmates.

After a trip or two through town the negro was finally placed in the old county house, near the jail, which was formerly the home of the jail keeper. Here the negro is isolated and is being attended night and day by nurses and the county physician. Reports come that he is rapidly recovering and will, in a few more days, be able to take his usual place in the County Bastile. In the meantime no alarm need be felt on the part of the citizens as every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

Judge Reynolds, however, decided to take no chances so he went to his physician and was vaccinated—a wise precaution on the part of the Judge, since he came in close contact with the infected darkey.

Mr. J. O. Wade is now putting the finishing touches on his new residence preparatory to moving his family.

The [illegible] will [illegible] at Postmaster [illegible] as the [illegible] wish [illegible] closing soon.

PERSONAL MENTION.

United States District Attorney Warren S. Reese, of Montgomery, was in Clanton one day this week on a visit to Postmaster Dudley.

Genial Captain Ben Oliver, of Verbena, was a business visitor to Clanton last Monday. During his stay in town he paid The Press offices a visit which was highly appreciated.

Mr. I. Gordon and his little son, Harry, went up to Columbiana last Saturday to spend Sunday with friends. Little Harry returned Sunday evening but the father remained over for a day or two. Harry is now getting large enough to travel alone.

Mr. J. A. Skaggs of Jemison was a visitor to Clanton on Monday last having come down on business.

Mr. W. T. Callen returned Sunday night from a visit to Florida points, while away Mr. Callen went over his orange grove interests to see what were the effects of the recent cold snap. He says that while the fruit is somewhat retarded it is not so badly injured.

Miss Fannie McMath, of Montgomery, is the charming guest of Mrs. J. P. VanDerveer.

Mr. Ed Healey, an old Clanton boy, but now residing at Woodbine, Coosa County, was a visitor to Clanton this week.

Hon. W. S. McNeill, of Fayette, a delegate to the late State Convention, from Fayette County came over to [illegible] the convention to spend the day with his old home friends, Prof. and Mrs. Monroe.

ANOTHER FRENCHMAN GOES ACROSS CHANNEL

Jacques De Lesseps Beats Bleriot's Record

FOG INTERFERES A LITTLE

Not Much Attention Is Attracted in England or France by the Feat Which Is Performed With Such Success.

RECORDS BY FRESHMEN

May, 1910—De Lesseps, across channel, 28 minutes.

April, 1910—Louis Paulhan, 185 miles in 3 hours, 56 minutes.

November, 1909—Henri Farman, 144 miles in 4 hours, 17 minutes.

July 9, 1909—M. Bleriot, across channel (23 miles) in 33 minutes, 35 seconds.

Dover, England.—Count De Lesseps flew across the English channel in an aeroplane from France, landing near Deal. He is the first man to duplicate Bleriot's historic feat. De Lesseps started from Calais at 3:30 p. m. Bleriot made his flight in the early morning. De Lesseps, however, started at a much less favorable time, when a stiff breeze was blowing to kick up he white caps. He shot away from the French shore on a 25-mile journey, rising easily, and within a short time was following a straight line across the water.

In spite of the wind, the machine seemed to be under perfect control. It sped along at express speed, easily outdistancing the boats that attempted to follow.

When nearing the English shore it swerved gracefully, slowed and swooped down, gliding the greater part of the last few hundred feet.

The flight, in the light of the developments in aviation in the last few months, though daring, is of little general importance compared with the London to Manchester flight, in which Louis Paulhan won $50,000. About De Lesseps' feat there is little of the glamor that marked the first crossing of the channel, but he is nevertheless hailed as a hero. It brings home to Englishmen, however, the fact that the breakdown of England's walls of water, long held as the nation's safeguard, is not a matter of fluke, but a comparatively easy feat.

Young De Lesseps.

Paris—Count De Lesseps, who crossed the English channel in an aeroplane, has long been known as one of the most daring sportsmen of France, in spite of his youth. The news of his victory was received in Paris with enthusiasm equaled only by the success of Paulhan in the London to Manchester flight. Count De Lesseps is a daring automobilist, and has made a name for himself, besides, as a duelist. He is one of the few men who has fought in France in recent years. The aviator is the son of Count Ferdinand De Lesseps, whose name became famous in connection with the Suez and the French Panama canals.

HETTY GREEN SUED FOR RENT OF A BOX.

New York—Mrs. Hetty Green, who has been attending to business without much public attention recently, will come out from her seclusion on Monday to appear in court as the defendant in a suit brought by a safe deposit company for $550 rental of boxes, used to store the papers of the estate of Mrs. Green's father Edwin Mott Robinson. Her daughter, Mrs. Sylvia A. C. Wilkes, is administratrix. Mrs. Green says she does not see, therefore, why she should pay $550 of her hard-earned money to the Safe Deposit Company.

WOMEN LASSO A DRUNKEN MAN.

Pueblo—Lassoed with a clothes lines by several women, John Jones, "drunk and disorderly," was tied to a water plug and held until the arrival of a policeman. The women say Jones was in the neighborhood for nearly an hour and insulted them when asked to leave. They decided on a drastic plan of action. One of the women who declares she has had experience with the lariat, threw the rope, the others threw their aid and Jones was instantly entangled in a rope coil.

Cows Spread Consumption.

To show that there is danger of contracting tuberculosis from using milk from tubercular cows, we cite the statement of Health Officer Woodward, of Washington, who says that about fifteen per cent. of the people who die in the District of Columbia from tuberculosis contract the disease as a result of drinking milk from dairies in and around Washington. It has been found that an unusually large number of cows around Washington have the disease. This is a serious situation, and if this is true around Washington it is true in other large cities. The only safe way is to have the cows the tuberculin test.—Farmers' Guide.

Cheap Horse Feeds.

The Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station has published a bulletin on comparative horse feeding. It states that six horses at work received a regular ration of timothy hay and oats at an average expense of 29.6 cents per day, estimating the feed at current prices. The horses lost an average of eleven pounds each. Six horses were fed a cheaper ration consisting of shredded cornstalks, oat straw, hay, ear corn, oats, beet pulp, bran, oilcake and a few roots, the average cost of which was 17.7 cents per day, and the horses gained on an average four pounds each. Four horses were also fed the cheaper ration, but, as they were at rest part of the time they were not fed as heavily as the other lots. The average cost of maintenance in this trial was 12.9 cents, and the average loss in live weight of each horse four pounds.

Horse Holidays.

The Federal Government is acting on the old saw that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and has adopted a rule for a holiday for horses employed in the public service. The first example of the new law was observed in the case of all horses used in the service at Washington. The horses employed in the Postal Department are to have a thirty days' vacation every year, the same as Government employes. The chief of the department believes holidays will add to the efficiency and durability of the horses in the Government service. Every summer all the horses employed in the Postal Department at the capital will be sent to the Government pastures of Maryland. A change to the rich, tonic grasses of the country and the opportunity to loaf in the shade of the stately trees will not only be appreciated by the horses, but will greatly add to their efficiency.

Keeping Up Soil Fertility.

With reference to keeping the land with clover alone, I formerly believed the fertility of the soil could be maintained indefinitely by crop rotation and the proper use of clover, but in recent years I have changed my mind. Certain elements, as nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, exist in the soil and necessary to the growth and thrift of all plants, are removed from the land by continuous cropping, two of which cannot be replaced by clover alone.

As all know, clover if properly used, will renew the diminishing supply of nitrogen, but will not develop the available phosphoric acid and potash in sufficient quantities to grow profitable crops. There comes a time in the history of all old land, when the exhausted elements which cannot be restored by clover must be supplied from some other source. Stable manure, which is complete within itself, or some form of phosphate or commercial fertilizer must be used. If you have enough stable manure you will never need any commercial fertilizer. But who has enough?

We probably have more stable manure than any one else in this vicinity as we feed and fatten, each year, for the market, a great deal of live stock, consisting of some 1500 head of sheep and lambs, in a barn built solely for that purpose, and in which they are well bedded, thereby preserving, in the best possible manner, all liquid as well as all solid manure. In addition to this we fed in summer more than 500 head of cattle. The manure from all these animals goes through the spreader, and back on the land, yet we have not enough. Hence, we supply the money by using commercial fertilizers, and in addition to this, we sow clover in all small grain, having more than 100 acres in clover. The average yield of wheat has increased from twelve to fifteen bushels per acre, giving the figures for each farm and field. One year we sowed wheat in two twenty-five acre fields; one of these, comparatively new land, and the other, very old, upon which we used 125 pounds per acre of a fertilizer carrying, probably, one to two per cent. nitrogen, seven to eight per cent. available phosphoric acid and two to four per cent. potash, the fertilizer being used on the newer land. From the old land we harvested five bushels more per acre than from the new, and of better weight and quality.

The old field had been in cultivation probably, more than fifty years. The old field was much nearer the barn and had had more manure spread on it than on the other one. At the Rothamstead experiment station in England, three plots of land were used in growing wheat for more than fifty years. On one of these plots wheat was grown for the entire period without fertilizer of any kind, producing 13.1 bushels per acre, average. On one of the other plots fourteen tons of farm manure were applied each year and produced 35.7 bushels per acre. And upon the other one commercial fertilizer was applied; and the yield was 37.1 bushels per acre.—J. W. F. Thomas, in the Indiana Farmer.

Feeding and Training Colts.

Feed is high, but so are horses, and even the chronic grumblers have stopped saying that it does not pay to raise colts. There is no denying that it pays better to raise the heavy breeds than the trotting-bred colt. Nine out of ten of the former are prizes, where only now and then a trotter is developed. The trotter requires special training; the drafter needs only use to make him saleable at a good price. Somebody asks if it is true that at present prices for feed a colt will "eat his head off" in a few months? It all depends upon how he is fed.

A yearling may be kept well, which means kept growing, at not to exceed from $2 to $2.50 per month while in stable, and for much less when at pasture. A favorite ration is a pint of ground oats, the same of bran and half a gill of oil meal, twice a day, made into a thin gruel with water and spread on the hay feed. If hay is high, feed oat straw in its place if bright and clean. Do not give the colts any dusty food, and see to it that they do not become constipated. Linseed meal, roots, cornstalks and apples are useful to prevent this danger.

The main thing is to keep the youngster growing, and to see that he has no backset. Stunted colts, like stunted children, will carry the ill effects of early malnutrition as a handicap all through life.

Next to sensible feeding is intelligent handling of the colts. This should begin early and be carried on with patience and good sense. Kindness allied to firmness is the great essential in the training of a colt in the way you want him to go. A brawling, impatient, headstrong man can very soon turn a likely colt into a vicious and worthless imitation of himself.—Weekly Witness.

Determine Vitality of Seed Corn.

There is serious danger that this year's corn crop will be limited by a poor stand of plants.

Many growers will be compelled to buy seed. In such case do not risk purchases from a different latitude. If good seed of a productive variety cannot be bought near home, then make sure that the seed has been grown in a section having a similar growing season, advises a writer in National Stockman and Farmer. Even if the corn is sold as tested seed buy early enough to enable you to make a test for yourself before planting.

The first thing to do is to test the corn that one is planning to use. It will pay to do this right. Make some boxes three inches deep and, say, eighteen inches square. Partly fill with sawdust or any other material that will hold moisture. Place on this a square of muslin that is marked in one inch squares and numbered. On each square place four kernels of corn taken from different parts of the ear, one square for each ear that is to be tested. Give the ear the same number as the square by writing the number on a slip of paper and tying it around the ear. Cover the corn in a box with a pad that will hold the moisture, and keep the box in a warm room. Select for planting only the ears whose kernels have shown strong germinating power. If one kernel in four fails to germinate, or if the germination is slow and weak, reject the ear. The task of testing is not nearly so great as these directions may indicate, and in this way one may know that all the seed is capable of making a strong growth of plants.

It pays every year, but this year it will be unusually profitable. Much corn will not grow at all, and very much will germinate only under most favorable conditions, and some cold, wet weather after planting will rot it. Make sure of the rejection of all seed that is not full of vitality, and this method of testing will enable anyone to do so.

Mixed on His Ologicals.

A small boy in Yonkers recently became the proud possessor of a donkey—not so handsome or so young as it might have been. However, it answered the purpose of its acquisition, which was to afford back rides, says Lippincott's.

One day the urchin was enjoying a ride when the minister of the parish met him.

"Hullo, sonny," greeted the minister. "Quite a rare beast you have there."

"Yes," replied the boy, "but I suppose there are a great many of 'em in the theological gardens."

Soft Answers.

Nothing provokes bitter enmity so much as an angry retort, whichever does irreparable harm, and silence, akin to contempt, is equally irritating. Soft answers are like oil on troubled waters, and often transform a seeming enemy into a friend.—Home Notes.

Good Roads

Campaigning For Roads.

"I'll never forget the night I called on the Widow Yarn. She owned forty acres on the main road which I hoped to have improved. In practically every house in the county I had been hospitably received because I was a human being. A pioneer citizen, member of the Good Roads Club, took me in a carriage to see the widow. "I'll watch the horses," this wise old citizen said.

"I don't know what would frighten them," I suggested, but he seemed to expect a brass band or some other unusual sight, although it was eight o'clock at night. I soon knew why he preferred to sit out there in the cold.

"Mrs. Yarn, I believe?" I began, ingratiatingly, when the door was opened.

"Well," the person who stood there observed, "I've been here forty years; you ought to believe it."

"This," thinks I to myself, "is a strange place for curbstone humor." And then aloud: "I have been talking for good roads, madam. We have decided to run a rock road by here and as—"

"Who has decided?" This in the voice a conductor uses when he asks you how old your little boy is.

"Why," I stammered, "the Good Roads Club, and—"

"I don't belong to it, do I? They wouldn't have a woman member, would they?"

"I'm sure I don't know. I have been chiefly—"

"Sure you don't," the Widow Yarn snapped. "You're chiefly concerned about taxing my forty acres into the county treasury without letting me vote on it. What right have you to come over here to build roads? Are you a road-builder? Did you ever build a road or pay for one?"

"Madam," I said, "you really do have a vote on this question if a road district is organized. You have forty votes—one for every acre you own, and—"

Her face lighted up with a light that never was seen before on human face, unless perhaps in riding on an old transfer or getting rid of a bad nickel. She opened the door wider—I had not been admitted up to that moment—and asked me to enter.

"You say I have forty votes?" she inquired.

"You have," I assured her, feeling like the bearer of good news.

"Well, glory be!" the Widow Yarn sighed, rocking herself comfortably. "Glory be, say I; I'll cast them all against your old rock road. Now I must be getting ready for prayer-meeting."—Charles Dillon, in Harper's Weekly.

Good Roads and the Auto.

While the automobile has been responsible, therefore, for the increased deterioration of roads formerly supposed to be almost perfect in construction, it has focussed attention on the necessity for good roads, has been largely responsible for the active educational campaign in this regard, and has undoubtedly had an excellent effect in bringing to the public attention the enormous waste incident to poor and ill-kept highways. Realizing that the automobile is a necessary factor to consider in highway traffic, road engineers have been experimenting with new constructions, in order to arrive at the road which will best embody the requirements of automobile traffic without any detrimental effect on the horse traffic involved. By far the largest proportion of the highway construction conducted along the new lines for the adaptation of the road to automobile traffic has been done with various forms of bitumen, oils, tars and asphalts, and up to the present the most satisfactory results from the point of view of economy have been with these materials.—H. Tipper, in Leslie's.

Curious African Tribes.

By CAPT. C. H. STIGAN.

The men of this (the Reshiat) and the other tribes to the north of the Omo River—Murule and Kerre—carry about with them small wooden pillows like miniature one-legged stools, on which they sometimes sit.

The Reshiat can often be seen standing on one leg, with the sole of the other foot resting behind the knee-joint and knee, at right angles to the body—an attitude which has often been noted among Hamitic people. The people that do this are Somalis, Masai, Readile, Samburu, Alpi, Bari, Madi, and many other non-Bantu people of Africa.

The Reshiat are the only Africans I have yet met who make a practice of eating donkey-flesh, and the large number of these animals they breed appear to be used for food only and for no other purpose.

The Lion's Share.

Two brothers, of whom a writer in the Washington Post tells, got on none too well with each other, for reasons which will be plain to all.

"Here," said their mother to the older of them one day; "here is a banana. Divide it with your little brother and see that he gets the lion's share."

The younger child a few minutes later set up a great bawling.

"Mamma," he shrieked, "Jonny hasn't given me any banana!"

"What's this!" inquired the mother, turning to

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MAY 29.

Subject: The Multitudes Fed, Matt. 14:13-21; 15:29-39—Commit Verses 19, 20.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life." John 6:35.

TIME.—Summer A. D. 29.

PLACE.—Near the Sea of Galilee.

EXPOSITION.—I. Jesus Healing the Lame, Blind, Dumb, Maimed and Many Others, 29-31. Jesus had withdrawn into the parts of Tyre and Sidon that He might have more seclusion, but even there they sought Him out (vs. 21-28), so He returned to the Sea of Galilee and went up into the mountain. But even there the multitudes followed Him. They came to Him because there was no one else to whom they could go. They brought their hopeless, helpless cases to Him and cast them down at His feet. They seemed to be in despair, but there is nothing too hard for Him; lame, blind, dumb, maimed, though they were, "He healed them." We have an equal warrant for bringing all our helpless cases to Him (Heb. 13:8; Jas. 5:14). "The multitude wondered," but we are not told that they were converted. They actually saw the dumb speaking, the maimed healed, the lame walking and the blind seeing. They gave the glory to Whom it belonged. It is significant that God is here spoken of as "the God of Israel," it was Jehovah, God of Israel, who had promised to heal His people (Ex. 15:26, A. R. V.).

II. Jesus Feeding the Hungry, 32-39. The multitude that surrounded Jesus had no real appreciation of Him. They were not after the truth, but after the loaves and fishes (cf. Jno. 6:26, 27). But they were deeply interested, they continued with Him three days, though their small supply of food was now exhausted. Unworthy as they were, Jesus was moved with compassion, and He has compassion on the hungry multitudes to-day. The disciples were filled with dismay at the suggestion contained in His words that the multitude must be fed (cf. Num. 11:21-23; 2 K. 4:42; 8:2). To set them to thinking and to prepare them to appreciate what He was to do, Jesus asked them how many loaves they had. With only seven loaves and a few small fish, Jesus commanded the multitude to sit down. They did as they were told. It was well that they did, for they were fed and filled. It always pays to do just as Jesus bids us, no matter how unreasonable the command may seem. The seven loaves and the fishes were utterly inadequate for such a crowd, but Jesus took what there was and multiplied it. Jesus always uses what we have, no matter how inadequate it is in itself, to the task in hand. The disciples did not have much, but they put all they had in His hands. When we do put all in His hands, He will bless and multiply it and use it, and He will not use it until all is committed to Him. As little as there was, Jesus gave thanks for it. We, too, ought to return thanks every time we eat (Rom. 14:6; 1 Cor. 10:30, 31; Col. 3:17; 1 Tim. 4:3-5; Acts 27:35). There was something deeply significant in the manner in which our Lord returned thanks at meals, so significant that the disciples recognized Him after His resurrection by the way in which He returned thanks at the breaking of bread (Lu. 24:30, 31, 35; see also Jno. 6:11, 23). He gave thanks not only for the seven loaves, but later also for the few small fishes (cf. Mk. 8:6, 7). The few small fishes did not seem of much account, but Jesus took them, returned thanks for them and multiplied them. Our possessions oftentimes seem so small that it does not appear as if it was worth while to put them in Jesus' hands, but there is nothing so small that if we put it in Jesus' hands, He will despise it not and use it. As few and small as the fish were, He commanded to set these also before them (Mk. 8:7). As large as the multitude and as small the quantity of food that was supplied, there proved enough for all, "they did all eat and were filled." No one goes away empty from Christ's table (Ps. 23:1; Phil. 4:19). But Jesus would not have bountifulness teach us wastefulness; they took up the broken pieces that remained (Mk. 8:8). When they were filled, He sent them away, and not till then (Mk. 8:9). This is a separate miracle from that of the feeding of the five thousand in the 14th chapter. There is a tendency among modern critics, when one Gospel records a miracle or a parable and another records another miracle or parable much like to it, to take the ground that they are two different accounts of the same miracle or parable, but in this case Matthew and Mark record both miracles and thus show the untenableness of this modern theory.

A Resting Place.

It is a great thing to come to Christ—it is the turning point of life; and it is a great thing to abide in Him in the storm and conflicts and terrors of the world.

Safe to the hidden home of Thine abiding,
Carry the weak knees and the heart that faints;
Shield from the scorn and dread from the chiding,
Give the world joy, but patience to the saints.

It is a great thing to come to Christ; it is a great thing to abide in Him; but from His point of view the object of our coming and of our abiding is that we should go. He wants us as His messengers, as His fellow-messengers; His purpose is that, abiding in Him, we should be fit, and within in for the cleaning but the fitness; that we should be the communicators of the light which shines upon the people who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death. EDITORIAL.

O'Neal and Seed, Deason and Curry, Jones and Simpson, Kolb and Willingham, these are names to conjure with this year. Watch them in the general election.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church, South, recently in session at Ashville, N. C., honored itself in honoring James H. McCoy by electing him to the Bishopric.

It also honored the grand old name under which it has fought so many ecclesiastical battles and won so many victories by refusing to surrender the word "South" as a part of its corporate name.

It is said that Germany is now well satisfied with the status of things international since the death of King Edward of England.

Rather inhumanitarian that a nation should be satisfied at the death of a great ruler of a sister nation.

A politician of opposite faith from that held by the editor stopped us on the streets the other day and said: "See here, Mr. Editor, there's no hitting below the belt in this political bout you know." To be sure there isn't to be any unless the other fellow gets his pail of mud and begins to daub things; but what made him think of that do you suppose? If he wasn't guilty why should it have entered his head?

Perhaps he knows what we know and if he knows what we know he knows that we know no good thing of that amalgamation seance that was attempted some days agone.

Just whoop 'em up Mr. Editor, was the remark of an eighteen carat democrat from the rural sections last week. We've got those republicans on the run and so badly are they scared and scattered that they'll scamper clean out of old Chilton in a few more weeks. They've got the buck ague or the stage frights or the stampedes or something of the kind. And well they might have for we democrats are in the saddle this time and for keeps.

The cool nights and mornings are retarding the growth of cotton and other vegetation somewhat, but let the farmer not be discouraged. In 1849 the same weather was experienced and excellent crops were made.

There's altogether too much corn and other feed stuffs brought in to this town from the West. Chilton can and ought to be self-sustaining.

Never has the Press received so emphatic an endorsement of its course as that given by the recent Grand Jury. Nor was it intended as an endorsement of our course either but merely a statement of bald facts.

By a unanimous vote the Jury went on record as condemning the public roads of the County as they are now worked and endorsing a bond issue for the proper and systematic working of the public thoroughfares. We shall have much to say on this subject in the near future; but just now let us remark that this should not be made a political issue. The surest way in the world to kill the enthusiasm already aroused and the most certain way to delay the improvement of the roads is for some politician to make it an issue either for himself or his party. Keep it out of politics, and the first man who tries to foist it upon his party or appropriate it to his own aggrandizement, squelch him in the beginning.

The public roads are too important to all the people to be mixed up in a political controversy or to be made a personal issue.

Let's get the party primaries and the general election over and then settle down to internal improvement and development regardless of who are elected to office.

In our next issue The Press proposes to submit to the citizens of the County a scheme for the progress and prosperity of Clanton and Chilton County that has been tried successfully in many other places, and which will work successfully here. We had hoped to have everything ready for its unfolding this week but so busy have we been with other matters that this particular proposition had to be side-tracked. It's not a political scheme but one looking to the closer association of country friend with town acquaintance; a better understanding between the farmer and the merchant; a combination of interests that will develop to the mutual advantage of all. We will consult with several of the business men this week with a view to inaugurating the movement which we sincerely believe will redound to the good of all.

Now that the schools have closed for the vacation season where will the youth spend his days? On the creek bank for the first few weeks and in the cot for the next unless mothers are careful. Go in swimming —occasionally boys, if mother will permit—but do not spend the day there.

The new executive committee of the Democratic party is to be organized next week—a new chairman is to be elected, the old Chairman not now being a member of the committe. It is earnestly hoped that every member of the committee will be present in person and that every democrat in the county will lend his aid and assistance to the committeemen in the bringing to a successful close the election of democratic officers which has been started under such promising prospects.

THAT GRAY COLORED WAGON.

The Press has received several replies in response to its invitation to name the Water Wagon. They are rather slow coming in just yet but for the guidance of those who are thinking of making a suggestion we give the suggestions already made:

One good lady says: Name it "Minne-ha-ha." Ha-ha that would be fine! Another says: Call the old thing "Esmaralda."

Still another christens it Maud in spite of all we've said about it. A grouchy old man says it ought to be called Jumbo; while a youth of tender years who evidently is deeply in love suggests "Gazelle." Now wouldn't that jar you?

A practical man of business says it should be called "The Clanton Water-Wagon." And another of equal business turn of mind says "Refresher" is a most appropriate name.

A letter came in late suggesting that it be called the "Mermaid" and on the streets a certain person stopped us and said: "Say, call that gray four wheeler the "Contention."

Now there's poetry and wisdom combined in some of these suggestions, while in others there is an element of sarcasm or ridicule.

For instance Minnehaha—"Laughing Waters"—sounds rythmic and wise. "The Mermaid" would be appropriate if old "Gray's waist ilne wasn't so enormous and if she would be a little more graceful in hill climbing. "Esmaralda" smacks of the dance somewhat, and Gray is not a dancing elf by any manner or means.

Jumbo philosophises on the size but does not give any hint of its usefulness.

"Gazelle" is altogether too poetical for a ponderous machine like Gray; it suggests cool breezes, green grass and blue skies while Gray must traverse dusty roads and sand pits.

"Contention" would get things into a brawl and that won't begin to do. "Refresher"—now that's the name for all to dream over—if it wasn't so long between refreshings and The Clanton Water Wagon, that's too prosaic for anything. Everybody knows it's the Clanton Water Wagon anyway. What we want is something winsome, soothing,—a name to bring us forty cubits nearer the Springs of Eternal Youth; something that will conjure up in our minds the picturesque scenes of the Alhambra or suggest the recurring gysers of Yellowstone.

A name, a name, by Hokey, by John
A name for the Clanton Water Wagon!

IN THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

Wiley Young to Pay the Penalty—The Murder of Young Holditch to be Avenged by Law.

On Wednesday, May 18th the Circuit Court entered into cases of Emma Smith, Alice Sheppard, Wiley Young and William McCary, the negroes charged with the murder of young Cleve Holditch, at Maplesville.

In the case of Emma Smith severance was granted and she appeared and plead not guilty to the charge against her.

Judge Pearson set he case for hearing on Friday May 20th, and ordered that a special venire be drawn to try the woman.

On Friday when the case was called for final trial she withdrew the plea of not guilty and substituted therefor the plea of guilty of murder in the first degree. The case was entered into and the jury returned a verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment fixing the penalty at imprisonment for life.

Emma Smith, the prisoner, is a negro woman about twenty-two years of age and claims to be a washwoman by profession.

For the remainder of her natural life she will repose behind the walls of the State prison for having stained her hands in the blood of her fellowman.

Liberty for one, life imprisonment for another and death for another. On the same day (May 18th) the case against Alice Sheppard, Wiley Young and William Cary was called and each of the defendants entered a plea of not guilty. This case was also set for trial on Friday, the 20th and a special jury summoned for the case.

After an all-day investigation into the merits of the case the jury returned a verdict discharging William McCary [illegible] charged with assisting to do away with the young Cleve [illegible] Alice Sheppard and Wiley Young guilty of the charge of murder in the first degree and sentenced the woman, Alice Sheppard, to spend the remainder of her days behind the prison bars at Wetumpka, where she will have sufficient time to repent of her rash deed and enough labor to perform to keep her from dipping her hands in human blood.

Wiley Young was found to be the real murderer of Holditch and for his act in sending a human out of the world he was sentenced to forfeit his own life upon the gallows on the 20th day of next June.

In the case of Alice Sheppard notice of appeal was given but stay of execution of the sentence was not granted.

This case will doubtless go up to the supreme court for review, but in the case of Wiley Young there was no appeal and unless something unforseen happens between now and the 20th of June, which is on Monday, the soul of Wiley Young will, with the sanction of the law of the land, be hurled into eternity, there to face its God and to answer for the taking of human life.

DIAMOND THIEF DISCHARGED FROM COURT TRIAL.

The case of T. M. Murray, alias Phillips, who last fall attempted to purloin the diamond shirt button of Mr. Hugh Foshee, and who created so much excitement at the time by his daring attempt, was nol prossed by the court and no prosecution of the case will be had.

The minute entry on the records of the court show that Murray is suffering from that dread disease, consumption, and that his life cannot be prolonged a great while at best; that if imprisoned, as doubtless he would have been had the case been tried, his life would be greatly shortened, and that since the diamond which was attempted to be stolen was not in reality secured by the thief and no one but the thief has really suffered from the occurrence, it would be somewhat inhuman, even if legal, to imprison a dying man, therefore the court mercifully permitted a nol prosse in the case and gives to Murray an opportunity to mend his ways, free from prison walls.

Thus is justice tempered with mercy.

AN ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.

On last Sunday night a bold attempt was made to rob the home of Mr. Dan (Bud) Alred. While most of the citizens of Clanton were attending the revival services at the Methodist Church a black individual made his way to Mr. Alred's home, thinking doubtless, to find the inmates at church and thus affording him an excellent opportunity to pillage the house.

Fortunately for Mr. Alred and unfortunately for the would-be thief members of the family remained at home during the church services.

Mrs. Alred hearing some noise in the rear portion of the house went to make an investigation as to the cause thereof and stepping upon the rear verandah she came in close contact with a coal black negro man who was evidently making his way into the house by the back door.

Mrs. Alred gave the alarm and immediately other members of the family responded to the call. The negro made a hasty retreat over the fence, not standing upon the order of his going.

Word was sent to the Sheriff to produce his dogs and at the church a request was made that all those in the church house remain for a few moments in order that the trail of the negro robber might not be interfered with by the passing throngs.

The dogs immediately took the trail but after going a few yards lost it; though several attempts were made to trace the negro they all proved futile. The dogs seem out to be well on their job. A little training these early mornings would be of great benefit to the dogs and at the same time prove effective in putting a stop to these frequent attempts at house breaking. For twenty-five or fifty cents a boy can be hired to act as run-away for the dogs and by a few practises they will be put in such trim that they can easily trace any criminal.

We venture the suggestion to Sheriff Catts for what it is worth.

In addition to the training of the dogs it will prove rare sport to those who enjoy the early morning chase to get in behind the dogs as they go bounding over the level country on the track of a "dusky" thief.

In the meantime The Press suggests to the citizens of Clanton that when leaving the home for any length of time the head of the house see that all doors and windows are securely locked or barred.

County Correspondence

FAIRVIEW.

Please permit me to say a few words on the general issues of the day. Politics seem just now to be the most interesting topic to the people of Chilton just now as they are more or less anxious as to who are to represent them in the several offices that are soon to be filled.

The democrats all realize that we have nominated a most excellent ticket and I desire to say a few things as to the principles of the party which these candidates represent, and also to point out some of the things upon which the opposition party stands and which it so proudly, yet unwisely, boasts.

We believe that the people of Chilton will refuse to vote a straight republican ticket for many reasons; among them is that the republican party in this county has associated itself with almost every other party more or less for the one purpose of controlling the offices of the county and not because of any principle which it represented or any good that the people of the county, as a whole, would derive from that party's control. It has been the policy of those who have acted as leaders to take the following into any political party that would offer them as individuals lucrative offices and party patronage; they haxe cared little or nothing for the people of the county so long as they, personally, thrived in office and were fed from the public crib. As we understand it the principles of the republican and the populist parties are much farther apart than those of the democratic and populist parties, yet some who were once populists and boasted of their loyalty to that party, who were living upon the fat of the land because of their association with that party, as soon as they discovered that they were soon to lose their offices took their following, bag and baggage, into the republican party for no reason other than to save themselves in office. It has been a political hide and seek with these men since they first went into office, changing from one party to another whenever the opportunity presented itself or whenever new affiliation offered more certain chance of election to office. It has not been an act of loyalty to the party to which they belonged or to the people they pretended to represent; it has been a mere seeking game that hopes to perpetuate certain ones in office. This shows that these leaders have no real principle and represent no real ideas so far as the general public is concerned.

The good, intelligent voters of Chilton would not have been led by the "bosses" had they realized that they were being led. They will plainly now and we believe they will refuse to be longer led by these men; men who have united them with their opponents, when their principles were different; men who by their schemes have degraded their party and drug the flag of principle through the dust of dishonor.

Remember also when you support the republican ticket that you say in a very emphatic way that you believe the national republican office holders, which means a high tariff—so high that it raises, without cause, the price of every necessity of life so much that the laboring classes are oppressed for enough food and clothing to sustain them.

Official statements show that laborers cannot live on the amount for which they are enabled to purchase with their wages after laboring ten and more hours each day and yet no complaint is made the republicans tell us to purchase less and cheaper food in order that they may contribute to the pampered and intrusts—created by their votes. The democrats stand for equal rights to all and special privileges to none which enables the laboring class people to enjoy the fruits of their labor and to receive some of the profits which is thrown around them. Let us get what we work for, at least—a comfortable living; and let us learn to vote for that party which stands first of all for the rights of the people as against the rich.

Make up your mind early not only to vote the democratic ticket but also to make your friend and neighbor vote with you in doing so and help to assist in establishing your own rights and the rights of your fellowman.

HALL'S SCHOOL HOUSE.

I come again asking for room in your paper to say a few words.

Sunday School at this place is quite full now.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Durbin and Mrs. Bunyon, of Fairview, were the guests of Mr. J. D. Sims Sunday.

The singing at Mr. Dock Owens last Saturday night was enjoyed by a large crowd.

There will be a debate at this place Friday night, May 20; hope there will be a large crowd out.

Miss Oda Mae Traywick spent Sunday with Miss Eula Roper.

Some are complaining about the damage the rain did Saturday last.

Guess I had better close as news is very scarce now.

Wishing The Press much success I remain the same old

"POLLYWOG."

COOPERS.

I failed to put in an appearance last week because of the scarcity of news.

Most of our people are grumbling about having so much rain. We had a very heavy rain on last Saturday, and on Sunday a severe rain storm just a little northwest of here. It did some damage up at Mr. Henry Harris' near Falaka blowing down pretty near all of his fine trees which surrounded his home and made it such a beautiful place. It also blew off the top of his barn, though nothing in the way of live stock was injured. It is but fair to presume that all who went down to Salem last Sunday to the annual May singing were drenched as the rain in that direction seemed to be especially heavy. However, I understand that they had a most enjoyable time. Mr. Henry Robinson was elected chairman and Messrs. S. M. Yates, Jr., Lee Robinson and W. W. Robinson were appointed as a committee of arrangements, and they performed their duties well goes without saying. The attendance was not so large as usual on account of the inclement weather but those who did brave the elements had a most enjoyable day.

The Sunday School session here was postponed last Sunday on account of the annual singing at Salem. Next Sunday we expect to hold a prolonged session and study the lesson for the past Sunday as well as the current lesson so that we will not miss the connection between the several incidents related in the life of Christ. We hope that a large attendance will be had at our next session as the Sunday School badly needs the encouragement of our people.

Baseball is fast coming to the front as the leading topic of conversation. It seems to have crowded politics from the arena and taken the prominent place. The boys here are not quite in form yet to play but they are fast rounding into shape and will soon be ready to entertain any team that hibernates in this section.

We shall miss our superb second baseman this year. Mr. Ed Headley who formerly played the sack for us is now connected with the Sylacauga team and is doubtless making a rep. for himself there. His team work and his batting always proved one of the interesting features of the games here.

Mr. T. J. Eiland of this place went up to Clanton on Saturday last on business connected with his firm.

Hon. S. M. Adams and E. H. Adams have returned from Tampa and other Florida points after a very pleasant visit.

EVERGREEN ETCHINGS.

Well here I come knocking again; please open the door for me.

The farmers are getting "kinder blue" as they think they have been having too much rain, but let us all hope that it will work out for the best.

There was a real good crowd at preaching last Sunday; Rev. R. F. Yerga delivered a most excellent sermon of Sunday School Work.

Miss Della Williams, one of our most enthusiastic Sunday School workers, has quite a curiosity in the chicken line. It is a healthy chicken with four well developed legs. Quite a rarity in these parts, and one calculated to make the mouth of the average Methodist preacher water.

Our Invincible Literary Society met last Saturday aftrnoon with Miss Della Williams and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent. Our greatest problem is in persuading the members to attend the meetings. We have quite a number of members but for some reason the attendance is small compared with the membership. Can some one suggest a plan by which we can induce them to attend.

Miss Maggie Wood, who has been attending school the past session at Highland Home School, has returned for the vacation. We are certainly glad to welcome her.

Well the Comet has passed over and old Mother Earth is still here and doing business at the same old stand in the same old-fashioned way much to the surprise of many of the citizens.

Little Jesse Duffey happened to quite a serious accident on last Monday. He fell and broke his arm just above the wrist, but the little fellow is standing the pain heroically and is doing nicely.

Evergreen was certainly well represented in so far as numbers are concerned at the Sundayy School Convention at Mountain Creek; in fact there was such a large representation at Mountain Creek that we had a very small attendance at our own Sunday School. Though, perhaps more was gained by attendance upon the convention than would have been done had they remained at home.

NOTES FROM JEMISON.

One of the most delightful informal occasions of the season was the entertainment given by Miss Mattie Patton on Friday evening in honor of Miss Aline Robertson, of Fayette, the house guest of Misses Lessie and Annie Reynolds.

The rooms weer tastefully decorated with ferns and cut-flowers carrying out the color scheme of green and white.

After being received by Mrs. J. H. Patton, Jr., the guests were ushered into the reception hall, where Mrs. Harry B. McGahey presided over the punch bowl. Among the many pleasant things the hostess had planned for entertaining her guests was a floral contest.

The prize was won by Mr. Grady Reynolds, who presented it to the honoree, Miss Robertson.

During the course of the evening a salad course was served followed by ices. Quite a number were invited to meet Miss Robinson. Among out of town guests were Misses Winnie and Willie Reynolds, of Clanton; Mrs. H. B. McGahey, of Tuscaloosa; Messrs. Grady and Claud Reynolds, Drs. Gowan and Samuel Johnson, of Clanton; Mr. Lee Cross, of Birmingham.

Mr. E. B. Langston and J. A. Sims have returned from a pleasure trip to Florida.

Mr. J. W. Lowery and family, of Pessumer, are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lowery.

Miss Mattie Hand, Miss Lizzie Moorer and Miss Rose Adams are in Washington attending the World's S. S. Convention.

Editor Press—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the S. S. Convention held at Cane Creek. The house called to order by Pres. N. J. Calloway, first roll called. Senior Sunday School were represented of which six are Evergreen. Next was an address by Dr. Horn which was carefully arranged and effectively delivered. Then an excellent sermon by Rev. T. J. Deason.

Then dinner in great quantities was served and enjoyed by all. Then Judge L. H. Reynolds made an interesting and very helpful speech on S. S. Helps. Then Prof. T. E. Williams dealt justly with the discussion of the Teachers' Training Course.

Then Bro. J. W. Murphy made a brief but inspiring speech on "A S. S. Vision."

Then we were delightfully entertained by Prof. R. A. Smith on "Relation of S. S. to Church Work."

This was a good convention.

We heartily appreciate the kindness and hospitality rendered the convention by Cane Creek community.

Next convention will be held with Samaria church.

Respectfully,
J. HARVEY WILLIAMS,
Secretary.

A NEW RULE MADE NECESSARY

Some of the piano contestants are making it rather hard on the editor. We do not believe they understand the tremendous amount of work involved in keeping the contest free of entanglements otherwise they would comply with the requests heretofore made. Of course each particular one thinks that so far as he or she is concerned there will be no trouble and no extra trouble, but that is just where the extra trouble and the extra worry comes in.

The contest was inaugurated primarily to increase the circulation of the paper; everything that tends to retard the orderly progress of the contest in a hinderance to the paper and perverts the very object had in view when the contest was started. Some of those who are holding tickets have secured them from merchants and not one iota of effort has been expended to help the paper along, this, of course, is perfectly satisfactory to the contestant, but they are compelling us to issue additional rules that will prove a fearful hardship upon us, an unwarranted expense and at least four hours additional labor each week when by a simple compliance with the general rules of the contest all this could have been avoided.

Then too, it keeps us from offering an additional prize, for short time hustling. This is a hardship on those who have already voted their tickets and who are complying with the rules of the contest.

We asked last week that merchants put their names on the back of each ticket given out; we also asked that they refuse to loan their stamps to outsiders for the purpose of "endorsing" tickets. This week, again, something like ten thousand votes have been received that have no endorsement. In the fact of the fact that two merchants are complaining of having lost their tickets it seems unfair to contestants generally to count these votes when they are cast in direct violation of the rules of the contest; and then it is manifestly unfair to the party for whom they are cast to have them thrown out when that party is not in any way responsible for the oversight or neglect or whatever it may be called.

Now in order to get the matter finally and eternally straight we have incorporated another rule, which meets with the approval of the merchants, and should meet with the approval of every contestant.

BEGINNING on the FIRST OF JUNE we are going to date every ticket that leaves this office. They are going to bear the month in which they are delivered to the merchants. On the first of the following month ALL TICKETS held by merchants are to be redeemed and new tickets issued to them with the new month stamped upon them. We may have to redeem many thousands of tickets that cost us money, which will be a dead loss to us but there seems to be no other way out of it. After the last day of the month no merchant will have tickets bearing the stamp of the month [illegible] the TENTH DAY of the [illegible] following the date of the ticket on which it is stamped.

not month stamped on them, to be JUNE 15th or be forever barred.

Contestants may not see the wisdom or even the justice of these rules but that is because they can see but one phase of the contest.

We do not like to make the new rules; it costs us much in time and money and in worry but it has been forced upon us—unwillingly, too.

MISS MATTHEWS ENTERTAINS

The magnificent, spacious home of Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Matthews was a profusion of brilliancy and beauty on last Saturday evening when Miss Emmett Matthews lavishly entertained a number of young people.

Miss Meroney, one of Montevallo's most charming young ladies and Miss Hamburger, one of Montgomery's society favorites, were the honorees of the occasion.

A large number of visiting young ladies added much to the pleasure and unique pastime of the evening.

Pink and white, the color scheme, was carried out perfectly to the smallest detail. Huge bunches of pink and white roses, sweet peas and carnations decorated the entire lower floor which was so arranged as to be thrown into one vast assembly room.

The hospitable young hostess, with her usual affable manners, made the evening one of rare pleasure and genuine entertainment to each guest present.

In the dining room where the pot or nothing was again a marvel of perfection dainty, delectable pink and white refreshments were served.

Dr. Matthews' home is gloriously [illegible]

MRS. M'MORRIES' SCHOOL.

By an inadvertance The Press neglected to make mention of the "closing exercises" of Mrs. McMorries school, which took place last Friday.

These closing exercises were somewhat out of the ordinary but were nevertheless highly enjoyed by those fortunate enough to participate.

Instead of the usual formal exercises at the school Mrs. McMorries, with Mrs. E. M. Pinckard and several other special guests, took the tots under her tutelage to a shady nook and there spent the day in romping and merry making.

Nor was the inner man overlooked, for bountiful refreshments were served at the noon hour and right royally did the youngsters enjoy themselves around the festal board.

In the late afternoon they came home, tired from the pleasures of the day but not so weary that they were not ready to acclaim these "closing exercises" the most enjoyable of the year.

A Tame Gull.

Vincent S. Stevens, in the Christian Advocate, says that birds do not become tame nearly so readily as most other animals, and then relates the story of an exception which he noticed when living in the coast country.

Looking over my neighbor's fence one day, I was surprised to see on his door-step these queer companions, a beautiful white sea-gull and my neighbor's pet cat, sitting quietly together.

Becoming interested, I jumped the fence, and asked Jones about his feathered pet. He told me that some boys had shot the gull a few days before and broken its wing, and as they were passing his house he noticed the poor suffering thing and bought it. He bandaged the broken wing, and the gull, seeming to understand his kind intention, became quite tame and nestled its pretty head against his hand.

Jones entertained me by showing how the gull usually took its meals. Bringing a plate of oysters and a fork he called, "Goosey, goosey, goosey!" and the bird came running to him. Then he held out an oyster on the fork, and the gull seized it quickly with its yellow bill and ate it as demurely as if oysters had been served to it in this way all its days.

The oddest thing occurred one day when my neighbor gave the gull some small pieces of meat for dinner. He placed the meat on the ground near the gull, but the gull, espying a pan of water near by, took the meat piece by piece, and walking over, dropped it into the water. Then, true to its nature, it began fishing for its dinner.

It is my neighbor's intention, as soon as the gull's broken wing is healed, to take it back to its native ocean beach and leave it there to rejoin its wild companions.

Sunday School's Want Ad.

There is a church in Brooklyn that has adopted a novel scheme for enlarging its Sunday school. It advertises for boys and girls to come to it. In the shop windows in the neighborhood of the church one may see placards, such as are used for advertising entertainments of various kinds, that bear the legend:

"Wanted—Boys and girls to join our Sunday school." Below this are set forth the advantages that will come to the young folk who attend the classes.

GERMANY'S HARD LESSONS.

As Europe's Battleground She Has Been Ravaged Time and Again.

Occupying the greater portion of Central Europe, Germany is, in political respects, the most unfavorably located country in the world.

Nowhere protected by such natural boundaries as large rivers or high mountain ranges, which would block the way of enemies, but easily accessible and vulnerable on all sides, Germany has been, since remotest times the object of hostile assaults.

For a period of 400 years the German tribes were compelled to defend their independence from the Romans. Later came the horrible invasion of the Huns, the piracies by the Northmen, the frequent attacks by the Magyars, Mongols and Turks.

During the Thirty Years' War Germany served as the great battleground for Spanish, Swedish, Italian and Hungarian troops, who reduced the population from seventeen to four millions and made the country an almost uninhabitable desert. In Saxony, during the two years 1631 and 1632, 943,000 persons were killed or swept away by sickness.

In Wurtemberg, over 500,000 lost their lives, and eight cities, 45 towns, 65 churches and 36,000 houses were burned. The Palatinate, having at that time a population of 500,000, suffered a loss of 457,000, and in some parts of Thuringia more than 90 percent of the population perished.

The seventeenth and eighteenth centuries brought the frequent raids by the French, who left the ruins of hundreds of beautiful castles on the Rhine, Moselle and Neckar as lasting monuments of their visits.

The beginning of the nineteenth century saw the onslaught of that monstrous adventurer, Napoleon I., by whom Germany was humiliated as never before. The imperial mantle was torn into shreds and stamped into the dust. The German kingdoms and States were given by Napoleon as presents to his relatives and favorites, who made the German cities ring with their gay life. Would any nation, says Rudolf Cronan in McClure's, ignore the lessons taught by such an unhappy, terrible past?

Dickens and Pre-Raphaelites.

It is a little difficult nowadays to imagine the acridity with which any new artistic movement was opposed when Victoria was Queen of England. Charles Dickens, as I have elsewhere pointed out, called loudly for the immediate imprisonment of Millais and the other Pre-Raphaelites, including my grandfather, who was not a Pre-Raphaelite. Blasphemy was the charge alleged against them, just as if it was the charge alleged against the earliest upholders of Wagner's music in England. This may seem incredible; but I have in my possession three letters from three different members of the public addressed to my father, Dr. Francis Hueffer, a man of great erudition and force of character, who from the early '70s until his death was the musical critic of the Times. The writers stated that unless Dr. Hueffer abstained from upholding the blasphemous music of the future—and in each case the writer used the word blasphemous—he would be respectively stabbed, dashed in a horsepond and beaten to death by hired ruffians. Yet to-day I never go to a place of popular entertainment where the music is performed for the benefit of the poorest classes without hearing that the overture to "Tannhäuser" or some other work of Richard Wagner is played.—Ford Madox Hueffer in Harper's Weekly.

A BIT OF TREACHERY.

Carl Hagenbeck, the most eminent owner, exhibitor and trainer of wild animals in the world, has had many adventures in his half-century of experience. Some of them are described in a recent book, entitled "Beasts and Men." On more than one occasion an elephant has come uncomfortably near putting an end to Mr. Hagenbeck's career. One of the worst accidents happened at the end of the sixties. About that time he purchased a menagerie at Trieste, which included among the other beasts a female elephant, which stood about eight feet high. It seemed to be a thoroughly good-tempered animal, its only fault being that it occasionally had the sulks—"a not uncommon characteristic," comments Mr. Hagenbeck, "in all feminine creatures."

He soon made friends with the elephant, which he named Lissy, and he never passed its stall without giving it a handful of food. He was, therefore, he believed, justified in thinking he had quite won its heart, and as it never showed any signs of violence, it did not occur to Mr. Hagenbeck that he might be dealing with a grossly deceitful creature.

The elephant was learning a trick in which it had to swing its keeper into the air with its trunk, and then slowly set him upon the ground again. The word of command which was given to the beast when it had to perform this simple exhibition was:

"Lissy, apport!"

"One day," to continued in Mr. Hagenbeck's own words, "I found Lissy alone in her stable, the keeper being absent. It must have been a devil that made me feel a desire to be raised on high by her, after the manner of her affectionate treatment of her keeper. I stroked and fed her, and then taking hold of her trunk, called out the word of command:

"'Lissy, apport!'

"Then followed one of the most vilely treacherous acts of which I have ever heard. Lissy began to obey the order, but I soon felt that she was bent on mischief, for the embrace of her trunk was unpleasantly vigorous, and I soared high into the air.

"But I was not quietly deposited once more upon my feet.

"Instead of this, Lissy dashed me violently against the wooden barrier in front of her stall, and I went flying over into the menagerie.

"I lay almost senseless upon the ground until the old keeper, Philippe, appeared to help me home.

"Fortunately no bones were broken, but I was terribly battered and bruised, and for weeks could only hobble about with great pain."

AN UNLUCKY AERONAUT.

A little incident which, thanks to the delightful way in which it is told, is not wholly depressing, in spite of its tragic side, is quoted by Alfred E. Pease from a letter of his Quaker great-grandfather, Edward Pease. As an illustration of the old gentleman's caution of expression and description, as well as his sensitiveness as regards responsibility, the extract is worth preserving. It deals with a balloon ascension.

It is to ascend from my small field next to my garden, so that you could have seen it very nicely, and the gentleman who goes up with it.

I did not much like to let him have my field for the purpose, and told him I must have time to consider of it, before I could give him leave, as he might fall down and break his neck, and then I should be ready to consider some of the blame would rest on me. He said he had been up one hundred and fourteen times, and did not fear.

I wished him to look for another place, and would give him half a sovereign to have nothing to do with it. As he could pitch no other spot, and finding it would be a great disappointment to him and the townspeople, I reluctantly gave him leave, telling him I would not take any pay for the use of the field, and should he be killed by falling from a very great height, as a gentleman at Newcastle once did, I would be clear of it.

The gentleman I have just named was to hold down the balloon until it was ready to be let off, and being busy cracking nuts, he tied the string round his arm, so when it went up he was entangled in the string, and when so high as to be almost out of sight his arm got loose, and he dropped down, feet foremost, into a garden, but fell with so much force he sunk to the knees in the earth and was quite dead.

THE SPIRIT OF ADVENTURE.

An American woman, who travels much abroad tells this story of an elderly gentlewoman who could scarcely have qualified for membership in Mr. Clement Shorter's proposed "Long Sixteen Sisterhood." "We met her," says the lady, "at a pension in Missouri, where she was nominally chaperoning her two nieces, energetic, pervert American girls who were determined to see everything. [illegible] the dreary pension parlor, reading several-weeks-old papers from home. She never went out alone, for the narrow, crooked streets confused her hopelessly, and she was in constant terror of getting lost.

"Several times we persuaded her to go with us; but she was a sensitive little old lady, afraid of troubling people, and worried so constantly lest she might be a burden to us, that she was hardly able to enjoy the trips. So we reluctantly left her to her own devices, and went to Fiesole for a few days.

"When we returned to Florence, the first person we met at the door of the pension was the little old lady. She had evidently just come in, for her outdoor things were still on, and there was a rosy color in her cheeks. She greeted us warmly; and when I asked her in great surprise if she had been out alone, she drew me over to a corner of the hall and answered happily, while she fumbled for something in her bag:

"'Yes, my dear, every day since you have been gone I have taken a walk all by myself.' Then, taking a huge piece of white chalk from her bag, she held it up triumphantly.

"'See,' she whispered, proudly. 'I make a little white cross with this on every third house, so I can go all around alone and find my way back quite easily.'"

A MYSTERY SOLVED.

A new kind of excitement to which dwellers in the country are henceforth likely to be subjected is set forth somewhat amusingly in the Baltimore Herald. The energetic editor of the Gungawamp Advocate was rudely awakened from his afternoon slumber in his office chair by a violent ringing of the telephone bell.

At first he thought it was the jingling of silver coin, and a smile played over his sunken features, but when he realized what it really was he sprang to his feet.

"Hello!" he shouted, and seized a pad and pencil.

"Hello!" came the answer. "Is this the Advocate office?"

"Yes. What do you want?"

"Well, say, there has been a murder committed out here on my farm, and I want to have you come right out and write it up."

"A murder! What makes you think so?"

"Well, I just found a hat, a pair of spectacles and a set of false teeth down in my south medder and there ain't another blessed thing in sight anywhere. Oh, it's murder, all right."

"Have you run down all the clues?"

"Yes. Ain't even a footprint in the grass."

The editor had jumped into his shoes and coat, and was giving directions to his office boy, when the bell rang a second time.

"Hello!" he shouted, nervously.

"Hello!" came the answer. "You needn't come out. An air-ship feller has just come in, and says he dropped 'em."

A HUMILIATED MONKEY.

The leading male of a troup of monkeys is the patriarch, commander-in-chief and effective fighting force. The natives of India call him Maharaja—and properly so, for he is the type of savage despotism. He uses his large canine teeth to maintain his power and to secure the lion's share of everything, and is easily moved to a paroxysm of rage. But the tyrant has his tragedies, one of which is described by Mr. J. L. Kipling, in his "Man and Beast in India."

One morning there came a monkey chieftain, weak and limping, having evidently been worsted in a severe fight with another of his own kind. One hand hung powerless, his face and eyes bore terrible traces of battle, and he hirpled slowly along with a pathetic air of suffering, supporting himself on the shoulder of a female—a wife, the only member of his clan that had remained faithful to him after his defeat.

We threw them bread and raisins, and the wounded warrior carefully stowed the greater part away in his cheek-pouch. The faithful wife, seeing her opportunity, holding fast his one sound hand and opening his mouth, deftly scooped out the store of raisins.

Then she sat and ate them very calmly at a safe distance, while he mowed and chattered in impotent rage.

He knew that without her help he could not reach home, and was fain to wait with what patience he might till the raisins were finished. This was probably her first chance of disobedience or of self-assertion in her whole life, and I am afraid she thoroughly enjoyed it. She led him away at last—possibly to teach him more salutary lessons of this sort.

The Most Dangerous Cargo.

Lime is said to be the most dangerous cargo with which a vessel may be intrusted, for when it catches fire, which it not infrequently does, despite the greatest precautions against the admission of water into the hold, it is practically impossible to extinguish it. The only method possessing any value whatever in this respect is to stop every crack of the hold with wood so that no air may reach the lime. But even then it will [illegible] this device which will burn for [illegible] and the vessel at last [illegible]

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. E. F. SANDERSON.

Theme: God's Redemptive Power.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Edward F. Sanderson, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, preached Sunday morning on "The Redemptive Power of God." He took his text from Nehemiah 9:27: "In the time of their trouble, when they cried unto Thee, Thou heardest from heaven, and according to Thy manifold mercies Thou gavest them saviours." Mr. Sanderson said:

The Jews have returned from captivity; they have drained the bitter cup of national degredation; their pride of race has been brutally and shamelessly trampled upon; they have seen all that they held most holy desecrated and despoiled; but an unconquerable faith still flames within them—the faith that God will give saviours to His people. Shorn of all its narrowness and its partialisms, it is the simple faith of mankind in the redemptive power of God.

When we speak of that power we are dealing with the mightiest principle in the universe. If we had but eyes to see it, it is evidenced on every side—a power repairing, rebuilding, redeeming. It is manifested in a lower form when you strike your ax into the trunk of a tree and God sends saviors — those redemptive forces in the tree itself which set up the work of healing—and redeem the tree. You see it when the germs of disease enter the human system and God sends as saviors the lencocytes —those redemptive workers in the blood who marshal their forces like the knights of the Crusades, to drive out the despoilers of the human body, and redeem it from disease. There are redemptive forces in every living creature, reclaiming the life from destruction and decay.

I can believe that when this planet was all aflame in fervent heat, in those days when the morning stars first sang together, that even then there was a picture in the divine mind of what this round globe should some day be, a garden of supernal beauty, with fair cities and peopled with a joyous multitude. I believe that that ideal will yet be realized and I believe that God's redemptive power is at work in myriad ways combating the forces which retard the coming of that ideal.

When hordes of rapacious insects would lay a continent waste and barren, God sends saviors, some form of life which preys upon the pest and redeems the vegetation. The process of redeeming this world from the forces of destruction is a never-ending process. In fact, but for the saviors in nature, the earth to-day would be one vast temple of desolation. Scientists understand this. They are analyzing these redemptive forces and bringing them to bear upon afflicted districts. Thus scientists become laborers together with God for the redemption of the earth.

Through man God is reclaiming the waste places of the earth. Through great irrigation systems and the drainage of vast areas of swamp land, the wilderness is being redeemed—God sends saviors. God is at work in the men in every land who are fighting famine and plague and poverty and disease, fighting every form of physical wretchedness and suffering. That redemptive force is increasing with every passing year. Everywhere men are belting their lives on to the redemptive energy of God to redeem humanity from the curse of an unfavorable environment and harsh and oppressive conditions. Never in the history of the world has there been such a stupendious manifestation of God's purpose to redeem the physical lot of man from everything which debases and retards and stultifies. The earth as the garden of God where man can grow healthy bodies and know something of the joy of living, is a dream; yes, but a dream that is coming true.

When we leave the plane of the physical realm and enter that of the moral and spiritual, we find the same great principle at work. Here the sphere of its operation is enlarged, for we are dealing with souls and eternity. Here, too, we strive to catch God's purpose for the race, for only then can we understand the play of His redemptive forces. We believe that God's purpose—the goal of the universe—is an empire of life, in which the Father is King and men are brothers united in the eternal quest of the true, the good and the beautiful. Hold that ideal and it will shine like a burnished lamp in your soul. Belief in that is the North Star of the Christian faith. We set the compass of human purpose by that conception of divine purpose. It gives unerring direction to our lives and corrects all our wayward plans. I believe that the omnipotence of God is moving the race of men toward that ideal. I believe that everything in our civilization which antagonizes that ideal must go.

I believe that the empire of selfishness must crumble and the empire of love supplant it. The man who lives for himself has the invincible purpose of the universe against him. I believe that since the days of primordial chaos God has been giving Himself for the attainment of this ideal. All the knowledge of the world has been the forthgiving of the mind of God, divinely perceived at first, misinterpreted, distorted, but seen with increasing clearness as the ages have passed. The moral attainments of the race reflect in the same imperfect way the eternal righteousness given out of the great heart of God. The spiritual life of man is just the "following the gleam" of the soul at the centre of the universe.

God is ever giving Himself to the world for the achievement of His ideal, but more than that; He is the unconquerable antagonist of every tendency which would divert the race from the goal which He has chosen. Every destructive force in the universe is opposed by the redemptive [illegible]

Why God should make a world in which His plan could be antagonized, in which forces could be generated which would work against His will, may seem mysterious, but it is possible that the only way by which He can achieve His ideal is along the road of conflict and struggle, of choice. I do not think of God as surprised by these antagonisms, amazed at the sin and error of mankind. Can you think of God as hindered by unexpected developments in His creation, by destructive and contrary forces and willful defiance? I believe that the God who made the world knew what was going to happen, knew the certainty of sin and prepared for it; made the power which redeems stronger than the power which damns.

There is no mistake about God's attitude toward sin. He has written His antagonism to it in laws which are like a flaming sword. He punishes, but He punishes to save. He has made the way of the transgressor hard—unspeakably hard—but He has lived that hard, rough way with redemptive forces which will never admit defeat; which will never leave Him nor forsake you. I believe in a divine determination in which God has willed the achievement of His ideal despite every obstacle, and I believe that He will have His way.

It is a noble and honoring faith which has an unshaken confidence in the redemptive power of God, which believes that the love of God is stronger than sin and will ultimately triumph, which trusts that somehow, somewhere, some time, God's purpose shall be fulfilled in every life. The heart, The God who made the world is at the helm. He is responsible for His creation and He will carry it through. "I have made and I will bear; yea, I will carry and will deliver," saith the Lord. Oh, the littleness of man's faith! Is it fear that the hand of the Lord be shortened that it cannot save.

There has never been a moment in the life of man when the redeeming power of God was not active in the world. But it was only dimly and imperfectly understood until the fullness of time God gave the world a Saviour from whom there shone in deathless radiance His redemptive purpose. Jesus showed us the goal of the race—the Empire of Love. He gave His life daily to the realization of that kingdom. He resisted even unto death every force which warred against that ideal. He showed unmistakably what God meant for the universe; that He meant good, that His redemptive forces were round about mankind. Jesus evidenced indisputably in His life and death what God is doing. Men had cried out, what is the purpose of living? What does all this work round amount to? And suddenly there flashed upon their view a purpose, a life, a death, which solved the whole riddle of the universe. Men looked at that life and death and whispered "God." Humanity's best and highest gives us the clearest interpretation of God. God is fully revealed by the best He has produced, and the best is Jesus. So we look upon Jesus as the supreme revelation of the Father's heart. We see God's purpose to redeem the race shining through the life and death of the Master. So we know what kind of a God is at the helm. With Paul we see that the God made known to us the mystery of His will. We can no longer doubt His purpose or His intention. God will is to save, redeem, to consummate His divine ideal, and He is working Himself in mankind for man.

The man who wants to rise has the heart of the universe with him. The man who sins has the redeeming power of the infinite Father against him. What Jesus showed forth is our duty to show forth—the redemptive power of God. No declaration of yours that Christ died for your sins and you have accepted the sacrifice will save you. You must become a channel for God's redemptive power. You, too, must become a saviour, a redeemer. You must catch the vision of the Empire of Love and go on warring against every force which would defeat its coming. You must die to selfishness and live in the Kingdom of Heaven. Be a redemptive force in the world, and you will be most like the Master, and you will demonstrate anew that God sends saviours to the world.

Christ Would Make It Work.

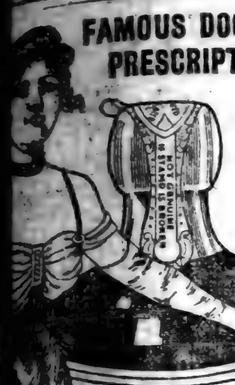
It was at a Swiss hotel. Several Englishmen were discussing questions of mutual interest. One of them was a brilliant Oxford graduate and a servant of the Government.

"This brotherhood of man," said this one, "is a beautiful ideal. In my own young days I accepted it frankly, and believed in treating every man as an equal. But experience of the world has shaken that belief, and to-day, though I still admire the beauty of the ideal, I hold it utterly impracticable."

Some one, in reply, mentioned the name of Christ.

"Ah!" broke in the first speaker, "if you bring Christ in, that makes a difference. If we live by His teaching, I quite agree it would be possible."

Sweet Out of Bitter.



Consider that the bees, which make their honey, do live with a bitter provision; and that we, who, in a manner, can never perform our duties of greater meekness and patience, nor better compose the honey of the virtus, than while we eat the bread of bitterness and live among afflictions.

And as the honey which is gathered from thyme (a little bitter herb) is the best of all; so the virtue which is exercised in the bitterness of sorrow and most abject tribulations is the most excellent of all.—Dr. Salmon.

The Present and the Future.

Never give way to melancholy. Nothing encroaches more. Fight against it vigorously. One good remedy is to take short views of things. Are you happy now? Are you likely to remain so till this evening, this month, or next year? Then enjoy present happiness by anticipating misery which may never come. Or you may never live to see it. Or every substantial grief has many shadows, most of them imaginary.—Sidney Smith.

AMERICAN DOLLS NOW.

Heads That Are Tough and Faces That Are Lifelike.

China dolls were once owned by all children, as such dolls are still by many. Then there were dolls with heads made of a mixture of plaster and papier mache and dolls with wax heads, and then again others were had heads such as are called, for short, bisque, meaning biscuit, signifying that they were, like china, of a hard material, but baked, unglazed. Both heads of these various materials are still made and still sold in great numbers everywhere, except that not so many wax dolls are now sold in this country, for the reason that they don't do well here on account of variations in the temperature.

All these various dolls—the china doll that broke or chipped easily and the papier mache doll that might have glued pieces knocked out of it and the wax doll whose nose was easily melted and the hardier bisque doll—were made in Europe and the great majority in Germany, from which country in fact the bulk of the world's dolls still comes. Now, however, there is made in this country, with its head of a material taking a name somewhat resembling that of a biscuit head, an American doll that in appearance compares most favorably with any imported, while there is also claimed for the American doll the merit of indestructibility. You can break this doll without breaking it.

The great majority of the world's dolls are still made with the traditional doll's face, but in Europe lately they have taken to making what they call character dolls, with faces true to type, and they have been making for some other dolls' heads with lifelike faces instead of dolls' faces. Of the dolls produced in this country there are made of the doll face type, for which there is still a demand that is universal, but there are now made the many character dolls, as Eskimos, Indians, Dutch boys and so on, the faces of their several types, and there are now produced here in dolls that are just dolls many that are made with most natural, lifelike faces, the heads in numerous instances having been modelled after living children. Among American dolls of this type you find joyous, laughing babies and smiling older children so lifelike in appearance that they are a pleasure to look upon.

These American dolls are produced in many sizes and styles and in great variety of attire, and they are finding a ready market.—Sun.

Mission of the Tsetse Fly.

In the Evening Post there was an extract from E. M. Newman's story of his tramp through Uganda, printed in World's Work, in which he describes pathetically the dreadful ravages of the sleeping sickness, caused by the bite of the tsetse fly. While the story is unquestionably a harrowing one to the lay mind, Mr. Newman will cheer up when he learns that a Chicago priest has declared that "the purpose of creation is to raise a crop of souls for heaven," and the tsetse fly is, therefore, one of the greatest and most worthy instruments in bringing about the will of Providence.—F. L. O., in the Evening Post.

Pensions For Life Savers.

Captain S. I. Kimball of Maine, general superintendent of the life saving service, will make a strong effort to secure legislation providing for the retirement of members of the service for age on part pay. Captain Kimball says the contentment of men in the service has increased considerably since the passage of a bill two years ago which slightly raised their pay and provided for the allowance of one ration a day and the payment of two years' salary for disability. The one thing more that is necessary to improve the service and fully recruit the ranks, in the opinion of Captain Kimball, is the authorization of a retired list, on which worthy surfmen and keepers who have grown old or been disabled in the service can be pensioned.—Lewiston Journal.

TERRIBLE PICTURE OF SUFFERING

Clinton, Ky.—"I was a sufferer for six years from female troubles. I could not eat and could not stand on my feet without suffering great pain.

"I tried three of the best doctors in the State of Kentucky and they said I was in a critical condition and going down hill.

"I had lost all hope of ever being better. I was so weak I had to be helped up and down. I had neuralgia, dragging sensations and such awful hurting, low down in my right side, I could hardly bear it.

"After using Cardui, for one week, I found I was getting better, so I continued to take it and in four months time I felt better than I had in six years.

"I advise all suffering women to take Cardui. I got more benefit from $3 worth of Cardui than from $100 worth of doctors' medicines."

The only way you can get the benefit of the genuine Cardui herbs, is by buying a bottle of Cardui at your druggist's. He does not keep the crude drug, as it is not in the pharmacopoeia.

Fifty years' of proof of its merit, in actual practice, has convinced us, and those who have tested it, of the value of Cardui in female weakness and disease.

JEWS AND MIXED MARRIAGES.

Rabbis Oppose—But What About an Extra 150,000 Jewish Men?

The Jewish rabbis who participated in the recent Jewish conference in this city had a good deal to say on the subject of mixed marriages. To the Jew a "mixed marriage" means a union between a Jew and a "non-Jew."

Apparently without exception the rabbis oppose such marriages; but the American Hebrew, while not advocating the mixed marriage, presents some interesting facts which have a bearing on the question.

"Between 1884 and 1905," says this authority, "342,000 Jewish men arrived in this country, as compared with 220,000 Jewish women, an excess of 120,000 men over women. The same proportion has doubtless prevailed in the immigration of the last four years, so that it is almost certain that there is an excess of 150,000 men in the Jewish population of the nite Ud States.

"Whom are these to marry? That is a practical aspect of the problem of intermarriage whi e will press itself more and more on attention as time goes on. There are several obvious conclusions to be drawn from this somewhat startling fact. Jewish girls ought to find little trouble in obtaining suitable spouces; they can pick and choose. If the excess of men is not to be lost to Judaism steps must be taken before long to render systematic the proselytizing of their wives and their training in the Jewish law and custom."

If a man is too lazy to think for himself he should get married.

Staten Island's Buried Stumps.

Every once in a while, after storms tear off sections of the Staten Island meadows, great stumps and roots of ancient trees are uncovered. These roots are five or six feet underneath the meadows, and root out into the post-glacial clay and silt, so may be a matter of thousands of years old, or may hark back to the time when Staten Island was a bank of the Hudson, for the valley of the Hudson extends out to sea eighty miles, where it drops sheer into the Atlantic basin.—New York Press.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical, forest plants. The Purpose of Life.

Slowly, through all the universe, that temple of God is being built. Wherever, in any world, a soul, by free-willed obedience, catches the fire of God's likeness, it is set into the growing walls, a living stone. When, in your hard fight, in your tiresome drudgery, or in your terrible temptation, you catch the purpose of your being, and give yourself to God, and so give Him the chance to give Himself to you, your life, a living stone, is taken up and set into that growing wall. Wherever souls are being tried and ripened, in whatever commonplace and homely ways—there God is hewing out the pillars for his temple. Oh, if the stone can only have some vision of the temple of which it is to be a part forever, what patience must fill it as it feels the blows of the hammer, and knows that success for it is simply to let itself be wrought into what shape the Master wills.—Phillips Brooks.

Mrs. L. Wick, 287 Dewey Ave., Pittsfield, Mass., says: "I ran down in health until I only weighed 95 pounds. Finally a consultation of doctors was held. They decided I had a fibroid kidney and said it must be removed. I had the operation and came out of the hospital as sick as ever. At last it was my good fortune to begin using Doan's Kidney Pills. They strengthened the remaining kidney and increased my weight to 121 pounds. I have no more trouble."

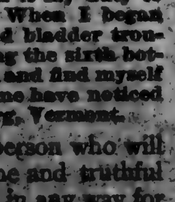
Iron.

Pure iron is only a laboratory preparation. Cast iron, the most generally useful variety, contains about five per cent of impurities, and the curious thing is that it owes its special value to the presence of these. Pure iron can be shaved with a pocket knife; impure iron can be made almost as hard as steel.

Answer This Question

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



Fitchville, Ohio.—"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Irasburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, Irasburg, Vermont.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

What more proof can any one ask?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine.

Mrs. J. W. Stewart of Birmingham, formerly manager of the Orphans' Home at Evergreen, has been in the city for the past few days the guest of Prof. and Mrs. W. W. Monroe.

Walking down the street the other day The Press man overtook a coal black negro man who said "Dhat man Wiley Young sho' got what was comin' to him." When asked if he though the verdict was just, he replied, "Yes, sir, and more'n just; hit was merciful." Upon inquiry it was found that the negro was a highly esteemed negro in the Maplesville section and it goes to show that even the respectable darkies are anxious that the dignity of the law be sustained. His name was Hicks, and we'd be willing to bet a dried apple that Hicks owns property of his own and is prospering.

The time to buy household furnishings is when Carter, the Furniture man, is selling below cost. That's the time to get those kitchen utensils your good wife has been wanting so long. tf

See Miss Minnie Muse for turbans, caps, collars, belts and all kinds of fancy articles. Her line is complete and her prices right.

He has hoped to give our readers this week the charge of Judge Pearson to the jury in the Maplesville murder case, but the matter miscued in some way. The vote in the piano contest changes complexion somewhat this week. One of the old-time leaders has regained her position and proposes to hold it for some time. Those who are longing for the first column had better look to their laurels.

Next week, however, things may change again, for The Press thinks that at last it has fell upon a scheme to make the "holdovers" come out in the open.

CATTS IN DEATH WITH HIGHWAYMAN

Officer Almost Forfeits the Discharge of Duty.

day afternoon a message d over the "country" that Sheriff Catts had prisoner to escape and dogs to be sent to him he information was but it was sufficient to make Smitherman "get a move on ten minutes after the phone the dogs were on Southwest Chilton. n the case came out soon al of Sheriff Catts. during Saturday he had ssage that there was a gro man down at Jack- camp, who was ruling n iron hand; he desi- go into the home of he could overpower and iver what cash they had did he confine his ef- homes of the camp- ers, he met them on the highways and demanded a surrender of all the cash on hand.

When most men would have been at home enjoying the comforts and pleasures of home like Sheriff Catts set out upon a mission of duty.

Arriving at the scene of the rob- heries he located his man, who, gloating over his powerful physique and satisfied with the amount of his ill-gotten gains, had proceeded to "tank" up on Saturday night.

The condition of the robber made his capture somewhat easy and in less time than it takes to tell it Sheriff Catts had the bracelets, sanctioned by the law, upon the arms of the highwayman.

Off they started for the county jail, the negro contemplating a long season of rest from his nefarious labors and the sheriff thinking of the hanging soon to take place in which he is to act as second person dramatis.

At a certain turn in the road the negro requested that he be relieved of the handcuffs for a few moments, and to this request the officer humanely consented. When in the act of readjusting the cuffs, the burly negro seized Sheriff Catts around the waist and began to squeeze as if he were a bear. The sheriff squirmed and struggled but he was almost powerless in the grasp of the giant negro. Finally, having weakened the sheriff by his squeezing process and the fearful struggle that was taking place the negro managed to get possession of the pistol which Mr. Catts carried in his hip pocket. Then he announced, with a blood-curdling oath, that he proposed to kill "the damned white man as the white folks were doing all they could against the nigger, anyhow." Quick as a flash Sheriff Catts grasped the barrel of the pistol and thrust it from him so that had it been discharged the bullet would have missed its mark. For some minutes the struggle continued in the quiet of the woods—none near except the two combatants and one of them, weakened by the fearful struggle.

Just as Mr. Catts felt that his strength was fast ebbing away and that death at the hands of a desperate negro criminal awaited him a pattering of horse's feet were heard up the road. Then it was that the negro desisted from his work of death and began preparations for flight.

In a moment Mr. Jack Walker was upon the scene and hastening to the relief of Mr. Catts would have overpowered the negro, but fate was against the white man or luck on the side of the negro, for in the buggy with Mr. Walker was his wife and the mule which they were driving, seeing the desperate struggle on the public road, became frightened and started in a wild scamper down the road. Mr. Walker had, of course, to rush to the rescue of his wife. This gave the negro opportunity for escape and wrenching the pistol from Mr. Catts' hand he plunged down the embankment and into a nearby creek.

In addition to the handcuffs Mr. Catts had his negro securely tied with a rope and this was also attached to the sheriff's arm. In the encounter this rope had kept them well together, so when the negro started down the embankment he drug the sheriff along with him till striking a tree near the bank of the creek the rope parted and the negro was thrown violently into the water, while Sheriff Catts was knocked almost insensible by the contact with the tree.

When the dogs arrived they refused to take the trail and so the negro escaped.

Sheriff Catts was scarcely able to make it back to his home, so badly was he bruised by the negro. His hands are cut, his knee dislocated and his chest badly bruised. For two or three days he has been confined to his bed suffering from the effects of the encounter.

The negro is named WADE RAIFORD, and seems to be a terror in the section where he has been living. He is a powerful specimen of physical manhood, being something over six feet tall, and weighing about two hundred and ten pounds; young, active and insolent; he has rough, black features and is daring in his exploits.

Thus far the county has offered no reward for his capture, but that it should be done, and quickly, no one will doubt. That the highest executive officer of the county should have his life endangered by such a brute in human form and no reward offered for his capture—remembering that he is a three times violator of the law—seems somewhat strange.

A small reward offered for him would doubtless put him behind prison bars, where he will be safe for trial for highway robbery—a capital offense—for resisting an officer and for assault with intent to murder.

A DAY IN CLANTON.

Country Cousins and Town Nephews. A Mingling of Friends. A Day of Merrymaking.

Last week The Press promised to give out a scheme whereby we thought the material interests of Clanton and of Chilton County would be greatly advanced.

We stated that it would not smack of politics or of anything that could be looked upon as partisan; it is for the common good; for the good of Clanton and for the good of the citizens who reside in the rural districts; for the good of the old men and of the young girls; for the good of the little boys and the good of the housewives,—all, are included in the scheme.

There is no patent on the proposition; it can be changed to suit conditions and locations.

The editor was present at a similar entertainment given two or three years since by one of the smaller towns of the Black-belt and he can vouch for the enjoyment of the occasion and for the great benefit that accrued to the merchants of the town from a business point of view.

We clipped the article below from a Trade Journal some months ago and have reserved it for just such an occasion as this. We now give it to the people of Clanton, and of Chilton County, for what it is worth. Read it carefully and see what you think of the proposition.

Remember that though this particular entertainment took place in a far northwestern village it can be inaugurated and carried to a successful finish equally as well in a Southland town. It is up to the merchants and citizens as to what will be done.

Read carefully, reflect thoughtfully and decide what YOU are willing to do to help it along.

The article is headed:

WHAT A SMALL TOWN ACTUALLY DID.

Last August at the meeting of The Journal readers, J. H. Colvin, of Essex, Iowa, attended the meeting. He was one of the deeply interested attendants. Mr. Colvin visited Dexter with the other merchants attending the meeting. He went home and started something.

Essex is a small town—mighty small—but on March 2d of this year, the Commercial Club held a Market and Free Auction Day. A few wiseacres said that a small town could not make it go, but you ought to have seen how it did go.

By noon the town was pretty nearly crowded full and by the time the Free Auction began, well, it was more than full, there was not room for them. It was an ideal day, but the roads were in a very bad condition. This is proverbial of the average Iowa roads at this time of the year. The merchants had offered a number of prizes, for instance, one merchant offered a prize of a $4.00 rug to the lady with the longest name attending the doings. The lady who received the rug was Matilda Otelia Rosalia Hagglund. Another merchant gave a $4.50 set of knives and forks for the smallest married lady attending the sale; she weighed 101 3-4 pounds.

Another merchant gave a $4.00 pair of lace curtains to the one bringing in the largest number of eggs during the day. Another a pair of shoes to the heaviest woman; another $5.00 to the largest family of boys in town, there were three entries, each having six boys. The prize went to the first entry. A barber offered a prize to the seventh man getting shaved that day. Another a box of cigars to the man having the biggest feet. Another a suit of clothes cleaned and pressed to the heaviest man. He weighed 317 pounds. Another gave cigars to the tallest man, six feet and three and three-fourths inches. Another merchant gave a fine rocker to the farmer bringing in the heaviest ear of corn. It weighed one and three-fourths pounds.

Now, then, here is a prize that the merchants will be interested in. Don't forget, now, that Essex is a little town surrounded by a lot of other towns. One of the merchants offered a box of cigars to the man traveling the longest distance to attend the sale. The man who got the box of cigars drove twenty-five miles, and a lady drove twenty-four miles and received a second prize. Don't forget that we told you at the beginning of the article that the roads were in a very bad condition, but here were two people, one traveling twenty-five miles and the other twenty-four miles to visit a little town. Why? Because they were doing something.

Another merchant offered a large rug to the farmer bringing in the greatest value in [illegible] during the day.

[illegible] day was a howling success. Merchants were well pleased and you can just rest assured they are going to try it again some of these times.

Now having read it what do you think of it? Don't you, as a matter of fact, believe that Clanton needs something of the kind? That the citizens of the town owe something to the country people? Don't you believe that by showing them some little attention in a social way it will be of vast benefit to the town in a business way? Don't you believe that you will enjoy it yourself and help to smooth the wrinkles from another brow by assisting them to see for one day the bright side of life? But says one, the farmers have no money at this time of year and how will the merchants be benefitted by such an entertainment?

Great Scott, and Napoleon and Caesar and Wellington and Andy Jackson! is the only end of life the accumulation of dollars? Are all of the amenities of life t obe cast aside in this mad rush for coin? Is friendship and sociality to be cast to the dogs in the onward rush for the dollar of the realm?

But another will say, we already know the farmers and our country cousins and therefore this entertainment will be of small profit to us in acquaintance making.

Shut up! Don't talk that way or some one will find you out!

You may "know" the farmers in a mercantile way, friend; you may understand what he needs in meat and clothes and plow stocks, but do you after all, KNOW him? Have you ever met him in a social way and spent a day in pleasure seeking?

The merchants of Essex thought so too, but they soon learned better; the merchants of Eutaw thought they knew the farmers of Greene County as no one else knew them but it did not take half the day to discover that they were woefully ignorant on the one great subject of "knowing."

In the matter of driving a trade or clinching a bargain you may "know" them to perfection—in a business way you "know" them, but is this the one and only end of life? Is the pursuit of happiness—the real end—never to enter into the calculation of life's plan?

Putting it down on a purely business basis, however; depriving it of all that goes to make acquaintanceship enjoyable and taking away every element that goes to make life enjoyable—putting it on a strict business basis—the scheme of The Press as outlined in the above article will be found to work like a charm. It has worked to perfection in many other places, it will work well in CLANTON.

We have discussed it with a number of merchants and men of affairs; without a single exception they have given ti their unqaulified endorsement and stand ready to aid in its fulfillment.

The Alabama town of which we spoke in the beginning spent a few dollars in entertaining its country friends—the men who, after all, sustain the town—and they would not sell their investment for ten times what it cost them. Without so much as one dissenting voice it was pronounced the greatest investment that this town had ever made both from a business, as well as a social point of view.

It can be done in Clanton; the question is, WILL WE DO IT? There are many details to be worked out and it will require time, experience and patience to gather the tangled skein and make it a success BUT CLANTON CAN DO IT. In fact CLANTON CAN DO ANYTHING HER CITIZENS DETERMINE UPON.

The Press has no desire to be in the front ranks, we prefer to work among the lowly, hence, we are not putting this proposition forth as a booster for our paper but as a booster for CLANTON and CHILTON COUNTY.

If it proves a success—of course it will—The Press will get its share of the glory without having a leading part; if it succeeds at all—and of that there can be no doubt—The Press will be satisfied as that the suggestion came from it, and will be perfectly willing for the others to receive whatever of credit there may be in the accomplishment.

We [illegible] the merchants [illegible] for their co-operation [illegible] acceptance or rejection [illegible] CLANTON [illegible] CLANTON [illegible]

[illegible] serves to be. Bulk if you will, if you must, but don't KICK and KNOCK!

After you have read the article carefully give it your encouragement if you think it worthy.

Come to the Court House on next FRIDAY NIGHT at EIGHT o'clock and help put the machinery in motion.

There is much to be done if we are to succeed. Committees are to be appointed, a time selected, prizes arranged and lots of other things are to be undertaken, discussed, arranged and executed.

Come, give the town the benefit of your advice, your presence.

It will not cost one red cent and may be—will be—the means of bringing many shining dollars into your town.

There are tournament committees, hurdle committees, base-ball committees and other committees to be appointed—work for all and fun for everybody so do not fail to be at the COURT HOUSE tomorrow (Friday) night to assist in organization, to work and to win.

GENERAL NEWS.

A NEW PARTY ORGANIZED.

The organization of a socialists party is going on quietly in the county. Already several "locals" have been organized and others are to be instituted within a very short time.

Just what the object of the organization is or who is at the head of the movement is problematical, but be that as it may it means that there is going to be some lively old hustling in Chilton for the next few months.

STEAMBOAT CUT IN TWO

Eighteen Drowned in Lake Huron During a Fog.

The James B. Woods Crashes Into the Steel Freighter at Full Speed on Lake Huron.

Port Huron, Mich.—Eighteen persons drowned in Lake Huron when the big steel freighter, Frank H. Goodyear, of Cleveland, was run down in a heavy fog and sunk twenty-five miles off Pointe Aux Barques by the freighter James B. Wood, also of Cleveland. Only five persons on the Goodyear, one of them a woman, are known to have been saved.

The Wood arrived here with the five survivors. She had a six-foot hole punched in her bow and was listing badly. One of the survivors was Mrs. Emma Bassett.

The cook had just sounded the second call for breakfast on the Goodyear when the crash came, and many were in the mess room. All rushed on deck, and then the boat began to sink. Some jumped into the water and managed to get out of reach of the boat, which was fast filling.

Suddenly the Goodyear parted in the centre, and with a sound which could be heard above the whistling of the Wood, sank out of sight.

Captain Gibson, of the Wood, lowered the lifeboats and ordered the crew to make every effort to save the sailors of the sinking steamer.

Within a short time the yawl was brought alongside the Wood, and Captain Hemenger, Steward Frank Bassett, Mrs. Emma Bassett, Frank Mollick and George Grant were taken aboard, all exhausted by their exertions and the length of time they were in the water.

With his infant child in his arms Steward Bassett had almost reached safety in one of the lifeboats when one of the tumbling hatches snatched the baby from his arms. The little one fell into the lake and was drowned despite the frantic efforts of its father to recover it.

Mrs. Bassett, of Algonac, told the following story:

"I was in the cabin when I heard the whistles of both boats. I reached the deck just as the crash came and I grabbed a life preserver. In my excitement I could only get it over one arm, but I jumped over the raff. When I came up I saw some one clinging to a board a short distance away.

"I went down for the second time, and when I came up I found my son Frank was the man on the board. I called for help, but it seemed as though no one would hear me. Then I secured hold of the sinking vessel and managed to hang to a window sill. I shouted to Frank and asked him where his wife and baby were, but he replied that he feared they had gone down.

"I was on the verge of releasing my hold when I saw a small boat coming toward me. The next thing I knew I was aboard the Wood."

The steamer Frank H. Goodyear was owned by the Buffalo and Susquehanna Transportation Company, of Buffalo, but was operated by Mitchell & Co., of Cleveland. She was 436 feet over all, and of 2438 net tonnage. She was built in 1902 at Lorain, Ohio, and carried a crew of twenty-three men. Captain F. H. Homenger, of Bellevue, Ohio, was in charge.

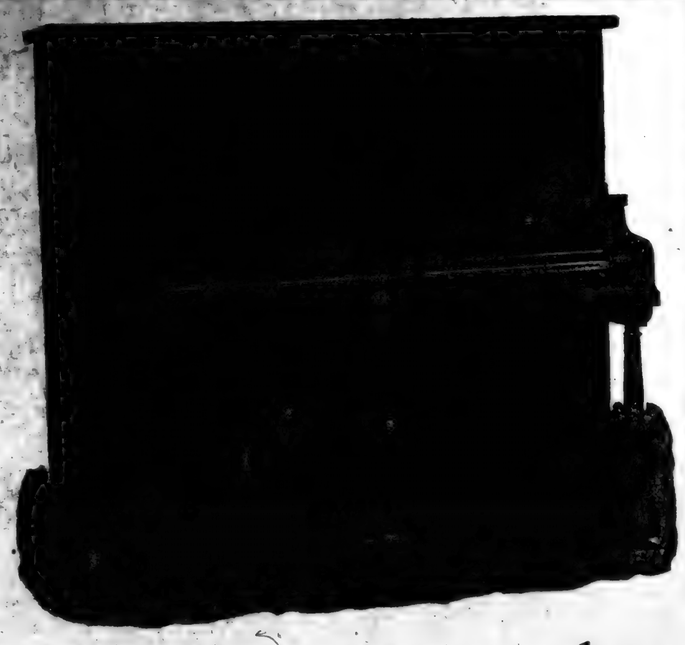
The James B. Wood, which is owned by the Gilchrist Transportation Company, is a steel steamer of 5744 net tonnage and 514 feet long.

DIES OF GAS POISONING.

Former Head of Carnegie Trust Company Victim of Experiment.

New York City.—Charles C. Dickinson, twice president of the Carnegie Trust Company, an office from which he finally retired last December, died in St. Luke's Hospital of pneumonia and kidney disease, but the exciting cause of his illness was the inhalation of gas in a laboratory demonstration.

Mr. Dickinson went to Scranton, Pa., to see the performance of a chemical experiment. His brother, Stanton C. Dickinson, treasurer of the Carnegie Trust Company, went to Scranton with him.



They went at the invitation of V. V. V. Hedgepeth, of Scranton, who was seeking to secure financial backing from Mr. Dickinson and his associates. Mr. Hedgepeth took Mr. Dickinson and his brother to the laboratory of a chemist named Lange, who proceeded to perform the experiment. Mr. Dickinson, in his interest to see the reaction, got too close to whatever substances were undergoing change and inhaled a large quantity of some metallic gas. He returned home sick and died.

RURAL CARRIERS ARE POORLY PAID.

Washington.—The average pay of rural free delivery carriers in the United States amounts to the munificent sum of $31.50 per month. This is the net earnings of the men who carry the mail over mountains and plains, in good weather and bad weather after supplying the equipment necessary for the performance of their duties. The figures are secured from reports made by carriers for the six months ending January 1, last. The net earnings of Georgia carriers for the six months amounted to $184.79, or an average per month of $30.79. ITALIAN LEADER GONE WITH MONEY.

Durham, Ga.—The deportation without trial by the state troops of the 28 striking Italian miners and the arrival here of negro miners to replace them, has ended the near riot which caused Governor Brown to order troops to the scene. There was no violence or attempted violence, but the mine officials say they were intimidated. The Italians say they simply held peaceable possession of the mines while trying to collect wages due they. J. W. English, Jr., says he paid the entire pay roll for the miners to their leader, Gurino. The miners reply that Gurino had had no authority to collect nor had English authority to pay anyone except themselves. Gurino is missing. With the deported miners were packed on the cars their wives and families and all other personal possessions. They were sent to Chattanooga and warned never to return to Georgia.

THE GUILLOTINE IS RESURRECTED.

Lucerne.—For the first time in 12 years the guillotine was used in Switzerland when Mathais Muff, a farmer, aged 35 years, was decapitated in Lucerne prison, in the presence of the local authorities and a number of doctors. Muff, on leaving his cell, took a long look at Mount Pilatus, which was covered with snow, and then firmly walked to the guillotine, which was worked by an amateur Rheinfelden. The official report states that the execution lasted 40 seconds. Muff welcomed death, for by putting his signature to a petition for pardon to the grand council the sentence would have been commuted to life imprisonment. Muff's lawyer waited until midday Sunday, the last hour for the signature. Muff stated that after killing four persons and making 15 orphans he did not wish to live. His wife's tears proved unavailing.

Kansas City, Mo.—A resolution was adopted at the annual convention of the Railway Mail Clerks' association of America appealing to Congress in the interest of a retiring scale of pay for railway mail clerks. The resolution urged that clerks be allowed to retire at 60 years of age or after 25 years of service and be allowed three-fourths of their former salary.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS A HAMMOND IDEA

Would Succeed Department of Interior—Senator Draws Bill President Will Study.

Washington, D. C. — John Hays Hammond, President Taft's closest friend in private life, suggests the formation of a Department of Public Works to succeed the Department of the Interior. The proposed department would be the most powerful in the Government. It would have absolute control of all of the Government's national resources, direct all of the Government's mammoth engineering works and absolutely control the conservation policy of the Government.

A United States Senator has indorsed Mr. Hammond's idea, and will write the bill, which the President will study during the summer at Beverly. The functions of the new department will be:

To direct the completion and be custodian of the Panama Canal after it has been opened to traffic.

To direct the reclamation of swamp lands and the irrigation of arid lands.

To protect the power sites on public waterways.

To administer the affairs of the Forestry Bureau.

To carry out the conservation policy of the Government.

To administer the area of public lands under a special land bureau to succeed the General Land Office.

To organize and maintain the proposed bureau of health which the President advocates for the conservation of the citizenship of the United States.

What disposition is to be made of the Patent Office has not been decided.

The proposed change in the system of government may be a matter of years. Its authors disclaim any connection of the Ballinger scandal with it. The change, if it is ever made, will probably come long after Mr. Ballinger has retired. It is not advocated as a means by which a substitute Cabinet officer can be chosen to supplant Mr. Ballinger.

One of the reasons urged for the new department is the Panama Canal. When that enterprise is completed it will have to be administered by business men. The War Department and the Navy Department will protect it, but when it comes to the exactions of ship's tolls and other business matters business men will be called upon to take charge.

Mr. Hammond said:

"I believe that a Department of Public Works, similar to that which is maintained by the English Government, would conduce to a more economical administration of the various interests of the United States. A department which would take over the control of the physical property of the Government, which would supervise and take care of the expenditures for buildings and other big improvements, such as the Panama Canal and other projects, would be the best business policy which could be adopted. The various bureaus and other organizations which now control these enterprises and this enormous wealth are, by reason of their variety and individuality, unable to conduct the fiscal affairs of the Government as advantageously and expeditiously as could a department which would be in direct touch and have absolute control."

PROVES ELECTRICAL FACTS.

Discovery of Professor Milliken, of Chicago University--Four Years of Research--Succeeds in Isolating an Individual Ion For Extended Observation.

Chicago.—After four years of investigation Professor Robert A. Milliken, of the physical department of the University of Chicago, announced that he had discovered the proof of facts in electricity taking rank with those in optical research which won the Nobel prize for Professor Albert A. Michelson, a fellow member of the faculty.

Professor Milliken gave out the results of his experiments before the Sigma XI Society of the university at the Quadrangle Club. He declared that work carried on by himself and Professor Harvey Fletcher prove theories long held, but until now not proven.

In summarising the results of his experiments Professor Milliken said:

"We have succeeded in isolating an individual ion, and holding it under observation for an indefinite length of time—an hour or more if desired.

"We have been able to give a tangible demonstration of the correctness of the view advanced many years ago that an electric charge is not a homogeneous something—a strain in the ether or an imponderable fluid—spread uniformly over the surface of the charged body, but that it has a definite granular structure; consists, in fact, of a definite number of specks or atoms of electricity, exactly alike, peppered over the surface of the charged body.

"We have been able to bring forward new, direct and most convincing evidence of the correctness of the kinetic theory of matter, for we have put only known directly that a molecule of air is in rapid motion, but we measured the order of magnitude of energy of agitation and find it to agree with the computations based upon the kinetic theory.

"In brief the method by which all these results have been obtained is as follows: We blow a cloud of fine oil or mercury drops by means of an atomizer, and introduce one of these drops through a pinhole into the space between the plates of a horizontal air condenser. The droplet there catches one or more of the ions which normally exist in air or which have been produced in the space between the plates by any of the usual ionizing agents, like radium or X-rays. The time of fall of this droplet through a measured distance is observed when no electrical field exists between the plates, then a field of strength between 2000 and 4000 volts per centimeter is thrown on and the time of rise of the droplet under the influence of this field through the same distance is again measured. This operation is repeated and the speeds checked an indefinite number of times or until the droplet catches a new ion, when its speed, under the influence of the field, instantly changes, though the speed under gravity remains constant. From the sign and magnitude of the change in speed the sign and exact value of the charge carried by a captured ion is determined. A sub-committee of the House Committee on Labor reported favorably a bill prohibiting the transportation in interstate commerce of goods made by convict labor.

Against Convict Labor.

There is a considerable demand for this legislation from States which do not permit the products of their own convicts to enter into competition with free labor, but which are powerless to prevent the admission of the products of convict labor from other States. It is believed that the full committee will promptly report the measure, although it is decidedly questionable if it can be brought before the House for a vote at this session.

Representative Tawney has succeeded in securing the adoption of a provision his committee has inserted in the sundry civil bill by which the sale of oleomargarine colored to resemble butter will be made a penal offense. It was supposed by the authors of the law which requires that revenue stamps be affixed to all oleomargarine that colored to resemble butter paying a much higher tax, that the statute made it a penal offense to sell oleomargarine colored as butter, but, according to the Internal Revenue Commissioner, Royal E. Cabell, the courts have so construed the law as to eliminate the criminality, and as a result the manufacturers of oleomargarine affix the necessary stamps and sell to the retailers uncolored oleomargarine, and these in turn color the product and sell it as butter, and the present law is inadequate to reach such violations of the spirit of the statute.

It is asserted by officials of the Forest Service that a state of considerable disorganization exists in that service, and that for practically three years the broader problems of conservation of the practical administration of the Forest Service. These men insist that abundant credit should be given to Gifford Pinchot as the pioneer in the forest conservation movement, but they intimate that Mr. Pinchot was more successful in the preliminary propaganda than in the more tedious and exacting work of executive administration, and that recently he had been so absorbed in the promotion of the general conservation movement that he had little time for the purely executive work which formerly engaged his attention. His subordinates, it is asserted, have resorted to the expedient of including vast areas of range lands in the forest reserves, deferring as long as possible the elimination of the land not suitable for forest purposes, and have sought to make a creditable financial showing by renting as sheep ranges the lands so included. It is asserted that sheep pasturage is fatal to reforestation, and that only an anxiety to offset extravagant methods of administration by enhanced pecuniary receipts could ever induce a genuine forester to admit sheep to the national forests.

The Treasury Department is going to wash the microbes from $1 silver certificates so that they can be restored to circulation and not destroyed as at present. The scheme is a product of the brain of Assistant Secretary Norton. He submitted the idea of washing the paper money to Director Ralph, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and later to a committee consisting of C. S. Pearce, of the division of loans; G. K. Leet, his private secretary, and Brandon Smith, the Department chemist. The committee found that about eighty per cent. of the paper money now destroyed can be saved by washing and put back into circulation after it is properly sterilized. Only silver certificates can be washed, because the ink in yellow backs and national bank notes will not permit of such an operation. The laundry machines will cost between $500 and $1000 each, and the Government may save through their use about $1,000,000 a year. One machine will be installed at each Sub-Treasury.

Will Save $1,000,000 a Year.

No information has been received on this side of the water to the effect that ex-President Roosevelt is looking for any outlet for his energies other than his editorial work, but there are a good many persons in Washington who would like to see him take hold of the long discussed but never attained National University proposition, of which they believe he could make a notable success. It is declared that abundant funds would be immediately forthcoming were Mr. Roosevelt to consent to become president of such an institution, in fact, it is known that two years ago Andrew Carnegie expressed a willingness to contribute $17,000,000 to the endowment of such an institution. It is appreciated that such a university would be opposed by some of the larger universities, such as Harvard, Yale, Columbia and Johns Hopkins, but there is a pride sentiment in favor of the establishment of such an institution

New Job For Roosevelt.

GOOD ROADS

Putting Them on Record.

The Alabama Good Roads Convention, in session at Montgomery, invited the candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor to declare themselves with respect to the movement for improved highways. The candidates appeared and all put themselves on record in favor of the measure proposed for bringing about a better road system.

The good roads advocates have done well in lining up the candidates and getting an expression. Those who are elected will be committed to improvement, and there will not be much chance of a misunderstanding. The plan would be a good one to pursue in the election of members of the Legislature. All legislators do not "stand hitched" after committing themselves, but some of them do, and it is well for the people who elect them to know their views on questions of public policy before they are elected.

The people of Alabama recently adopted a constitutional amendment providing that the excess money from the hire of State convicts be expended on the roads. Legislation will be required to put the amendment into effect, and it is desired that a State Good Roads Commission shall be created. With all the candidates for State officers pledged to help along the movement the prospect of securing the needed legislation is greatly enhanced.

It requires a lot of hard work to carry a good roads campaign to a successful finish, as we in Kentucky have reason to know. The Alabama people, however, seem to be going about it in the right way and with a determination that recognizes no chance of failure.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Spirit of the Times.

Colonel Sam Wilkes, of the Georgia Railroad, recently made an address on "Rapid Transit the Spirit of the Times." Reviewing the era of electricity, the coming of the automobile and the airship, Colonel Wilkes, concluding, said:

"Every county should get the most improved road machinery and build good roads throughout its entire confines, so that the greatest possible saving of time and labor in transportation would obtain. On such roads, a farmer can haul twice the number of bales of cotton or twice as much hay, corn of any farm product. He can hook his team up and carry a small or large load to town and return home in half the time and frequently he would carry small amounts of his products on good roads that it would not pay to carry over poor roads. Development is coming rapidly, and the county that does not get into the push will be badly behind the times.

"The age of advancement is now upon us. The earth, the sea, the air are all conquered by the progress or the times. Rapid transit is the spirit of the times. Gentlemen, I hope you will get into the game."

For Florida Good Roads.

Governor A. W. Gilchrist availed himself of a meeting of the Florida Press Association to further the work for good roads in the State. He cited returns from circular inquiries to the Circuit Court clerks of all the counties to show that there are now in the State 2130 miles of hard roads, 624 miles of graded roads and 300 miles of strawed roads, with a number of counties not reporting many miles of natural hard clayed roads, while four counties have recently voted an aggregate of $1,500,000 to be spent upon the improvement of their highways. He seemed to favor the attainment of a system of roads traversing the State, not through general taxation, as being unfair to counties that have already spent much in road-building, but by prolonging and uniting county roads under county auspices.

Street Signs in Concrete Curbs.

The suggestion has been made that now that concrete curbs are coming into such general use on city streets it might be a good plan to put the names of the streets in the top of the curbs. The letters should be sunk into the concrete just at the side of the crosswalk, and should be two or three inches in size. The expense would be infinitesimal, the sign would not be subject to breakage or removal by other means, and the public would have really ideal street signs.

A Novel Suggestion.

It has been suggested that the school boys of country districts be banded together to form junior good roads leagues. The originators of the idea point out that many country roads are patrolled daily by boys old enough to do much for the cause by removing stones from the roadway, keeping ditches and culverts open, reporting all serious defects, filling ruts and notifying the proper [illegible]

EDITORIAL.

We notice that some of the state papers are saying that since the State convention met after the primary it had no right to make a platform and expect it to be binding upon the candidates.

Perhaps not, but they did so nevertheless, and as good democrats let's get in behind that platform and those candidates.

Dallas County is trying the thripple plan of working roads and that she will succeed no one need doubt. She is employing her convicts on the roads, has voted a large bond issue for that purpose and has employed an expert road builder to supervise the work. That's wisdom in large chunks. Dallas will be enjoying the pleasures of good travelling when some of the other counties of the state will be floundering in the mud.

Clanton needs an up-to-date tinner, a bakery and a dairy. There is room for all three to prosper and grow rich.

Now that the water wagon has been cast aside how about concerted action on the part of the citizens of Clanton looking toward the securing of an up-to-date system of water works?

It will prove surprising to the average citizen at what a cheap cost the water works system could be installed.

To say nothing of the other benefits to accrue the reduction in insurance premiums would almost pay for the installation.

We call editorial attention to the article found elsewhere in this issue, headed, "What a Small Town Actually Did." We believe that if the thoughtful readers would give this subject a little attention not one of them would be absent from the Court House Friday night (tomorrow night) to assist in the organization of the movement. It is such enterprises as this which advertise a town and help it to grow great.

The organization of a new political party in Chilton will but make the political pot boil all the more. Every man is entitled to his own opinion and while we disagree with the movement now on foot we have no fault to find with the organizers because they do not agree with us.

Remember the meeting at the Court House Friday night—this means YOU!

Now that the official call for the convening of the new County Executive Committee has been made let every democrat in old Chilton get on his tip toes and be ready to rush forward at the order of those in command.

By working in harmony, with no growling and no criticism we will win a glorious victory in the November election.

There's no time like the present for working for the success of the ticket. If we sit idly by till the time of the election we will have but little energy for the task; keep everlastingly at it and when the day of the balloting arrives we will all be in trim for the fight.

Did you notice that The Press, the young paper, was the only one which gave any account of the school exercises? When you want the news look in The Press. Strange how some people thrive on so little.

The Press is informed that there is some discontent among a few of the piano contestants because we had to adopt a rule requiring the voting of all tickets within thirty days after they were received. We wish to say that it is not our desire to work a hardship upon any one. It is manifestly to our interests to please every one, but when we discover that certain arrangements are working a hardship upon and a detriment to the paper no one can blame us for making a new rule which will tend to correct the existing evil. The recent rule adopted cannot possibly hurt any contestant—if it was shown us that it would we would immediately rescind it. Under the old system it was a positive hardship upon the paper. We have endeavored to make this clear to the contestants, and we believe that most of them understand and appreciate our position in the matter.

Next week, perhaps, we will cite instances to prove our contention, which ought to be perfectly satisfactory to every one. In themeantime let it be understood that the rule recently promulgated is in effect.

The Press promised its readers a reproduction of Judge Pearson's charge to the Maplesville jury in this issue. We regret to say that the manuscript was received from the court reporter too late to get in this issue. It is a long document and highly interesting and will assuredly appear next week.

We have more than once called attention to the fact that unsigned communications will not be published.

This week we have received two or three which come under the ban. In one instance the letter is allowed to go into print because it is a news letter of a general character and we happen to know the writer.

Correspondents will please remember that a letter signed by a fictitious name is not the kind of signature required.

We want YOUR name. It will not be printed if you request that it be withheld, but we must know who signs the letter. Sign your own proper name and then if you wish us to use some familiar nom-de-plume we will gladly d oso—but always sign your name to your letters.

The water works! Now let every one get in line and help along the movement. A strong pull, a long pull and a pull altogether means that Clanton will land a new public utility that will make every heart glad.

CLANTON GETS A PLACE ON SUPREME COURT

Popular Past Sachem of Waxahatchie Tribe No. 9 Improved O. R. M. Given Important Place in Great Council of Alabama.

At the twenty-third Great Sun Session Improved O. R. M. held in Birmingham on the 25th and 25th of this month Past Sachem W. J. Armstrong of Waxahatchie No. 9 Hunting Grounds of Clanton was appointed a member of the Board of Appeals of the Great Council.

The chiefs and Brothers of the local Tribe have reason to feel proud of such distinguished honor being conferred on Mr. Armstrong. It certainly speaks well for him, especially as his Tribe is only four years old and he has been a member of the Great Council for only two years.

Mr. Armstrong is one of the most popular Past Sachems of Waxahatchie Tribe and his knowledge of the Laws of the Order and careful study of the manners and customs of the Tribes of the District especially qualifies him for the distinguished position and we predict that the wisdom of Great Sachem Hon. J. T. Letcher of Montgomery, Ala., will be demonstrated to the satisfaction of all parties concerned by his decisions on the Board.

We are giving today a piece of original poetry which we think deserves, and will receive, more than passing mention. It shows clearly that the composer has a poetic turn of mind, a deep innsight into human nature and a firm grasp upon the philosophy of life.

There is no doubt that the "telephone girl," if she desired, could turn things topsy-turvy in many a house-hold and make things extremely uncomfortable in a majority of the homes of the town in which she operates.

Men sometimes think lightly of the telephone girl not realizing the great wealth of family secrets she carries in her bosom and how sacredly she guards the honor of men, who themselves drag that honor in the dust.

But we will let the poetry and philosophy speak for itself.

The writer has requested that the name be with-held, otherwise we would be glad to give it:

THE TELEPHONE GIRL.

The telephone girl sits still in her chair
And listens to voices from everywhere.
She hears all the gossip, she hears all the news,
She knows who is happy and who has the bluss,
She knows all our sorrows, she knows all our joys,
She knows every girl who is chasing the boys.

She knows of our trouble. She knows of our strife,
She knows every man who talks mean to his wife.
She knows every time you are out with the boys,
She hears the excuse each fellow employs.
She knows every woman who has a dark past
She knows every man who is inclined to be fast.

If the telephone girl told half that she knows
It would turn our friends into bitterest foes.
She could sow a small wind that would soon be a gale;
Engulf us in trouble and land us in jail.
She could let go a story which gaining in force
Would cause half of your wives to sue for divorce.

She could get all our churches mixed up in a fight
And turn our days into sorrowing nights.
In fact she could keep all the town in a stew
If she would tell a tenth part of the things she knew.
Say, but doesn't it make your poor head whirl
When you think what you owe The Telephone Girl?

County Correspondence

MOUNT NEBO.

I would like very much to say a few words through the columns of your paper as I see so many nice letters from different parts of the dear old county.

The Sunday school at this place is progressing nicely under the skillful management of our faithful superintendent, Mr. J. D. Culp, who seems to be doing everything he can for the betterment of the Sunday schools generally.

The school did not thrive so well during the winter season when the weather was so unfavorable, but since spring has come the interest of the people seems to have been aroused along the line of Sunday school work and we hope to still enlarge the school and make it better and more interesting each and every Sunday.

The attendance last Sunday was quite small on account of the fact that so many of our young people attended the singing at Liberty Hill.

On last Sunday morning, Mr. O. Y. Sims and Miss Beulah Williams were happily married at the home of Mr. A. C. Sims. We hope the couple a long and happy life together. May God abundantly bless them in all their undertakings.

The farmers of this community are progressing nicely with their work. Almost all of them are through chopping cotton.

The crops are beginning to look like there will probably be something made this year since the sun has been shining so warm for the past few days. The prospects now are that with favorable seasons from this time on we will have abundant crops.

The Fairview boys are going to meet the Samaria Debating Society at Samaria on next Saturday night, June 4th, for the purpose of having a joint debate between the two societies. The subject for discussion is, "Resolved, That the United States, as a nation, shall decline as the nations of antiquity."

D. C. Culp and R. L. Popwell of Fairview, are to represent the negative side, while T. E. Williams and Mr. Sid Weldon are to represent the affirmative side.

We hope that there will be a large attendance; all are cordially invited to attend.

Will ring off for this time and come to see you again later. With best wishes for all.

A. S. S. BOY.

BILLINGSLEY BUBBLES.

Mrs. Dr. Downs has returned from a visit to friends and relatives in Birmingham.

Mr. John Clinton Foshee is spending a while with home folks after attending the session of the Normal School at Troy.

The ice cream supper given at the hall last week was a decided success; hope it will soon be repeated.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Apperson last week and left with them a handsome baby boy. Two hearts made glad.

Rev. Mr. Lewis filled his regular appointment at the Methodist church last Sunday morning.

Quite a number of Billingsley people attended the organization of a new Primitive Baptist church near Mother last Saturday and Sunday.

Chickens are getting ripe and Sunday school picnics are now in season; there should be some consolation to the young folks and to the old ones as well.

Will ring off for this time as news is rather scarce in this neighborhood.

Wishing The Press and its many readers much success, I am,

BLUE EYES.

THORSBY GLEANINGS.

Messrs. B. H., Gerald and M. J. Culp attended the Bankers' association at Birmingham May 20th and 21st.

Despite of the threatening weather on the 21st ult. quite a crowd showed up at Thorson's Park, where the Swedish Lutheran choir gave an ice cream social. Owing to the condition of the weather, the program, consisting of choir selections, solos, duets selections and declamations, was postponed until the following Sunday at which time they were very well rendered.

Mr. J. J. Richards left for Iowa on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Carl Langville and daughter, Miss Vivienne, spent last Tuesday in Birmingham.

Mr. F. Lucas was a passenger to Birmingham on Wednesday morning.

Mr. Carl Soberg, who has spent the past two years in Wisconsin, is here for a three weeks' visit.

Friday afternoon about 20 young people were delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Soberg. Delicious refreshments were served and the evening was spent in a very pleasing manner.

Messrs. J. F. Lucas and Charles Altman left Friday morning for Pittsburg and other Pennsylvania points.

Messrs. Carl Soberg, Charles Howard and Ernie Hanson were passengers to Calera Saturday evening.

Mr. Reuben Foss left Sunday morning for points in Iowa, Rock Island and Chicago.

Miss Naimi Turnquist has gone to Calera for an extended visit.

THORSBY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The District Sunday School convention was held at Thorsby on the fourth Sunday.

After Sunday school, at 9:30, the convention was called to order by singing. Then the president conducted devotional exercises by reading a selections from one of St. Paul's Epistles and leading in prayer.

He then made a brief, but most interesting talk upon Sunday school conditions within the district.

At 10:30 the roll of the several churches was called and every Sunday school within the district was represented except Macedonia, and each school reported as being in good working condition.

After these reports we heard several brief discussions on "The Most Encouraging Thing About Our Sunday School" by Dr. Horn, Mr. Norton Thomas and Prof. Crumpton and others.

At 11 o'clock we were delighted by a grand talk by E. W. Butler on "The Teachers' Training Class—How and Why?"

At 11:30 Rev. S. M. Adams delivered an excellent address after which all enjoyed a most bountiful dinner which was elegantly served and genuinely enjoyed by all present.

After dinner the choir entertained the assemblage for some minutes and then Prof. N. W. Henson made a broad and eloquent address on the organized Bible class; after him came Prof. Hunter, Mr. W. E. Thomas and others in a few remarks all of which were greatly enjoyed.

At 3 o'clock we were immensely entertained by Mrs. Norton on the subject of the "Cradle Roll, Curtained Corners and Other Primary Problems". She gave us many bright and helpful thoughts on the subject. A collection of $3.18 for the county work was taken.

After a few songs, superbly rendered, the convention adjourned.

We wish to extend many thanks to the good people of Thorsby for the kindness and hospitality rendered to the convention.

(MISS) ROBERTA COLLINS,
Secretary.

SAMARIA.

Please permit me through your columns to say a few words about our debating society.

We met last Saturday night, the program being arranged for a joint debate, and it was rendered nicely indeed.

Our literary society is progressing finely; our young people are taking a deep interest in the affairs of the society and we believe that it will prove a great blessing to them.

In addition to the fact that it cultivates their minds the young men are learning the art of public speaking and are devoting much of their time to study in preparation for the weekly debates in which they take part.

Nothing can so well polish the manners of a young man and make him feel at perfect ease in any community or among any people as the debating society.

We are taking every precaution to make the subjects for discussion such subjects as will require a certain amount of study and at the same time be of such practical importance as to permit the ordinary scholar to feel that he is not debarred from participation.

As your Mount Nebo correspondent has given you the program for the next meeting in full, which is to be a joint debate between the Samaria and the Fairview societies, I will not undertake to repeat it here.

We will accord all visitors a most hearty welcome to any of these debates.

The Sunday School convention of District No. 1 met at Mars Hill Church on last Sunday.

The convention was called to order by the District President, W. H. Shaw. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mr. J. R. Gentry after which the regular program was taken up.

The first subject—the benefits of the graded Sunday school classes—was discussed by several, Messrs. Alex Glass, J. B. Northcutt, C. H. Glass, and W. H. Shaw. Each talk was splendid, but as our schools are so poorly graded it was rather hard for the speakers to demonstrate the great advantage the work would be, yet each one was of the opinion that for Sunday school study to be a success in modern times the class must be graded.

Following these remarks Prof. Snyder, of Thorsby Institute, was presented to the convention to discuss bible training.

Prof. Snyder came with a heart full of enthusiasm for this special work, stating that our Sunday School classes could not be properly graded until we had better trained teachers.

He presented a black board design of an open Bible and the head of a child, pointing from the Bible to the child was a complex key. Below the key the trained teacher who held it to unlock the message of the Bible to the mind of the child by a method easily understood.

All enjoyed hearing this work explained by one who has the work so deeply at heart.

A short talk was made by Rev. Mr Lucas, of Shelby county. We might say that the theme was "temperance" and that he made some striking blows for the cause.

Dinner was announced and a bounteous supply of eatables was spread by the generous people of Mars Hill.

The afternoon session consisted of song service in the church led by Prof. Gilbert and at the same time a short conference was held in the school house nearby, led by Prof. Snyder.

The convention was called to order and reports from various schools were given. Eleven schools were represented and showed glowing reports. We were sorry to learn that some of our largest schools had disbanded and two failed to send any report whatever.

A general report was made of the work in the district by the secretary for the two year's work. While the schools of the district are in fairly good shape the Secreary fears that we will lose our blue star we worked so hard for last year; we hope however, that we may be "pleasantly" disappointed.

Mr. Shaw was re-elected President for the ensuing year and Miss Addie Horsely was elected Secretary. Mr. Shaw has done great work for the Sunday schools of the district. We shall pray for divine help in our work for the schools.

Good singing was one of the special features of the convention. In fact it was an enjoyable occasion.

The next convention will be held at the Jemison Baptist Church.

(Miss) NELIA JOHNSON,
Secretary.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

On last Tuesday the Sunday School Board of the County met in Clanton to arrange for the County Convention which is soon to convene.

There were present at the meeting Mr. E. G. Cofer, President, Prof. S. E. Norton, Judge L. H. Reynolds and Clarence Abernathy of the Executive Committee. After going over the affairs of the Sunday Schools in the county a program for the County Convention was arranged and a place selected and time set for holding it.

The Convention is to be held at Verbena on the 5th and 6th of July. The program of the convention will be published later.

CAR ROBBERS CAPTURED.

Last Saturday up near Stanton Sheriff Catts captured two young negro boys who were said to be wanted in Selma for car robbery but after a rigid examination of the boys he permitted them to go. Within three hours after they had gone a railroad detective came to Stanton in search of the boys and was told by Sheriff Catts that he had just released them as no one was present to make a warrant for their arrest and no one could substantiate the charges against them, but that he would have them recaptured within a short time. He immediately put one of his deputies—Mr. Alin Burke—upon the trail of the youngsters and within a few minutes he had them in charge. The boys are still in their teens but against them there stands the charges of car-robbing and house breaking at Selma.

This week those who are keeping up with the piano contest will notice a change of leaders. Strange as it may seem no one is able to keep the lead for any great length of time. MASONIC INSTALLATION.

On last Tuesday night at eight o'clock at tthe Asylum of Clanton Commandery No. 27, took place the imposing installation services of the Masonic order by which the following Masons were inducted into office for the ensuing term:—

E. A. Matthews—E. C.
J. R. Mullins—G.
H. T. Pipes—C. G.
J. W. Stanfield—S. W.
J. Watts Moore—J. W.
S. C. Matthews—P.
W. I. Mullins—Treasurer.
J. E. Robinson—Recorder.
E. L. Upchurch—Standard Bearer.
E. B. Deason—Sword Bearer.
W. H. Sartor—Warden.

These gentlemen will have charge of the secret work of the order for the coming Masonic term.

The installation was conducted in a most impressive manner by Grand Recorder Geo. A. Beauchamp, of Montgomery, of the Grand Commandery of Alabama.

Mr. Henry F. Vandiver, a prominent Mason of the Capital City, was also present to witness the impressive ceremonies.

After the installation a most sumptuous banquet was served to the Clanton Masons on the lower floor of the Asylum, who together with their ladies and visiting Masons enjoyed an hour of feasting and pleasant converse.

WATER WORKS FOR CLANTON.

Now Let's All Pull Together.

Since the water wagon has gone out of commission an effort is on foot, with fair assurance of success, to have established at least one large water main down the business street of the town from which suffering humanity can quell the stifling dust.

The scheme is to have an artesian well bored, secure a twenty or thirty thousand gallon capacity tank and use and engine to pump the water into the tank from the overflowing well.

From this tank the water main is to be supplied and the pressure obtained. At intervals along the street will be placed water plugs from which water can be drawn for street sprinkling purposes and for fire purposes. The affair is yet in its embryo state but we have assurances that it is meeting with the hearty approval of those who are most interested—the merchants and property owners—and it will doubtless be an accomplished fact before the Summer season has gone.

We have an editorial this week on this subject—written before we secured the above facts—and we are extremely glad to know that our people are awaking to the necessity of these public utilities.

Hurrah for Clanton, anyway. She's moving up hill every day.

"Words, Words, Words."

By Hildegarde Hawthorne.

IT is truly wonderful, when you stop to think of it, this power of words—just words printed in black on white, without even the help of the voice, without any appeal at all except to our imagination. Here they are, grouped in various ways, and as our eye travels over them all sorts of pictures arise before us. Our hearts grow sick with pain and sorrow, or we break out into laughter. We toss about on high seas or languish in fetid prisons, we are old or young, poor or rich, as the words choose. And we have only to rearrange these words to produce a quite opposite impression. Surely it is an amazing thing, more so perhaps than anything the words succeed in telling us.—St. Nicholas.

Plato on the Sexes.

By Emily J. Putnam.

We grant, he urged, that a bald-headed man is very different in one regard from a long-haired man; shall we then say that if bald men may become cobblers, long-haired men may not? And similarly, if we are sending for a doctor, shall we try to get one who excels in professional skill, or one who performs this or that function in reproduction? "None of the occupations which comprehend the ordering of a State belong to woman as woman, nor yet to man as man, but natural gifts are to be found here and there in both sexes alike; and, so far as her nature is concerned, the woman is admissible to all pursuits as well as the man. Shall we then appropriate all duties to men and none to women? On the contrary, we shall hold that one woman may have talents for medicine and another be without them; and that one may be musical and another unmusical; one woman may have qualifications for gymnastic exercises and for war, and another be unwarlike and without taste for gymnastics; there may be a love of knowledge in one woman and a distaste for it in another. There are also some women who are fit and other who are unfit for the office of guardian. As far as the guardianship of the State is concerned, there is no difference between the natures of the man and of the woman, but only various degrees of weakness and strength. Thus we shall have to select duly qualified women also, to share in the life, and official labors of the duly qualified men, since we find that they are competent to the work, and of kindred nature with the men."—Putnam's.

GENEROUS PACIFIC RAILROADS.

What They've Done for the People and What People Have Done for Them.

If the testimony of Vice-President Kruttschnitt before the United States commissioner in the suit against the merger of the Union and Southern Pacific railroads has been correctly reported, he made the claim that the public had benefited $154,000 in 17 years, from 1890 to 1907, from the failure of these roads to increase their rates in proportion to the advance in cost of labor and materials employed in their operation. The reasoning upon which this claim is based is peculiar, but the assumption of most of Mr. Kruttschnitt's testimony is that whatever the railroad companies did was for the benefit of the public, and that they had been hindered from doing justice to themselves.

Not only did they pay higher wages for labor and higher prices for materials without charging higher rates for carrying passengers and freight, but they spent many millions for improvements and equipment for the benefit of the public. He told how many tons of rails and feet of ties they had bought, the number of cars added to their equipment for freight and passengers, and the enormous sums that all these had cost, that the public might be benefited. And yet all this time the ungrateful public objected to an advance in rates proportioned to this tremendous outlay or even to the added cost on account of high wages and prices.

Of course the companies had no other object but to serve the public to the best of their ability, and to benefit it as much as possible. But it just happened that the public furnished so much traffic, made so much use of the facilities generously supplied that receipts increased out of proportion to expenses all the while. Old debts were paid off and new interest charges were met as capitalization increased. Dividends were earned where there had been none for years and other dividends were increased, while a surplus rolled up to be invested in stocks of other corporations. How far these dividends were "returns upon capital actually invested," and how far extracted from water, is not clear, but a fact that stands out quite as plain as a pikestaff is that all the while that things were costing so much and so much money was being spent, earnings were increasing in still larger proportion and profits were advancing. Several magnates got enormously rich, all stockholders received more liberal incomes and the marked price of shares went up to the gain of the possessors. And yet a heartless public would not consent that these generous railroads should increase their rates, but calmly took a "benefit" of $154,000,000. It is a sad example of the ingratitude of republics.—New York Journal of Commerce.

A Frozen Earthquake.

On the night of January 21st some of the residents of Lake Avenue, Chicago, were alarmed by what seemed to be a long-continuing earthquake, which jarred tables, shook curtains, and moved pictures on walls. It was found that these startling effects had been produced by the pounding of the waves on the shore of the lake where the ice had suddenly gone out, thus permitting the impact of the waves to come direct against the frozen soil. In that condition the ground was rendered more elastic and the force of the blows was transmitted to a considerable distance from the shore.

"Best is best, and best will ever live." When a person feels this way about Postum they are glad to give testimony for the benefit of others.

A school teacher down in Miss. says: "I had been a coffee drinker since my childhood, and the last few years it had injured me seriously.

"One cup of coffee taken at breakfast would cause me to become so nervous that I could scarcely go through with the day's duties, and this nervousness was often accompanied by deep depression of spirits and heart palpitation.

"I am a teacher by profession, and when under the influence of coffee had to struggle against irritation when in the school room.

"When talking this over with my physician, he suggested that I try Postum, and purchased a package and made it carefully according to directions; found it excellent at the start and everything

WHEN A MAN MARRIES IN CHINA.

Advantages of the John Alden Method Are Surprisingly Emphasized by Chinese Suitors.

Dr. Isaac T. Headland, a resident of Pekin for many years, where he enjoyed the friendship of the late Dowager Empress, throws a new light on the new women of China, in the Travel Magazine. Taking up the relations between the sexes and especially the Chinese method of getting a wife, the writer repeats a conversation with a young Chinaman who had recently become engaged to a Chinese maiden with whom he had never spoken.

"We students have a very great advantage over the old Chinese method of finding a wife and getting engaged," said my Celestial friend.

"What do you mean?" I inquired.

"Well, you see, by the old Chinese method a man can never see his wife until she is brought to his home, unless he can bribe the middle-man to allow him to stand on the street corner and see her pass by in a cart."

"And what advantage do you have?"

"We see the girls in church," he answered. "They also can see us. We have sisters in the girls' schools; they have brothers in the college, and when we go home during vacation we can learn all about each other."

"This is an advantage."

"In my judgment," he continued, "we have a better method than even you foreigners have."

"How is that?"

"Well, you see," he continued, "after we have selected the lady we want, we can have a middle-man go and ask her for us, while you have to go and ask the lady yourself."

"But," I objected, "we can get so much better acquainted by our method."

"Yes, that's true," he admitted, "but doesn't it make you awfully angry if you ask a girl to marry you and she refuses?"

It was necessary to admit that there were advantages in the middle-man method which had never occurred to me, and while I was not ready to acknowledge that his newfound method was better than mine, I could still see that the force which brought it about was bringing woman out of her seclusion and placing her on a level with her brother and her future husband.

Lead Pencils.

"Lead pencils" is a misleading expression. They contain no lead properly so-called, but are composed of graphite or plumbago, an allotropic form of carbon. The manufacture of graphite pencils in England began in 1564, when a valuable graphite mine was discovered at Barrowdale, Cumberland. The mine containing the purest graphite discovered is located at Ticonderoga, in New York State. The first manufacturer in the United States was William Monroe, of Concord, Mass., in 1812. Another pioneer in the industry was Joseph Dixon, in 1829.—New York American.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. THE MIRROR BABY CRIED.

And That Seemed to Have a Reforming Effect on the Real Child.

"It cannot be a new way to attempt to quiet a crying baby," said the young man, who couldn't be expected to know a great deal about children, "but it certainly was effective.

"The child was sitting up in a carriage red faced and bawling, with its mouth wide open and tears streaming out of the corners of its eyes. The nurse was making unavailing efforts to quiet the infant as she wheeled it along.

"At a corner there was a store that had a square post in one corner of the show window. The sides of this post were covered with looking glass.

"The nurse wheeled the carriage up close to the window and the baby, still howling, got a glimpse of the image of its angry faced, wailing self in the looking glass. The effect was marvelous. The child stopped crying at once and surveyed the glass with an air almost of being ashamed. Then it broke into a smile, and when the looking glass child also laughed it waved a tiny mittened fist and was borne away, chuckling.

"This, of course, can be explained on scientific grounds as being only a manifestation of curiosity on the part of the child, but the suddenness of the reform instituted by the mirror was impressive to those who saw it."—New York Sun.

COLLEGE STATISTICS.

Harvard Turns Out Most Men Conspicuous in Arts and Sciences.

The list of distinguished men of letters selected originally by the American Social Science Association contained 115 names, not counting those of artists or musicians. Of this number twenty-seven had no college training.

The colleges furnished the other 73 notables. Of these, 34 went to Harvard, 10 to Columbia, 6 each to Yale and to Princeton, 4 to Johns Hopkins and the rest were scattered among various institutions.

A writer in the Independent produces interesting statistics along this line. He says that of the 31 members of the literary group in the Academy of Arts and Letters 10 were educated at Harvard, 3 each at Yale and Princeton, 1 at Columbia, 1 each at eight other institutions, while 5 had no collegiate education.

The same writer thinks these figures show that the proportion of graduates attaining eminence in the arts and sciences is roughly the same as the proportion of graduates themselves turned out by the different universities when these men were being educated. This would indicate that men of exceptional natural ability are pretty evenly distributed throughout the undergraduate student body of the United States; in spite of the fact that certain families noted for their number of eminent men send their sons to Harvard, Yale or Princeton generation after generation, and also that these have the extraneous advantages of wealth and influence in their careers.

Starting It Too High.

It was in the days before the organs and choirs, and Deacon Dodge volunteered to lead the singing of the old hymn. He started out very well: "My soul be on thy guard—ten thou—" and he stopped, unable to go any further because he had started on a high pitch. He started over again: "My soul be on thy guard—ten thou—" and once more he stopped, this time pitched so low that he could not proceed.

"Say, Brother Dorsey," said one of the congregation, "hadn't you better start it with five thousand?"

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me a well woman and I would tell the whole of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all said that I had a tumor in addition to female trouble and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me a well woman and I have no backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. EMMA IMIG, 833 Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate cases of women after all other means have failed, and that every suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has helped thousands to health and her advice is free.

Resurrecting the Old Trail.

Kansas is at work, pick and shovel, upon the picturesquely practical work of resurrecting the old Santa Fe trail. The trail forced itself upon the Kansans. When twelve of the western counties got together to consider the question of improving their intercommunication by road they had to choose it. The pathway by which the lumbering prairie schooners made their way to the coast, upon which the mails went by relay and over which cattle were driven in thousands, was found to be the logically perfect route. Its course was as economically correct as if one of the great Harriman engineers had laid it out. Upon this basis the movement for "good roads" grew, until now the Santa Fe trail is to be made a thirty-foot speedway running from Kansas City into Santa Fe. Seven counties already are at work on it, and the task goes forward easily and rapidly toward completion, because a common dirt surface has been found to be the best permanent.—Chicago Post.

THE SHERMAN HOUSEHOLD.

Vice-President's Wife Not Troubled by the Domestic Problem.

"I was visiting once at the Utica home of Vice-President Sherman," says a Washington man in Good Housekeeping, "when I blundered into a sitting room I had not seen before. Mr. Sherman was with me and I remarked on what a cosey apartment it was.

"'This is the servants' sitting room,' he explained. 'My wife insists on one thing, no matter what size of a home we occupy, the people who work for us must be comfortably housed.'

"Afterward," added the Washington man, "I had a peep into an immaculate kitchen. It was not only spacious and perfectly equipped, but it was a cheerful place to work in and it had a mighthy pleasant outlook.

"Mrs. Sherman is one of the few housekeepers who confess to knowing little from experience of a domestic problem. All that deprives her of a servant is death or a wedding. Last fall while the Shermans were in search of a Washington home some one asked the Vice-President why he did not rent one splendid house offered him.

"'One reason,' he explained, 'was because my wife was not satisfied with the accommodations it offered for servants. It was well equipped for entertaining and suitable for our own wants, but men and women who have given us years of loyal service deserve something better than being housed like cattle. My wife has always lived up to one theory—that a faithful laborer is worthy of a little more than just wages.'"

Dangerous Dog Bite.

Many "mad dog" scares and frights come where a dog has eaten too much meat, or foul food, has become overheated, or suffers from lack of water. Again, mild strychnine poisoning in a dog may be mistaken for rabies. Many say there is no such thing as hydrophobia. Suppose there is not. Anyhow, dog bite seems dangerous. If its fright kills strong men. Friends of dogs and owners of valuable ones, by aiding to keep homeless dogs off city streets, will lend a helping hand against the prevalent and spreading dog prejudice which has grown up hereabout in the last year or two.—New York Press.

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head, and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatments after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

"A very easy case," said Mr. Sheridan, smiling, "grew out of a conversation overheard by a friend of mine on a train.

PERSONAL MENTION

The many friends of Prof. Monroe will regret to learn that he has been suffering considerably of late from a throat affection. Last Friday he went to Montgomery to consult a specialist, who found that an operation would be necessary in order to effect a permanent cure. This, the professor underwent, and though it was what the physicians call a "minor" operation, it has caused much pain and suffering. However, Prof. Monroe expects to return to Clanton the latter part of the present week.

Mr. Claude Reynolds left on Monday morning for Montgomery, where he goes to complete a business course in one of the colleges of that city.

Rev. and Mrs. Klein and little son left on Saturday morning, having closed the series of meetings which were in progress at the Methodist church. Both Mr. Klein and his estimable wife made many friends during their stay here who will be glad to have them return frequently.

Judge and Mrs. Deason went up to the classic little city of Thorsby last Sunday to take in the Sunday School convention at that place. They report having had a most enjoyable visit.

Burns Marsh of Maplesville let in the light of his contenance upon Clanton one day this week. Burns is thinking of moving to Bessemer.

Some one found a key last week on the streets and knowing what a good advertising medium The Press is brought it to these offices with the request that the owner be notified. The key can be had by calling at The Press offices and proving property. We make no charge for the announcement.

Rev. W. S. Cox, than whom Chilton has no better citizen, went out to Cane Creek last Sunday to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. Lizzie Lambert, the deceased wife of Mr. W. M. Lambert.

All of the teachers of Clanton High school left last week for their respective homes to spend the vacation season. Clanton will miss their familiar faces upon our streets. However, we entertain the hope that they will all return next season. If they do not—well, some hearts will be heavy.

Rev. R. J. Mills went out last Saturday to Lime Springs and preached at that place Saturday night and Sunday morning.

The Forest Lumber company is distributing among its friends one of the handsomest paper weights seen here this season. It is an extra heavy French plate mirror encased in a celuloid setting which bears their advertisement. As a paper weight it is the genuine article—and then, too, it tickles the vanity of the fellow who is fortunate enough to secure one.

The friends of Mr. J. M. Morgan will be glad to know that he is rapidly recovering from an attack of rheumatism, which settled in his face and effected his eyesight somewhat. Mr. Morgan has been a patient sufferer, but he is now anxious to get out and mingle with his friends again.

Mrs. Gamma Anderson is spending a few days with friends in Birmingham.

Hon. Moses Robinson, of Verbena, one of the county commissioners, and a good one, too, was in the city Monday attending to business affairs. While in the city he paid The Press office a visit which was highly appreciated.

Strange wasn't it that the youngest paper in the town—the one published in Birmingham—should be the only one containing mention of the school exercises? As a general thing school "doings" make interesting reading.

Mrs. Crit Jones and son, Crit, Jr., are in Tampa, Fla., on a visit to friends and relatives.

Dr. N. S. Johnson will leave on Saturday next for New York to take a special course in diseases of women and children. During his absence his brother, Dr. Arthur Johnson, will have charge of his office.

A pleasant event which added much to the social calendar of the week was the young people's bridge club which met with Miss Courtney on last Monday night.

To prevent Comus from being chicaned, the members enthroned this mythful little god as mascot early in the evening. This, of course, was the inspiration which made the pleasant hours flutter, and the refreshing ice course sweeter.

The next meeing of the club, will be held with Miss Morgan.

Miss Estella Morgan, who has been enjoying a visit to Selma friends and relatives, has returned home.

Miss Williams, of Montgomery, who has a wide circle of friends in Clanton, was the guest of Mrs. S. J. Watts on Sunday last.

Mrs. J. M. Roper has returned to her home in Montgomery after a pleasant visit to relatives here.

Miss Nettie Williams, who is attending business college is spending a few days in Clanton with her parents.

Mr. Carter, the Clanton Furniture Company man, has sold out and moved to Prattville, where he will open a five and ten cent store.

The store house formerly used by the Furniture Company is now being repapered preparatory to being opened as a pool room.

The many friends of Mr. Frank Goodgame, who has been quite sick for the past week or ten days, will be glad to know that he is again upon our streets, having completely recovered.

The water wagon has been put out of commission on account of its extreme weight. It was decided that perhaps it would be best to sell it to some city with paved streets and no hills to climb. This was certainly humanitarian since it would have been cruelty to animals to have required a team to pull the wagon over the streets of Clanton. The wagon was a good one—perhaps the very best of its kind that could have been secured—but it was a little too heavy for the unpaved streets of Clanton. We hope those who have the matter in charge will not become discouraged but will renew their already commendable work and secure a lighter one for the town.

Prof. S. E. Norton, of Thorsby, Secretary of the Thorsby Institute and a member of the County Sunday School Board, was a visitor to Clanton on Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. E. B. Wrenn and son, Edward, of Talladega, are visiting the family of Mrs. F. A. Hamon.

Mrs. W. T. Callen and little Miss Izors are visiting relatives at Stanton.

Madames E. Hopkins and J. B. VanDerVeer spent Tuesday at Mountain Creek.

Mrs. E. J. Ansley of East Lake is visiting Mrs. J. A. Hester.

A ladies' prayer meeting was organized last last Tuesday at the Methodist church. The ladies propose to hold weekly prayer meetings, taking turn about in leading the meetings. This is a most excellent movement and The Press highly commends the good ladies who have the affair in charge.

Mrs. Elmer Welch and children have returned from a pleasant visit to relatives in Montgomery.

The many friends of Mrs. B. E. Jones will be pleased to know that she is convalescent after a few days' illness.

Will Search for Sunken Treasure in Port Murray

Halifax, N. S.—The recovery of sunken riches estimated to be worth between $250,000 and $300,000, is the object of an expedition which is to commence salvage operations in Port Murray bay within a few days. The treasure is believed to be in the cabin of the Spanish galleon Don Gira, which was sunk about 100 years ago. A company of Annapolis business men has engaged two divers, who will arrive at Annapolis from New York within a week, bringing with them modern wrecking, dredging and diving appliances. It is upon the worth of this apparatus that the success or failure of the expedition depends, for the Don Gigra lies in 125 fathoms of water, and is only accessible by strong tides. These tides have hitherto proved insurmountable barriers to the recovery of the

The State insists that there was motive on the part of these defendants and that, taking all the facts and circumstances into consideration, they are sufficient to lead the mind of a reasonable man to the conclusion, beyond a reasonable doubt that this man met his death at the hands of these parties.

Now, the defendants say that, as a matter of fact, there was no combination between them; that they did not act with any common design at all; that there was no confederation between them; that they were coming along by that road after they had been at that supper, in a hilarious mood, and laughter, and that the assault was made after there had been a separation of these parties, so far as the defendants Sheppard and the man Young are concerned, and that, as matter of fact, this woman, Emma Smith, is the perpetrator of this entire offense. Is that true? Does the testimony lead you to the conclusion that she alone is the guilty agent here? Is it a fact that there was motive on the part of these other persons to commit the offense? Is it a fact that these people went ahead and left the man there? What is the truth of the transaction?

In arriving at the truth, you look at all the facts and circumstances. You look at the demeanor of the witnesses upon the stand, the reasonableness of the story that they tell, at their interest in the case, and, looking at al lthose things you apply to the testimony your common sense as men of affairs, having the sole desire to arrive at the truth of the transaction.

This is an important case, important to the State and important to these defendants, and I am sure you will give it the careful consideration that it deserves at your hands.

If after you have considered this testimony with the desire—if you can do it—of making all the witnesses speak the truth, then go deeper into the evidence and see what the truth is. If, after applying the rules laid down to the testimony in this case, you are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt,—that these defendants, or either of them, committed this offense, or aided or abetted in committing the offense, in the sense in which the Court has charged you, then you will find such defendant guilty, or such defendants guilty. If you find, under the rules laid down, that they are guilty of murder in the first degree, the form of your verdict will be: "We, the jury, find the defendant (giving his name) guilty," you might write a separate verdict as to each defendant, as for that matter, "We, the jury, find the defendant A guilty of murder in the first degree, and fix his punishment at death," or, if you think that he is guilty of murder in the first degree and that death is not the proper mode of punishment, then the form of your verdict would be: "We, the jury, find the defendant A guilty of murder in the first degree, and fix his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for life." If you think that the defendants, or either of them, is guilty, but that he or she did not have deliberation and premeditation at the time, then the form of your verdict would be, "We, the jury, find the defendant A guilty of murder in the second degree, and fix his punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than ten years," any number over that. If upon a careful consideration of all the evidence, you have a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendants, or either of them, the form of your verdict as to such defendant will be, "We, the jury, find the defendant A not guilty." If you see fit to do it, gentlemen, you may write separate verdicts, under the rules laid down. You will put all the verdicts in one, but you may render different verdicts as to each defendant.

GUN CLUB ORGANIZED.

Some days since the young men of Clanton organized the Chilton County Gun Club with a view to whiling away a few of the dull summer afternoons and at the same time gain some practice in trap shooting.

Years ago this was one of the popular pastimes of the young people and The Press is glad to see it revived. If proper rules and regulations are adopted and observed there can not possibly come any harm but much good will result. We understand that the club has begun under the most favorable auspices.

Below we give the score of the first practice—it does not speak very highly of the marksmanship of some of the members, but, perhaps, they were after the "booby" prize and purposely lowered their score.

SELLING SOME.

The Gamble Hardware Company have been putting out quite a number of their machines recently. Within the last few days they have sold and delivered the following machines:

ANOTHER MURDER.

Just about retiring time last Saturday night the people of the western part of town were startled by the firing of a shot gun.

Investigation proved that the gun was in the hands of a negro named Gene Martin, who has quite an unsavory reputation for peace and sobriety, and that the contents of the gun had lodged in the body of Will Zimmerman, his brother-in-law, both of whom are negroes.

From the best evidence obtainable at this writing it seems that Will Zimmerman's wife had abandoned him and had taken up with Gene Martin, who already had a lawful wife—the sister of Zimmerman.

During the afternoon the two negroes had entered into a discussion and angry words had passed between them. Zimmerman accused Martin of harboring his wife and inducing her to remain away from him.

In the course of the conversation, it is said, Zimmerman made use of the remark that both he and Martin could not live in the same world. Whether this remark was made or not remains to be proven, but be that as it may, during the afternoon Martin provided himself with cartridges and remained at home.

About nine o'clock Zimmerman proceeded toward Martin's home and was in the act of closing the gate when a shot gun was fired, the entire charge entering the left breast as if it had been from a rifle. Zimmerman fell to the ground, uttered one groan, and his spirit passed into the great beyond.

Hurried was the Sheriff's forces telephoned of the facts and some of the deputies were early upon the scene. It was found that Zimmerman had died almost instantly and that aside from an ordinary pocket knife he had no weapon upon his person.

Martin immediately left for parts unknown; he is supposed to be making his way to Ensley and with the aid and encouragement of the colored population may be enabled to elude the officers.

Just here The Press wishes to indulge in a little moralizing, even though the attorneys may think it beyond the pale of a newspaper to speak out before a trial is held.

A negro has the right to protect his life and his home—his castle; even though it be but a simple hay thatched shack it is to him a castle— his home—and he has the right, all the power of the government behind him, in protecting that castle.

But there is another phase to the question: a man has the right to the person and care of his lawful spouse, and so long as he comports himself according to the law no man can say him nay; it is both an infringement upon and a direct violation of the moral, the civic and the spiritual law for another to step in between the husband and wife or to give aid and encouragement to a wilful and unprovoked separation.

Here the two relations of life may have been in direct conflict—and doubtless they were; we have no time or space for lengthy theorizing—but whether they were or not, human life and personal privileges are held entirely too light in some communities. We have a law and to that law every man is amenable; under that law no man has a right pre-empted to himself, be he high or low, to take its execution into his own hands. A human life is more than a blade of grass, an immortal spirit is of far more value than half a dozen worthless lives. It is this proneness of humanity to think that might makes right and that every personal grievance must be personally vindicated which makes human life cheaper than bull beef; it is becoming more and more apparent to students of sociology that the tardy, unreasonable and puny excuses offered by the law for new trials, stays of execution and the other claptrap proffered is largely responsible for the amazingly rapid increase in violations of the law and the utter disregard of the dignity of law displayed by some in every community.

A hempen rope, a high scaffold and a speedy execution of the actually guilty without regard to station, condition in life and blood relations will have a most salutary effect upon that [illegible] ever ready [illegible] their hearth stones, they are but bringing maledictions upon themselves and holding in check the progress of their race.

Assist the officers in running to earth these criminals who would not hesitate to take your life were it necessary to accomplish their escape. Do not harbor but deliver those who in direct violation of the law, made for your protection, assume to become both judge and executioner and set at defiance the operations of the law which is made to shield your home from the same kind of invasion that has been practised upon another.

U. D. C. MEETING.

On last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. A. Stewart was held a most enthusiastic meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. The afternoon was spent in pleasant converse and in arranging for the future welfare of the association. The President, Mrs. N. S. Johnson, gave a most interesting account of her trip to Montgomery as one of the delegates to the State Convention of the Association; this interesting talk was greatly enjoyed by those fortunate enough to be present. Perhaps there is no association in Clanton deserving of more cordial support on the part of the ladies than this same association—the United Daughters of the Confederacy—and if there is a single—or married either as for that matter—daughter of the South whose name is not enrolled as a member no time should be lost in having that name put upon the roll of so honorable an association.

SUNDAY WEDDINGS.

There were two weddings at the Court House last Sunday, Judge Reynolds performing both of them. In the morning he spoke the words that united for life the destinies of Mr. W. S. Jones and Miss Annie B. Wilson and in the afternoon the same solemn words were again spoken binding together the lives of Mr. Dallas Jowers and Miss Lula Davis.

Besides these the following marriage licenses have been issued this week:

Mr. Clifton Hall to Miss Rosa Edwards.

Mr. H. G. Tucker to Miss Rena Glasscock.

Hon. Osmond Middleton to Miss Carrie Littlejohn.

BEAUTIFUL HOME WEDDING

The marriage of Miss Carrie Littlejohn and Mr. Osmond Middleton was solemnized Wednesday evening at nine o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wiley Littlejohn.

The wedding was charming in its simplicity. There was no elaborate decorations, but an artistic arrangement of cut-flowers, ferns and palms through the house.

The nuptials were witnessed only by a few relatives and intimate friends.

The Rev. R. J. Mills was the officiating clergyman.

Miss Littlejohn is one of the loveliest girls of the younger set, and although she has never made her formal bow to society, she has been much admired because of her lovely character, her sweet disposition and her charming personality.

She has just graduated at Tuskaloosa with distinction, taking the B. S. course and winning the medal in voice.

The bride, who is an exceptionally pretty girl was never more beautiful than in her wedding gown of white duchess satin fashioned en train, and ornamented with Chantilly lace and pear passementerie. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, sweet peas and plumosa.

The groom is a prominent young lawyer of our town, a graduate of the State University. He has held the office of solicitor for the County, Mayor of the town and was the Representative of Chilton County in the last legislature of Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. Middleton will go at once to their beautiful new home on Fourth Avenue with the best wishes of a host of friends.

The Press joins with their numbers of other friends, in wishing for them a life of unalloyed pleasure and prosperity.

THORSBY GLEANINGS.

The patrons of Thorsby Institute, and the people of this section generally, enjoyed a rare treat in the rendition of an excellent program by the pupils of the Institute on last Wednesday evening. The auditorium was well filled with attentive listeners and all went to their homes unanimous in the verdict that it was an evening of exceptional pleasure. It would be well nigh impossible to say which one bore off the palm as each acquitted herself in the most creditable manner. Those who had in charge the training of the young ladies, too, came in for their share of the praise for right excellently did they perform their task.

We print this week a copy of the program rendered and hope next week to give a more extended account of the exercises.

INVENTIVE GENIUS.

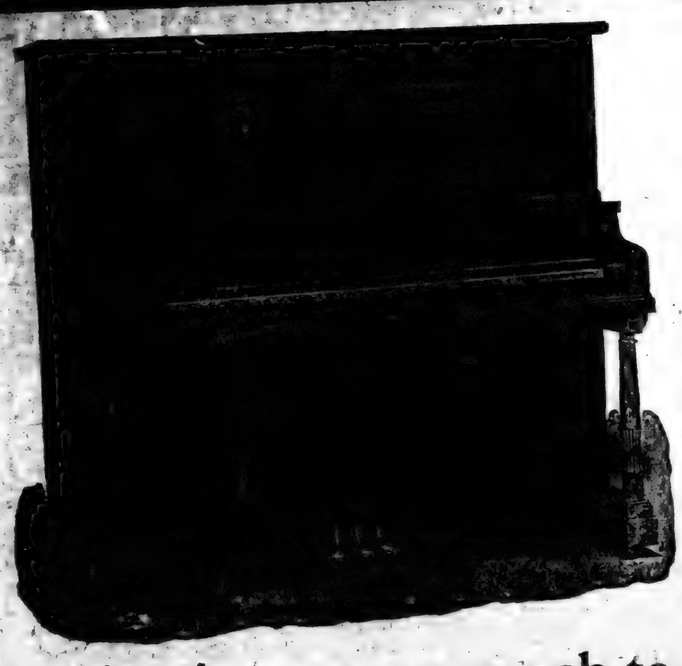
Mr. H. M. Mahan has perfected an invention, and had the same patented, which he believes, and his friends hope, will bring him in a snug little fortune. He has been working on this device quietly for some years, he says, and has but recently gotten it to that state of perfection which would enable him to put it on the market. He now has his letters patent in his possession giving him the full protection of the general government from any infringement and proposes within a short time to begin the manufacture and distribution of his patent. Clanton will be the headquarters of the concern for some time to come. The invention is a device for locking wagons and other vehicles. The inventor claims for his implement that he can securely lock a heavily loaded wagon by a simple pressure of a thumb screw and that there will be no noticeable change in the adjustment of the harness worn by the team. It is, so Mr. Mahan explains, so simple that a mere child can work it and yet so powerful that it will so firmly lock a loaded wagon that no team of horses can move it when locked.

We hope for Mr. Mahan abundant success with his invention.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Tipton Mullins, who accompanied his wife as far as Memphis on last Saturday returned home Monday afternoon. Mrs. Mullins has gone on an extended visit to friends and relatives in Oklahoma.

Mr. B. W. Gilbert, of Mountain Creek, the brick man, was in town one day this week and while here called at The Press offices and left an order for stationery.



The Clanton Ice Cream Parlor, Chandler Building, is serving the highest grade ice cream ever brought to Clanton. A nice, clean, cool place to take your best girl and enjoy a delicious plate of cream or a cooling drink.

AT DUSK.

Where shadows fall, along the wall,
A lance of golden glory,
Cuts through the gloom that fills the room
And lights the branches hoary
Of swaying trees, in fitful breeze,
That stand outside and shiver
Beneath the still and gloomy chill
That broods above the river.

The sunset's rays, a gorgeous blaze
Of splendor, spent in dying,
Light up the earth, like smile of mirth,
The gloom of night defying;
Then in the west, above the crest
Of clouds, bright starlight flashes;
And darkness creeps where shadows sleep,
Above a dead fire's ashes.

THE QUALITY OF MERCY.

By JANET BRIGGS.

Denton pushed back his chair with an air of finality. "Sorry, Peter, but you know I told you if it happened again you'd have to go. The work demands a clear brain and a steady hand. You had neither this morning."

"I've held out for eleven weeks, sir. I am cutting it out. If you'd give me one more chance—there ain't a scrap of work anywhere else to be had till spring, you know that y'self—and there's Jennie and the little one. It won't happen again, I swear it!"

"I must keep my word, Peter. And don't put it as if I were responsible for your trouble."

"You will be if my baby starves."

"I deny it. You should have thought of your baby last night when you were out with the boys."

"You won't give me another try?"

"Can't."

Holding the door for Peter to pass out, he was touched in spite of himself by the despairing misery in the man's face, although his self-uprightness admitted of no relenting. But when Peter turned and shook his great fist in helpless rage, Denton merely laughed as at a petulant child, kindling the first spark of hatred toward his fellow man that Peter's kindly nature had ever known.

Denton's way to his car led past Peter's cottage, and in the doorway stood Peter's young wife, a frail girl, holding a fretting child wrapped in an old blanket.

"Hush, honey!" she was saying, "Dadda's comin' soon; mamma an' baby'll watch." The child's wan, tear-stained little face puckered into a laugh as he jumped and crowed in her arms, and her own patient face brightened as Peter came into sight down the path. But his head was bent and his step lagging.

Denton had a queer sinking feeling at thought of that home coming. The plight of these two had appealed to him simply as an added phase of mental discomfort to Peter, deserved at that, not as the actual physical suffering and need of a girl and a baby.

He thought of them again when his little daughter Hazel climbed into his lap to repeat her English lesson. His child had never known the thwarting of a childish whim.

"The quality of mercy is not strained," she recited. "It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven. It blesseth—it blesseth—

"You're not listening, father!"

"Oh! It is twice blessed," prompted Denton.

"It is twice blessed. It blessed him who gives and him who takes—"

"Mercy." The word irritated Denton. Justice was his fetich, and he could not reconcile the two.

"When mercy seasons justice—" Hazel went on.

Denton ended the lesson with unusual impatience.

Falling asleep in his chair later, he dreamed of a little white casket in which lay Peter's child; and then it was Hazel's face that was pinched and cold and still, and her little body that had starved, and Hazel's dead mother was there, moaning and wringing her hands; all his fault somehow.

The mental agony awoke him, his forehead damp, his throat aching, just as the telephone rang sharply. The watchman reported a gas leak at the works and Denton hurried to the place to investigate. First entering the roundhouse where the inflammable celluloid was kept, he found the place stifling. Turning hastily to leave and notify the gas plant he found the exit blocked by Peter's big form, a revolver barrel staring him in the face.

"Ye don't leave till y' promise me the job back," he said, excited, but determined. "N y' can't breathe here long. I c'n shoot."

"You dare not. Out of the way!" cried Denton, wrathfully. With a quick blow he struck up Peter's arm, sending the revolver crashing onto the cement floor yards away, spitting up a shower of sparks. There was a flaring flash, a roar of ignited gas and exploding celluloid, and the glass roof lifted entirely off and fell in shattered atoms about the swaying walls.

Hours later, lying in Peter's bed, where he had been carried cruelly burned and bruised, Denton came slowly back to consciousness, and it took weeks of Jennie's nursing before he could move.

Peter had escaped with nothing worse than a broken arm and blistered face.

"I suppose it's jail for mine," he said grimly one morning. He knew little of law.

Denton looked thoughtfully at his bandaged head. He had been doing a lot of thinking while lying there helpless, witnessing the simple home life of these people, which called forth unselfishness, forbearance and self-sacrifice, qualities somewhat overlooked in his own self-indulgent, luxurious existence. And to find the lack of the price of a quart of milk an actual reality was a shocking novelty.

"It was only by the mercy of God you both escaped," said Jennie to change the subject.

"Mercy" to him!—who gave for his idolized child had shown little of it to man or beast. "If he had received the justice he rated so highly—" He cringed inwardly.

"Peter," he said, impulsively, "Forget that night. But I can't take you back. I'll pay you well for my board."

Through his bandaged head buzzed Hazel's lesson over and over.

"The quality of mercy is not strained." Denton was straining it through finest gauze and he realized it.

"Peter," he said again. "I will take you back; I'll forget my word this once."

Jennie's face glowed with gratitude. It seemed to inspire Denton. "And what's more if you'll study up a little I'll help you qualify for the foreman's job. He leaves soon."

Denton fell asleep with a warmth about his heart, a new, strange sense of satisfaction he had not known for years, leaving Peter and Jennie happily discussing plans for the future so brilliant to them. He did not know it, but he was beginning to learn the beautiful truth of the words of Hazel's lesson:

"It is twice blessed.
It blesseth him who gives and him who takes."

WISE WORDS.

Important men who really aren't are the most anxious to tell you all about it.

The more money a man could inherit the more he could act as if he made it by his brains.

A girl gets so excited about being engaged she forgets what a good time she had before she was.

Some men are such natural-born liars they will pretend they would rather go to a church fair than a prize-fight.

A woman never gets so fat that she will stop sneering about how other women can't get anything to fit their figures.

A girl puts on prettiness very fast when you tell her so.

The way a woman fools a man is making him think he's doing it to her.

You don't have to explain a compliment to a woman the way you do the constitution.

A useful thing about spelling is having a stenographer who knows how to do it for you.

There's no excuse ever invented for coming home late that a man hasn't worn threadbare before he's been married three years.

It's so natural to lie it's astonishing how few people do it well.

The more fun a man thinks he can have being out nights the more his wife knows she can't.

Insane asylums are all places where everybody inside thinks everybody outside is crazy.

The way for a man to make a girl stop running away from him is for him to stop chasing her.

Royal Motor Cars.

King Edward's motor cars did not bear number plates. Those of the German royal family are recognized by their warning signals. They alone may use the three noted horns.

"The cars used by the German Emperor and Empress have their approach heralded by three noted horns and those of the royal princes by two noted horns. No infringement of this prerogative by ordinary motorists is tolerated.

"The fact that the royal cars, both in England and in Germany, may so easily be distinguished is an indication of the confidence which exists between the monarchs and their respective peoples," says the Gentlewoman. "In less happier times it would have been courting danger to have carried such marks of distinction, and even now in less fortunate lands the rulers dare not travel so openly."

His Professional Pride Hurt.

In a Christmas fairy play in Paris a set of dominoes was represented by men wearing on their backs boards marked with the different numbers. One day a super gave in his resignation and told the manager he must find a substitute.

"Why, what's the trouble?" asked the manager. "Don't you get fifteen sous a night like the others?"

"It isn't the sous at all," said the super haughtily. "I am one of the oldest artists belonging to the theatre, and I think you ought to have made me double six; instead I am the lowest number—double aught."—Le Figaro.

CURTISS CRAFT WAS SMALLEST EVER USED.

Biplane Measures Only 30 Feet Fore and Aft and From Side to Side—Weight Only 1004 Pounds—Fifty Horse-Power Water-Cooled Motor Drives Seven-Foot Propeller at 1000 Revolutions a Minute.

New York City.—The machine with which Glenn H. Curtiss made his flight from Albany to New York is not only the smallest ever employed in an important aerial trip, but aviators say is the smallest which ever has been utilized in a cross-country journey.

It is what is known as the biplane type. It measures from extreme front to extreme rear just thirty feet one inch, and it is thirty feet wide. The two planes, which are four and one-half feet apart, are also four and one-half feet wide. They are made of the fine rubber-silk cloth which is Captain Thomas Baldwin's contribution to aviation.

The planes and wings of the Curtiss machine are concave but rigid, in which they differ from the Wright machine in that its wings may be warped through lever controls operated by the rider. Instead of warping his wing tips Curtiss employs an aileron on each side of the machine. These ailerons are four feet long and two and one-half feet wide, and are fastened at each end of the machine to two of the upright rods at the front edges of the planes. The uses to which these ailerons are put are identical with those accorded by the warping wings of the Wright machine.

By a system of wires and pulleys, acting on the rear edges of the ailerons (and on the Wright machine on the rear of the wings), the aileron on one side is pulled up when the other side is pulled down. This is necessary to give stability and prevent drift and overturning. If, in straight-away flight, for instance, the aeroplane drops toward the right, the degree of the angle of incidence of that side of the planes is increased, thereby adding to the resistance of the air of that side, which tends to make that end of the machine rise, and the angle of incidence of the upward end is decreased, pulling it down and bringing the aeroplane back to a normal position.

The elevating plane or deflector at the front of the machine which Curtiss used is larger than any he hitherto has employed. It measures about two feet more in width than the one he had on his Governors Island "June Bug" type of biplane. The rear rudder is of the customary Curtiss manufacture, consisting of a vertical and a horizontal plane which intersect each other at the centre lines.

At the very centre of the lower plane and on a strong wooden bed is the eight-cylinder, V-type, fifty-horse power motor, which drives the single seven-foot propeller at a thousand revolutions per minute. This exerts a 350-pound pressure on the air, and thereby propels the machine. The cylinders, which are cast singly, and are water jacketed to an extent rather less than is the custom with automobile cylinders, are square, measuring four by four inches. They are cast of gray iron with finely wrought pistons.

The oil tank, holding two gallons, is located under the aluminum crank case. The lubricant is forced upward through two one-sixteenth inch pipes to the chrome-nickel steel crankshaft by means of a small gear-driven pump. The crankshaft is hollow and the oil runs through it to the bearings, overflowing from there to the case. A system of overflow tubes keeps the oil in the crankcase at a constant level.

The radiator, which is of four-gallons capacity, is located to the right of the engine, looking forward, and the water is forced by a gear-driven pump through the packeting of the cylinders.

This is the largest engine that Curtiss has yet built, and marks his discarding of the air-cooled type for the water-cooling system.

Under the framework to which the front wheel is attached Curtiss, before his flight, affixed a silk air-bag whose top was a piece of finely selected spruce reinforced by a strip of rubber silk to make that side of the bag airtight. This was intended to have the effect of a hydroplane in the event that Curtiss was compelled to come down on the water at any time during his flight.

New York City.—The aeroplane would not endanger New York in the event of war, in the opinion of Brigadier-General Walter Howe, commanding the Department of the East, with headquarters on Governors Island. General Howe pointed out that there is no telling what the aeroplane of the future might do, and wished it understood that his opinion applied to the aeroplane as it is. High in the air and traveling at a great speed, General Howe said the aviator would find his task a very hard one if he attempted to drop explosives on vessels or forts. If he descended to an altitude where he could drop his explosives with any degree of accuracy, the land forces would wreck his machine with shrapnel. General Howe responded to a question put by a reporter, the question being what, in his opinion, was the military lesson to be drawn from the Curtiss flight from Albany.

"In my opinion," General Howe said, "the only military lesson is that there will come a time when the aeroplane will be of great value as an agent of warfare. This is shown by the fact that two years ago none of us believed that the development of the aeroplane on a scale such as was shown by the Curtiss flight was possible. When we remember this we can only conjecture how great will be the progress in the development the next few years will bring.

"At the present time the aviator in an aeroplane may be able to carry dynamite or other high explosive, but, owing to the height at which he would fly, I do not think his presence would endanger to any appreciable extent vessels or fortifications, or even cities and towns, above which he flew. If he flew high he would probably have a hard time hitting us, while if he came low we would have very little trouble in getting his range."

General Howe expressed the opinion that the Government would not engage extensively in the development of the aeroplane, but would continue as in the past, to leave that largely in the hands of individuals.

Geography Made Real to the Child

By Eleanor Atkinson.

ALL wholesome and effective thinking is a growth; each individual thought grows out of some preceding thought, and, in turn, branches and rebranches. The proper teaching of geography can never consist in memorizing a series of geographical facts. The very breadth and richness of the aspects of life which we group under the name "Geography," lead to confusion and misdirection unless the real purpose of geography teaching is kept steadily in view, to reproduce in the child's habit of thinking those processes through which we go when we use geography for business or culture in real life.

As arithmetic and other subjects constantly come into the application of geography in real life, so do they in geography teaching in the best schools. In dealing with the clay industry at Macomb, the question naturally arose as to the importance of the industry as indicated by the per cent. of population supported by it. Instead of learning this arithmetical and economic fact simply as a statement to be committed to memory, the pupils went much further and found much better. They got only figured it out for themselves. [illegible] they did their figuring. JUDGE PEARSON'S CHARGE.

Elsewhere in these columns will be found the charge of Judge Pearson to the jury in Holditch murder case. It will be remembered that this is the trial in which four negroes were charged with the murder of a young white man near Maplesville, in this county. It was contended by the prosecution that there was a conspiracy to take the life of the young man and so the able jurist devotes some time to the exposition of the law on conspiracy.

It is a most excellenf delivery by a learned judge and our people, generally, would do well to ponder the wisdom as well as the law therein expressed.

We give it at this particular time because there seems to be a murder mania running amuck throughout the county and we think that so able an opinion rendered by so prominent a man may do good just now.

JULY FOURTEENTH, THE TIME. TOWN OF CLANTON, THE PLACE.

On last Friday night in response to the call of The Press quite a goodly number of Clanton's business men met at the Court House to make arrangements for the "free auction" day as outlined in this paper last week. They went at the work systematically and determinedly. That the day will prove a white mile post in the history of Clanton no one now will attempt to gainsay, and after the Fourteenth of July—we venture the assertion now—there will not be one who will undertake to discuss the affair save in the most laudatory terms.

But to make it the success that it should be every one must be on tip-toe from now till the day of the auction; this we believe the merchants and business men of Clanton will do, and we believe that they will receive the hearty and enthusiastic support of every citizen regardless of rank, age or sex.

There is something for each of us to do; let's determine to do it cheerfully and well.

Now let all join hands and work. Let every throat swell with the cry: Clanton the place, July the month, fourteen the day.

Our paper, like all others, is subject to criticism; we are not always correct, however hard we try to be, but we think that recent developments abundantly justify our actions in calling in piano contest tickets and we think that all fair minded persons will now accord us an honesty of purpose in doing so and at the same time see the good and sufficient reasons which actuated us. After this issue we will have some interesting developments and some suggestions to make that will cause a considerable stir of enthusiasm among contestants. Please bear in mind that The Press is the pioneer in such matters and that we are alert for your interests. Do not become discouraged at the occasional fan-frares of imitators—that's the sincerest flattery, and an unwilling endorsement of our proposition and an admission that it is what we claimed it to be—a cash money getter.

The meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of the County on last Saturday, was, perhaps, the fullest in attendance aand in enthusiasm that has assembled in this county for many years. The work of the committee was thoroughly discussed and preparations made for an aggressive campaign.

The words of enthusiasm and of encouragement that fell from the lips of those present seemed to stir every heart and make them anxious to get into the fray.

Whatever else may be said the democrats of Chilton this year are preparing for victory; they are not sulking in the camp nor are they hopeless. They realize that there is a fight before them and are preparing for it; they know that victory awaits them and they await it with glowing hearts.

The new chairman has already begun his work of organization and e'er many moons have passed he will have the most thorough organization ever perfected in the county.

Let all democrats take heart; victory, this year, is ours.

HON. W. M. ADAMS MADE CHAIRMAN OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The newly elected democratic executive committee of Chilton County met on last Saturday at the Court House upon the call of ex-Chairman H. M. Simpson. Upon a call of the roll there was found to be fourteen present.

Before the organization of the new committee took place there was considerable discussion of party politics in the county. Each member of the committee expressed the opinion that there was more than a fair chance of success this year in so far as his particular precinct was concerned. Not one of all those present uttered a dismal note—it was a love feast from beginning to end in which every one present took part and seemed to enjoy it to the full. Candidates were present and each of them took occasion to express themselves as extremely hopeful of the November results and pledging their untiring energies to the party in any line of action that the committee might suggest. Our nominee for congress from this district—Hon. Fred L. Blackmon, of Anniston—was present and was enthusiastic in his remarks and in his predictions of victory for the county ticket. He promised the committee to aid in every way possible in the forthcoming campaign—offering his personal service to make a precinct campaign if the committee should see fit to call upon him for the service. His speech—though not long—was full of wisdom and hope and good cheer. All in all it was the most enthusiastic meeting held by the democrats of Chilton in many moons. It argues well for success when our farmers will leave their fields and crops and will come, in the busiest season of the year, to attend a party council; it means that they are in earnest and that they are expectant.

Many propositions looking to a vigorous campaign were discussed in the committee room and the chairman was authorized to appoint a central campaign committee to take general charge of the work. This central committee is not of course, to conflict in any way with the executive committee but is to have a general supervision of affairs and to assist the executive committeemen in their respective precincts. After a thorough planning and a thorough discussion of party affairs. Chairman Simpson suggested that the committee go into the election of a new chairman for the ensuing term. This was done and Hon. Wm. M. Adams was named as the party leader for the term. This is a distinct compliment to Mr. Adams as upon his shoulder must largely rest the direction of the campaign. He is to plan as well as to execute; to devise ways and means, to be lookout and safeguard for the party. There is much work to be done—untiring energy must be devoted to the party and Mr. Adams has promised the committee that he shall not be found lagging in anything that tends to party success. But Mr. Adams can not of himself achieve victory; it will take the work of every democrat in the county to bring about such results as the party demands and expects; let us therefore rouse ourselves, open our eyes to the possibilities that confront us and each for himself pledge the chairman our hearty co-operation. It is useless to nominate officers and elect committeemen unless we are willing and ready to support them with our votes, our work and our purses, if necessary. The campaign is going to be a strenuous one. Such a campaign, perhaps, as Chilton has not seen for some years. It is not going to be a campaign of mud slinging but one of truth and fact telling. We are going to burn the camp fires on every hill top and the party expects every democrat in Chilton, like vestal virgins, to keep those fires burning till the close of the November election.

After the business of the committee had been completed the entire committee, together with a few invited guests, repaired to the Palmer Hotel where a bounteous dinner awaited them.

Mr. Wood was selected as secretary of the committee.

If there was a single expression of doubt or of gloom The Press man failed to hear it. From the nominee for congress down to the humblest within the ranks came expressions of good cheer and of victory.

We have the opposition badly worsted this time and we can keep them on the run if democrats will but bestir themselves; if they will but awake to a realization of the actual situation. Never before were the signs of the times more favorable never before were the opportunities more enthusiastic; never before was victory more assuredly within our grasp.

Let every man realize that he, as an individual, has a duty to perform and let him with willing heart and ready hands, go about the performance of that duty.

Mr. Adams we salute you, we extend our best wishes and our earnest efforts to assist you in bringing to Chilton County a rule of democracy under whose benign influences she shall prosper and grow and to which party, alone, the patriotic Southerner may look for relief from the oppressions of a burdensome tariff.

THAT FRIDAY NIGHT.

The Press was somewhat dubious when it called the meeting of citizens for last Friday night. On several other occasions, of blessed memory, we attempted to have meetings of the citizens for the purpose of organizing movements that looked, as we thought, to the material advancement of Clanton and on each occasion there we but two or three present so that the project in hand had to be abandoned, but on last Friday night it was different—much different. Quite a number of interested citizens responded to the call and an enthusiastic meeting was had.

Mr. Adams called the meeting to order and suggested Mr. W. D. Spigener as permanent chairman. Upon taking the chair Mr. Spigener reviewed briefly the story as outlined last week in The Press and stated that the meeting was for the purpose of deciding what action should be taken upon the suggestions made. One by one those present expressed themselves as being in favor of the movement and pledging their support in the event it was decided to "pull off" the FREE AUCTION DAY. Plans for feeding the multitudes that are expected to be present were thrashed out thoroughly; the personnel of committees was discussed, the proper day for observing FREE AUCTION DAY was debated—in fact all that a preliminary meeting could accomplish was done Friday night at the CITIZENS' meeting. It was decided to have the celebration of THURSDAY, JULY FOURTEENTH—this much was positively settled. It is going to be pulled off without a doubt and it's going to be pulled off on Thursday, the fourteenth of July.

Chairman Spigener was authorized and instructed to appoint a General or Central Committee of seven, himself being one of them, to take all necessary steps for the proper observance of the day. This committee consists of the following well known merchants: W. H. Sartor, C. R. Willins, C. F. Jones, J. C. Jones, J. Wiley Littlejohn, W. I. Mullins, W. D. Spigener.

Upon them devolves the duty of appointing the sub committees and of exercising general and special supervision of all the workings of these sub-committees; into their hands falls the execution of all the affairs pertaining to the exercises of the day and to a proper adjustment of all machinery looking to a successful issue of the events to be "pulled off."

Our citizens generaly are requested to co-operate with this general committee and with the sub-committees in the execution of such plans as may be inaugurated. If all will stand together the day will be one long to be remembered in Clanton; if on the contrary there is any bickering or halting the work of the committee will not only be greatly increased but the success of the day will be considerably endangered.

We do not believe that when the plan is once understood by the citizens there is going to be anything but active endorsement and hearty support. The general committee should lose no time in appointing such sub-committees as are necessary and in putting them actively to work organizing and developing. If we are to secure reduced railroad rates—and of course we ought by all means to do so—a committee should be appointed at once to enter into correspondence with the railroad authorities looking to the accomplishment of this purpose—no time is to be lost, for with the reduced rates secured we will have to notify the people of the fact.

Tournament committees ought to be appointed so that they can secure riders and put them to practicing; the same applies to hurdle races and so on down the line. A committee should be appointed to confer with the ladies looking to the feeding of the crowds that are expected.

But The Press does not presume to dictate or even suggest to the committee what its work is or how to do that work; they are men who are accustomed to accomplishing things and this affair will be safe in their hands.

What The Press desires to do is to arouse the enthusiasm of the citizens generally—to get them to see the vast possibilities that this occasion opens up for he town and for the individual citizen. If it succeeds in that purpose it will be perfectly satisfied.

The Press is now in communication with Piano, Talbot, and other northern and western and southern towns looking for special features for the day. Watch it progress as the general committee [illegible]

Now The Press has been jumped on more than once for having the temerity to make suggestions; it has been accused of hatching up schemes for its own aggrandizement without reference to the welfare of the town; it has been intimated that this paper seeks only its own good. We believe that this notion will forever lie buried in the dust when the people grasp the scope of the scheme now in hand. It has in no way sought to "feather its own nest" at the expense of others—it is for CLANTON and CHILTON COUNTY that this paper is striving. We have not sought place on any committee whereby we could show favors or have favors shown; we have not by any word or act suggested one thing that would be of benefit to us and detrimental to others—its been a "square deal" all the way through for the benefit of CLANTON and her people and that is the way we want it to be. LET'S ALL TAKE HOLD AND WORK AND WIN.

PASTOR RESIGNS.

The Baptist Congregation were somewhat surprised on last Sunday morning when Rev. F. M. Woods, for many years the pastor of that church, announced that on the first Sunday in September he would sever his connection with the congregation. It has been less than a year since the pastor was re-elected by the congregation for a term of one year, and the probability is that his term as pastor would have continued to the day of his death had it been left to the choice of the congregation. This being [illegible] announcement of the reverend gentleman came as a great surprise to [illegible] of the congregation. To what point Rev. Mr. Woods will go after he leaves here [illegible] regret to see him leave Clanton.

Wherever he may decide to cast his lot he shall take with him the warm affections of those who know him best—for to know him is to love him.

A HANDSOME BUILDING.

There is a movement on foot among the Masons of Clanton to erect a handsome Masonic temple on the lot owned by that organization. The movement is but in its infancy and what the final outcome will be or when the project will assume tangible shape cannot be said with certainty; but this much can be said: If the Masons undertake to erect the building they will succeed and it will be a building to which the entire town can point with pride. We sincerely hope to be able next week, or real soon, to make the announcement that the contract for the building has been let and the ground broken for the foundation. So mote it be.

A NEW BIBLE.

On last Sunday morning when Rev. F. M. Woods went to his church to conduct the regular Sunday morning services he found lying upon the pulpit a handsomely bound Bible, printed in large clear type and upon fine linen paper, the gift to the Baptist Church by the Ladies of the Aid Society. It is indeed a handsome volumn, one of which any church could well feel proud.

A NEW NAME.

Piano contestants will notice [illegible] a new name in the lists. It is that of little Paul Oden of Thorsby. This young man, the father boy, [illegible] in the [illegible] Piano contest has just begun [illegible] grow in intensity. From now on [illegible] will be interesting to watch [illegible] changes as they occur each week.

LEFT HIS CARD.

Some kind friend called at Will Sartor's store last Sunday morning, and finding that he was not left a reminder of the visit by punching one of the front glasses out, rather by breaking it so badly that it had to be removed.

This habit of attempting to visit store windows is a reprehensible one at best. Find some other place to pass idle hours. Besides endangering the glass front it obstructs the view of those on the inside; one of the principle objects in putting in [illegible] fronts.

ALL DAY SINGING.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather last Sunday quite a large number of people gathered at the Court House to participate in an all day singing. The music was conducted by Mr. R. J. Langston, which in itself, is an assurance of the success of the occasion.

There were present, perhaps, from five to five hundred people and the time was spent in singing hymns of praise and in friendly conversation. All together the day was a most enjoyable one despite the weather.

SUMMER SCHOOL.

Prof. Monroe returned last Saturday from Montgomery where he has been under the care of a physician for throat and eye trouble. The Summer School which was scheduled to open last Monday, but which was laid over on account of Prof. Monroe's condition, will be opened next Monday morning at the Clanton Academy. Prof. Monroe expects quite a large list of pupils.

POPWELL'S SCHOOL HOUSE.

Please give me a small space in your paper to say a few words from this place.

Our debating society is still progressing nicely; our next debate will be at Fairview. We boys of Popwell's are going to meet the Fairview orators in a joint debate in the school house at that place on Saturday night the eighteenth of June. We are anxious that as many of our friends as can will come to this particular debate; a hearty welcome awaits every one. The debate will begin promptly at seven o'clock in the evening or as near that time as it is possible for us to begin. The subject for discussion is "Resolved that intemperance has done more destructive to the human race than war."

The affirmative side will be represented by M. F. Wagner, Rev. W. S. Deason, A. M. Deason, James Roper and Edward Gandy.

Those who will speak for the negative side are: L. A. Popwell, John Culp, D. C. Culp, F. J. Popwell and J. L. Popwell.

The crops in this section of the county are beautiful at present; the farmers are all looking happy over the bright prospects.

The young folks are looking forward to the several picnic occasions that have been arranged with a great deal of pleasure.

It will not be long now before the boys watermelon will be upon the market, and as there are quite a number of patches out this way we are anticipating many moon-light watermelon cuttings.

We are looking forward each week with pleasurable anxiety to the announcement in The Press of the standing of the various contestants in the piano race. It seems that no one able to hold first place for more than one or two weeks at a time and when the place is surrendered to another. However, we are not becomediscouraged because our candidate does not always hold first, or even second place. We know that the race is not always to the swift but to those who keep constantly at it, hence we are going to be in the contest at the close and we believe that we will land at the top notch when the final count is made.

The democrats out this way are congratulating themselves somewhat now over that excellent, enthusiastic meeting of the executive committee on Saturday. We are ready for the fray any time and do not propose to let our efforts till the final curtain rung down in November with democratic officers installed for the ensuing DEMOCRAT.

MACEDONIA.

The folks are quite busy farming paying to no article that reaches them the public prejudice toward a candidate knowing that a man who climbs the ladder of fame by using the steps of others.

Mr. Robinson failed to put in an appearance on last Sunday due, we guess, to the constant showers.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Mahan, of Billingsley, were among relatives here last week. He relates many interesting stories about the prospects for abundant yield of the crops in Chilton this year.

We know only a few more days before Chilton and Coosa counties will be tied together by telephone at Verbena Ferry. The switch board will be placed at Mr. M. W. Gandy's.

Miss Lee Dobbs is the guest of Rebecca J. Sweet this week.

Mrs. E. L. Powell and O. R. Deason, of Verbena, were visitors here the past week.

The children are making special inquiries as to when Prof. Miller's school will open again.

Mr. E. B. Deason, for Probate Judge is the topic of conversation in many parts.

Mr. Robinson will carry East Chilton for Sheriff on the republican ticket.

Mr. S. J. Blackmon, of Marble Valley was a welcomed guest of the town last Sunday.

To Mr. and Mrs. Will Hinton was born, a bouncing baby boy. Mr. Hinton walks the highways and by himself and counting on his fingers.

MOUNTAIN CREEK SOLDIERS' HOME

At 3 p. m., the Charles G. Gunter Chapter, U. D. C., met at the Soldiers' Home to commemorate the birthday of Jefferson Davis the martyred President of the Confederacy.

After a report by Mrs. F. H. Elmore, which the writer was unable to hear but which seemed to be eminently satisfactory to the chapter, the Homespun Dress was sung with such effect as to call for an encore. Next came the opening prayer by Rev. Robert Jones. After this America was sung by the entire audience. This was followed by a reading by Mrs. Harrison. Rev. Robert Jones then read a very succinct sketch of President Davis' life, which entertained the audience very much. Following this Capt. J. M. Simpson spoke of what had been done at Fairview, Ky., the birthplace of President Davis, towards the establishment of "Davis Memorial Park," and of the membership plan by which chapters, camps or individuals, by subscribing certain amounts may obtain certificates of membership of which their children would be proud. Capt. Simpson went on to show that the key to Mr Davis' whole life would be found in self-sacrifice to attain noble ends.

Miss Pearl Blackmon then recited most perfectly, "The Suit of Confederate Gray."

Mr. G. L. Dunsmore then read a long and beautiful extract from a speech delivered by Lucian M. Knight, of Georgia, on a similar occasion, Mrs. F. H. Elmore, while lauding the beauty and eloquence of the speech, took occasion to correct the statement that the idea of Memorial Day originated in Georgia. She stated that it had been proved before the Convention of U. D. C. that Memorial Day existed in Alabama before it was heard of in Georgia.

This was followed by the song "Alabama," with a full chorus. The services were brought to a close by a touching and heartfelt prayer by Capt. J. M. Simpson.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION. ATTENTION, SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS.

The Executive committee met in Clanton Tuesday and arranged program, and place of meeting for the County Sunday school Convention, which is to be held at Verbena, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 5-6. Program will be published next week, if all necessary arrangements can be made. As the time is short, and the work to be done is great, let us all get a hustle on ourselves and make this one of the very best conventions we have ever held. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY.

Let me urge all Sunday-school Superintendents to be sure and elect two delegates, (as that is the number each school is entitled to) at once, please don't delay this matter, for procrastination is the thief of time and has been the cause of many sad defeats.

From now until the convention is over, let us be earnestly engaged in prayer to our Father, that he may give us wisdom to do the things that need to be done, and then we shall be blessed in the doing of them. Let each one be willing to do his or her part in this work for the Master, and then go forward in this great work with the full assurance that God will shower his blessings down on us in our convention work.

Arise, let us be [illegible]. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY.

Fraternally,
A. K. HORN,
County President.

THE SIN OF TODAY.

Can you tell me the sin of today?
That's leading our men and women astray.
Is it a tiger that has no eyes?
Or a cat that is hid and thinks he is wise?

Is it the hat or pretty dress,
Or is it alone selfishness,
Oh! what is the sin of today?
That's leading our men and women astray.

There seems to be a vogue for something new
To the man it's a drink; to the woman dress and go;
But where do they go when ready to start?
It is out together to some pretty park.

There with the beer, cream and lemonade,
They drink and drink until they are crazed,
Then a curse, a fight and a general spew
Until they almost wish that nobody knew.

'Tis at these places out late at night
And slipping around until morning light
And can you tell me the sin of today,
That's sweeping our boys and girls away?

And if our lives were an open book
It would be a shame for even satan to look
And many things if I dared to rhyme
Would surely take too much of the editor's time.

ADVERTISE THEIR LOVE.

Curious Appeals in the Newspapers of Southern Italy.

The printed love letters in the advertising columns of papers in southern Italy fill the tourist with wonder, mingled with deep respect for the sentiment which will pay for their insertion. The following letter, taken from the Palermo Ora, contained 174 words, which at the advertised rate would cost $1.74. If the Italian saying, "a lira is a dollar," is true this would equal a bill of $8.70, which would require a pretty devoted American lover to pay:

Dearest Little One: What have I done to thee? Why this silence after thy promise? I experience from it a grief so violent that it renders me helpless.

Thou art good, my Santuzza, as good as dear; thou knowest how this makes me suffer. Why doest thou do it? Thou knowest how I love thee, thou art my religion. Have I offended thee?

I seek intense occupation to keep me calm, but a thousand thoughts gnaw my soul. Perhaps while you amuse yourself you do not know how your silence agitates me. O dear Madonna mine, darling, darling, my blessed joy do not forget me; thou art my life, all there is for me, my good Santuzza.

I could not longer live without thee. Forgive me if I have offended thee in any way, blessed little bird. Here all is as if thou wert to arrive at any moment. I seek to create for myself this most beautiful illusion, ever speaking to thee, vainly expecting news from thee with every post, with a violently beating heart.

Do not believe me bad; I love thee so much; I kiss thy dear lips, thy most entrancing little countenance, all infinite passion and tenderness. I am insane to hear once more thy dear, enchanting voice.

There were eleven letters of this kind in the same issue of the Ora, about an average number for a Palermo papers. Such letters are found in all Italian papers, but they get shorter and shorter as you travel north until in Milan one line in the "agony column" suffices to express the lover's anguish.

A style which seems theatrical to an American seems perfectly natural to an Italian. He will write exactly this sort of love letter in private.

Meaning of the Willow Pattern.

The willow pattern is a Chinese design and very ancient, dating probably as far back as the 13th century; less than two centuries later it was reproduced in the potteries of Holland. This pattern is a very complicated design containing many figures in small space. In the foreground is a palatial building, around which cluster impossible trees laden with flowers and fruit.

Close by is a lake, an inlet from which is spanned by a bridge, over which hang the drooping limbs of a willow tree, and far out in the lake a boat. Three figures are passing over the bridge, while high up in the air a pair of billing and cooing doves are suspended. The imaginary legend of the willow pattern design is said to be as follows:

A nobleman living in the palace had a fair daughter who had fallen in love with a youth of low degree. One night, with the help of a ladder, the youth abducted the willing maiden and the somewhat shapeless figures on the bridge are supposed to represent the fleeing damsel carrying her bundle of finery, the daring lover, bearing the ladder, and the irate father, having in his hand an instrument of castigation.

The boat in the distance is meant to represent the agent in the escape of the devoted lovers from the wrath of the angry parent, while the doves overhead symolize the fact that they married and lived happily ever after, in the manner of the usual mythical tale.—Housekeeper.

It takes just as much sense to back out when wrong as to be sure you're right before going ahead.

FEED CHILDREN

On Properly Selected Food. It Pays Big Dividends.

If parents will give just a little intelligent thought to the feeding of their children, the difference in the health of the little folks will pay, many times over, for the small trouble.

A mother writes saying: "Our children are all so much better and stronger than they ever were before we made a change in the character of the food. We have quit using potatoes three times a day with coffee and so much meat.

"Now we give the little folks some fruit, either fresh, stewed, or canned, some Grape-Nuts with cream, occasionally some soft boiled eggs, and some Postum for breakfast and supper. Then for dinner they have some meat and vegetables.

"It would be hard to realize the change in the children, they have grown so sturdy and strong, and we attribute this change to the food elements that, I understand, exist in Grape-Nuts and Postum.

"A short time ago my baby was teething and had a great deal of stomach and bowel trouble. Nothing seemed to agree with him until I tried Grape-Nuts softened and mixed with rich milk and he improved rapidly and got sturdy and well."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. "There's a Reason." Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. W. L. DAVISON.

Theme: Christ's Way.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning the new pastor of the Fleet Street M. E. Church, the Rev. Dr. William L. Davison, began his ministry there. He was appointed from Jamaica to replace the Rev. E. G. Richardson, who went to Bristol, Conn. He was cordially received. The subject of his sermon was "Christ's Way." The text was taken from John 14:6: "I am the way, the truth and the life." Dr. Davison said:

These words were spoken to Thomas. This man stands in the eyes of many as the New Testament type of the honest doubter. As to his doubt or his real desire to be sure—that is a matter of viewpoint and interpretation. This, however, is true—he was not of that Old Testament type represented as the fool, saying: "There is no God!" There is a vast difference between the man who, in his heart, gives utterance to such blasphemy, and the man who desires to have unimpeachable evidence. The one would be glad to have Deity blotted out. The existence of a holy God who cannot look upon evil with any degree of allowance is a constant reproach to his evil heart and way, and a menace to his manner of life. He, therefore, would shout for joy if omnipotent justice could be obliterated.

Thomas, on the other hand, represents that resplendent type of intellectual manhood that really desires to find solution for the fondest wish of his heart. Therefore, when he comes to Jesus with his questionings he comes as the type of questioner who really wishes a solution of his intellectual and spiritual problem. And so I bring this text as an answer to the man who is a seeker of the true way of life—as to the axiom of truth and as to the solution of any life's problems that may confront his progress.

Now, we are perfectly familiar with what Jesus meant when He said: "I am the life." We may not understand precisely the process of that life that comes from Him; it is the mystery of mysteries; it is the entire outgiving of the regenerating life of God, and who can enter into the deeper counsels of the Most High? Nicodemus desired to know how these things could be—he a master in Israel and leader of the Jewish faith—yet Jesus Christ gave him no satisfaction. Perhaps it was because of the limitation and poverty of the human intellect.

We know something of what Jesus meant when He said, "I am the truth." There must be some standard, some infallible court of appeals by which men may judge the varying hypotheses that have been exploited by the human intellect. When we come to Jesus Christ we realize that He Himself is the last solution of the vexing and changing problems of all time. So I say, we have some conception of this aspect of the text.

But what did the Christ mean when He said "I am the way?" It is here that we must recall those untranslatable terms of Scripture, terms that baffle the student of language as he attempts to bring over the full meaning of one language to another. For example, the Scriptures contain words that cannot be perfectly rendered in our English tongue. When, on the morning of the resurrection, Jesus said to Mary Magdalene, "Rabboni," we must understand its historical setting in order to even faintly grasp its meaning, and the translators bring over the word bodily into our English version.

When Jesus, in the garden, uttered that word "Abba," the nearest approach we have to its pathos of meaning is our tender expression "papa," and here again we have the word in the original. The same is true of that form of divine despair, "Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani." One of the great works on the third person of the blessed Trinity is entitled the "Paraclete," and so in this category we place this word "the way" and might show by numerous Scriptural citations that it is not our English term of the manner or direction of one's going.

In our ordinary life we say of a man his way is attractive or repulsive. We cannot further define this attraction or repulsion. It is simply that there is a somewhat about his personality that is either good or evil in our sight. It is not what we do, it is not what we say, it is what we are that counts mightily in our relation to mankind. In our religious life we are coming to the place where the phraseology of religious expression is a matter of very small moment; it is not creed but character that counts. Indeed, I believe that this is but a reversion of type, for the early Christians, the primitive followers of the Christ, were known as "those of the way," and Scripture gives us numerous expressions that might shed some light on certain aspects of the important truth contained in this term.

For example, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man." It is possible for us, though we may not fully portray the majesty of meaning contained in this title word to emphasize certain aspects and ideals of Him who said, "I am the way." Thus by studying the Christ we may affirm that Christ's way is a pleasant way. I shrink not from saying that the fundamental craving of the human heart is for pleasure. Not that pleasure that, tendered unto sin, Christ's way, if it be God's way, must be a way that is pleasant. It is true that He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, but this is only the half truth, and the other aspect of this way is recorded in that Scripture, "In Thy presence is fullness of joy, at Thy right hand are pleasures for evermore." We may have many tribulations, we may be born to trouble, we may encounter dangers and temptations, we may be misunderstood all and above all in the wilderness of this world, but the way of the Christ

ORANGES BY MILLIONS.

Florida Now Sending Out Its Golden Crop.

If any one has a notion that orange growing in Florida is waning or that the frequent frosts that have been reported from this state have discouraged the orange growers, he is not familiar with the conditions as they exist at this beautiful spot. Florence Villa, the "Plantation Home," as it is called, is situated east of Tampa, and about midway between the Atlantic ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. It is off the main line of travel, but can be reached by frequent trains on the Bartow branch of the Atlantic Coast line.

It is called the heart of the orange belt, and at this point it is said are located the largest and best orange groves in the state. There can certainly be no doubt as to the extent of the industry nor the quality of the product, for from the balcony upon which I am sitting one looks out over a vast grove of 45,000 trees and beyond that other groves, so that from this point it is claimed that more than 100,000 trees can be seen. Almost every tree is loaded to its utmost capacity with its wonderful golden harvest, which is now being gathered and hurried to the markets of the north and west. Literally millions of the most luscious of oranges, grape fruit and tangerines are to be seen on every hand. "Pick and eat without stint," is the invitation to all comers.

Through the hot, white sands the mule teams are now hauling this choice crop from the pickers to the great packing house, from which it is being shipped at the rate of from four to ten carloads a day, and these shipments will continue to the first of May. The fruit is never touched by the naked hands from the time it leaves the tree until it reaches the consumer. Every grapefruit is washed and dried before packing, and any person who handles the fruit of any kind or quality is required to wear clean, white cloth gloves, which are furnished by the management. By ingenious machinery the continuous streams of fruit are carried along after reaching the packing house under trained eyes of the inspectors, who classify it as regards color and quality, throwing out the imperfect and for any reason undesirable until finally, by other ingenious machines, it is separated according to sizes and deposited in the bins to be papered and packed for shipment. To the northerner, who makes the jump as we did from 6 below zero to this perfect climate, with the temperature today of 75 degrees or over, all this is interesting and fascinating in the extreme.—Florence Villa Correspondent Hartford Courant.

Announcement of Peace.

It was in the year 1865, that Gideon Welles wrote in his diary, as published in the Atlantic Monthly:—"Stanton called at my house about six o'clock p. m. and invited me to a hasty Cabinet convention at eight o'clock p. m., April 21. When we had assembled General Grant and Preston King were also present. Stanton briefly mentioned that General Grant had important communications from General Sherman and requested that he would read them, which he did. It stated he had made a peace, if satisfactory, with the rebels."

The one who is favored seldom thinks comparisons odious.

The Whole Seat Hog.

The end sea hog has changed his name since the advent of the new type of street car. He is now the whole seat hog, and the enhanced market value of his humble prototype of the farm adds nothing to his attractiveness or his respectability. He tries to spread his disgusting bulk over the space intended for two persons, and if you gently intimate a desire to share the seat he grudgingly gives up about one-fourth of it, compelling you to project half of your anatomy into the aisle, thus adding to the discomfort of the unfortunates still standing there. His companion of the opposite sex is occasionally found in the same car. Would that it were possible to tie them together and sink them forever in the lowest depths of the oubliette!—Chicago Tribune.

Household Helps.

It is surprising the many different appetizing ways that Corned Beef can be prepared for the family's meals. Every one likes Corned Beef and there is no more healthful or delicious dish than Libby's, carefully selected fresh prime beef and properly "cured."

There is some waste, to be sure, when bought at the butcher's, but in the plan here suggested you may buy the finest corned beef in the world in which there is absolutely no waste and every particle of which can be eaten.

Suppose you ask your grocer for Libby's Corned Beef. It represents all full value—no bone, no gristle—just clean, pure corned beef selected first hand from the finest beef stock—no scraps or second pieces—and corned and cooked to perfection in Libby's wonderful white enamel kitchens. A can of Libby's Corned Beef sliced and served cold with dill pickles and potato salad is a delightful meal and will be enough for four people.

Corned Beef Hash.—Take the contents of a can, chop fine, add one-fourth as much boiled or baked potatoes, a little fried onion and a small quantity of water. Cook slowly until thoroughly heated, then serve on toast with or without poached eggs.

Corned Beef Omelette.—Beat the yolks and whites of four eggs separately and add one-half of the whites to all of the yolks. Put in a hot frying pan and, when nicely browned on the bottom, sprinkle a cup of minced corned beef over it. Spread over this the remainder of the whites, put in the oven and brown on top. Then fold and serve.

Creamed Corned Beef.—Mince the contents of a can of Libby's Corned Beef. Put over this a dressing of cream gravy with the yolk of an egg beaten into it. Serve on toast.

New England Boiled Dinner.—You may have this in one-fourth of the time it usually takes. Put a can of Libby's Corned Beef in boiling water—it is already cooked—and serve in the usual manner with vegetables.

Besides the economy in the use of Libby's Corned Beef, another great advantage to the housewife in using it is that it is all cooked when bought and there is no necessity for the long, tedious and expensive boiling which is necessary with raw corned beef. The house is not filled with steam and odors and valuable time is saved. Libby's Corned Beef is ready at once for serving in any one of the many ways mentioned above, and you will find it a great convenience to try it next time. Be sure you get Libby, McNeill & Libby's Corned Beef.

Sixteen Years of Skin Disease.

"For sixteen long years I have been suffering with a bad case of skin disease. While a child there broke out a red sore on the legs just in back of my knees. It waxed from bad to worse, and at last I saw I had a bad skin disease. I tried many widely known doctors in different cities, but to no satisfactory result. The plague bothered me more in warm weather than in winter, and being on my leg joints it made it impossible for me to walk, and I was forced to stay indoors in the warmest weather. My hopes of recovery were by this time spent. Sleepless nights and restless days made life an unbearable burden. At last I was advised to try the Cuticura Remedies [Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills], and I did not need more than a trial to convince me that I was on the road of success this time. I bought two sets of the Cuticura Remedies and after these were gone I was a different man entirely. I am now the happiest man that there is at least one true cure for skin diseases. Leonard A. Hawtof, 11 Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., July 20, and August 8, 1909."

Literary Housekeeping.

She laid down her pencil and went into the room to rearrange her hair. Her husband glanced at the MS. upon which she was working and by which she hoped to achieve literary fame.

"She swept the room with a quick glance," he read. Then picking up the pencil he added:

"Ah! if she would only sweep our rooms with an ordinary broom once in a while."

But this passage did not appear in the completed narrative.—Brooklyn Life.

Couldn't Understand.

Dr. Simon Flexner, the brilliant head of the Rockefeller Institute, urged, at a dinner party in New York, the higher education of the masses.

"The newest laws of hygiene," he said, "can't be inculcated save among those who thoroughly understand them. Take the case of Dash.

"Dash, a rich country scientist, decided to encourage cremation among the villagers. So when the old salt-man died Dash urged his widow to have the corpse cremated.

"'No, sir,' said the old woman. 'I'll not cremate him. I'll put him under the sod.'

"'But the cremation won't cost you a cent,' said Dash. 'I'll pay all the expenses if you'll let me have him cremated.'

"'Well, I agree,' said the woman in a hesitating voice. 'I'm too poor not to agree, sir.'

"Then she gave Dash a puzzled look, half of pity, half of contempt.

"'But why do you do it?' she said. 'Is it a baby like you call a shrimp or—'"—Washington Star.

A Cautious Judge.

Some years ago there was a trial for murder in Ireland in which the evidence was so palpably insufficient that the judge stopped the case and directed the jury to return a verdict of "Not guilty."

The Lewis and Clark Expedition.

Lewis and Clark—from April 7 till August 11, 1806—starting from St. Louis, worked up the Missouri and its Jefferson fork in boats, and then made their way through the mountains to the headwaters of the Columbia, down which they sailed to its mouth, and came out upon the Pacific coast on November 7, after a journey of nearly 4,000 miles. The object of the expedition was twofold—to support our claim to the Columbia River region, which had been discovered by Captain Gray in 1792, and to determine what bearings, if any, the purchase of Louisiana might have upon the question of our rights in the Columbia country.—New York American.

Have you noticed the beautiful and artistic work that is being done for Clanton people by Samuel Scott, the photographer. Why go to other cities for your photographs when you can secure equally as good, if not superior work in your own home town? Studio in Reynolds' building. tf

Mr. Harvey Chandler, of the Clanton Ice-Cream Parlor, left on last Tuesday morning for Nashville and other points to "lay in a stock" for his house—and incidentally to have a good time.

Mr. Lon Gullahorn, of Pelham, an old Clanton citizen, spent last Sunday circulating with his numerous friends here.

The following members of the Democratic Executive Committee were in town last Saturday in attendance upon the committee meeting: Messrs. H. C. Young and T. L. McKee, of Beat One; W. H. Killingsworth (proxy) of Jemison, W. M. Oden, of Thorsby, John Parrish, Jr., of Beat Four, I. J. Huitt, of Beat Six, E. F. Mead, of Thorsby, S. D. Williams, of Verbena, C. A. Retherford and J. T. Davis of Jemison, W. H. Hayes of Beat Fifteen, W. J. Robinson of Beat Sixteen. Besides these there were numerous others who came in to attend the meeting and to give aid and encouragement to those who have the management of the party affairs.

The Clanton Ice-Cream Parlor is the place for refreshing beverages and delicious creams. Remember this when you are out with your best girl. tf

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hubbard, of Mountain Creek, spent Sunday with Mrs. J. Watts Moore.

Sheriff Catts came up from his home Monday to spend a few days. He is looking considerably better than he was a few days since. Sheriff Catts had a fearfully close escape from death at the hands of that negro brute and the County should, by all means, offer a reward for his capture.

Mr. E. M. Pinckard left Monday afternoon on a business trip to Nashville and other markets.

Drs. P. I. Hopkins and N. S. Johnson left Saturday for New York, where they go each to take a special course in medicine.

Please bear in mind that the Clanton Ice-Cream Parlor runs electric fans and furnishes the most refreshing drinks in town. Ice-cream fit for a king, too. tf

Mr. S. W. Catts, a son of Sheriff Catts, and a prominent citizen of Dora, in Walker County, was a visitor to Clanton Monday, having come down to learn the extent of his father's injuries in the conflict with the negro highwayman, Wade Raiford.

Slowly but surely the electric lights along the streets are increasing in numbers and with each additional light the pleasure of living in Clanton increases.

The two rooms in the front of the Baptist church auditorium have been torn away preparatory to extensive improvements.

Ten Years for Robbing Woman.

Bob Welch, a white man, was convicted in the city court of Gadsden of robbing a negro woman of $1.50. He was given a sentence of ten years. An appeal was taken to the supreme court.

Attempts Suicide; Mother Dies.

J. L. Carden, the Louisville and Nashville conductor who had both feet cut off three months ago in a railroad accident at Boyles, attempted to commit suicide at St. Vincent's Hospital, Birmingham, by cutting a deep gash in his throat with a razor. When a telegram was sent to the man's mother, Mrs. Malissa Carden, of Glasgow, Ky., the shock of the news killed her. Authorities at the hospital state that Carden will live.

Sells Bonds to Build a City Hall.

The city of Decatur has sold $25,000 worth of bonds to A. J. Hood, of Detroit, Mich. The money will be used to build a city hall, the location for which has not yet been selected.

Marion Wants Railroad.

Since the agitation of a railway line from Birmingham to Selma the people of Marion are making an effort to bring the line through to Marion. An effort will be made to bring Uniontown and Linden into the movement.

Frank Moore Fatally Injured.

Falling timbers fatally injured Frank Moore, 17 years old, at his father's lumber yards at Anniston when the young man ventured too close to a lumber pile which was not substantially put up.

Official notice has been issued to the effect that commencing June 1 the employes of the Louisville and Nashville railroad shops in New Decatur will get an increase in pay. The increase will be, it is understood, from 10 to 25 cents a day.

Alabama Gives Window.

Six southern states Friday honored the memory of their soldier dead, who fell before Petersburg, Va., during the civil war by dedicating memorial windows in the old Blandford church in the cemetery of which lie buried those martyrs of a lost cause. Alabama's window was presented by Gen. Josiah Walker and accepted by Mrs. Caroline Brown.

Clanton's Latest Improvement

The Optical Parlors just fitted up by the Clanton Building Company for Dr. J. V. Higgins—the up-to-date Jeweler and Optician for Chilton County is now one of the most attractive places in Clanton—the city that grows.

When your eyes are giving you trouble you can feel well assured that you will make no mistake in calling upon Dr. Higgins to fit you with a pair of glasses that will relieve all troubles.

Dr. Higgins is a graduate of one of the most famous optical colleges in the United States and is thoroughly capable of attending to all eye afflictions.

The following is a testimonial received last Tuesday from Judge Reynolds, one of Higgins' patients:—

Office of Judge of Probate for Chilton County.
Clanton, Ala., May 3d, 1910.

Dr. J. V. Higgins,
Dear Sir:—

After several weeks trial of the eye glasses fitted for me by you I am glad to state that they give me entire satisfaction, and that I appreciate them very much indeed, as I have suffered considerably with my eyes of late till relieved by you.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds.

The above is a testimonial from one of Chilton County's most influential citizens.
Is there any good reason why you should not also patronize Dr. Higgins and secure the benefits of modern Optical [illegible]

NEIGHBORHOOD PICNIC.

There is to be a great neighborhood picnic at Patillo Bros.'s saw mill on next Saturday to which every one is invited. Baseball games and other amusements have been arranged and a general good time awaits all who attend.

Mr. Higgins, the eye specialist, has arranged for the convenience of those living in that section to be at the picnic and to serve them in any capacity required.

BADLY BURNED.

On last uesday morning early, while canning some beans, Mrs. Elbert Littlejohn happened to quite a serious accident which may confine her to her room for some days.

While the injuries sustained are not serious they are quite painful, and seriously inconvenient.

It seems that she had filled the can and was in the act of sealing it when the can exploded with great force, the entire contents, steaming hot, was blown into her face and about the upper portion of her body. A physician was immediately summoned and upon examination he reported that the eyes were not seriously injured, and that this good lady would soon be able to attend her regular household duties.

Mrs. Littlejohn has the sincere sympathy of all her friends in this misfortune.

GENE MARTIN SEEN.

On last Tuesday morning early, his brother-in-law, Will Zimmerman, two weeks ago on the outskirts of the town, has not yet left his old stamping ground, if reports be true. He was seen last Monday by two or three persons walking across a field just in the rear of the Wilson home, and when he discovered that he was seen he lost no time in making his presence scarce. When seen he was walking leisurely across the field with a doublebarrel shotgun.

FARMERS' UNION MEETING.

The Chilton County Farmers' Union will meet with Minooka local No. 447 at Minooka Station on Wednesday and Thursday, June 22, 23, 1910.

Delegates and others coming by rail should get off at Minooka. State lecturer O. P. Ford has promised to be with us and we hope to have a representative from every local in the county.

Yours for business,

J. M. SMITH,
County Secretary.

HAAMAN'S TOWER.

Sheriff Catts has the carpenters now engaged erecting the scaffold on which, on Monday morning Mr. Wiley Young, the convicted murderer of young Cleve Holditch, will pay the penalty inflicted by the law.

There seems to be quite a lot of sympathy on the part of many citizens over the hanging of Young, and many are inclined to criticise Sheriff Catts for not erecting a grand platform upon which sight-seers may seat themselves—something in the form of an amphitheatre or grand stand for a baseball park. The fact is that Sheriff Catts has nothing to do with it; if he had it would be rather hard to predict just what his action in the matter would be, but as it is the law says that executions shall be private, and it instructs the sheriff as to who shall be present at the execution. It is not, therefore, within the prerogative of the sheriff to admit all who are morbidly curious and wish to wish to see the execution. However, the execution will take place within the enclosure at the jail, and at the time set by the law—Monday morning—unless something unforseen occurs to prevent it.

Sheriff Catts has purchased the rope with which the work is to be done, and is now in process of being prepared so that no mishaps will occur on the day of execution.

ALL DAY IN THE WOODS; SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

The scholars of the Methodist Sunday school have been prompt and regular in their attendance during the present year and Superintendent Stanley, feeling that such faithfulness should be rewarded, broached the subject of a picnic to the younger scholars several Sundays ago. Immediately the face of every little tot within the auditorium began to brighten and many a suppressed laughter filled the air. Nor were these smiles confined entirely to the little ones, for the writer saw the faces of quite a number of older persons grow radiant as they contemplated a whole day in the woods with the children romping and scampering over the hills. Anyway, the Sunday school has decided to have a picnic, and has not yet been positively fixed, but it will be within the next ten days. The selection of the time and place was left to the teachers of the Sunday school and they, in turn, delegated this duty to those having in charge the classes composed of the younger children.

The Press was hopeful that it could give this morning some cheering news as to the FREE AUCTION DAY, but we regret to say that as yet there "is nothing doing." The central committee of seven was to have met last Monday night, but for one reason or another there were but three members of the committee present, so that nothing definite was decided upon further than that it would be best to abandon the project and keep on in the even tenor of our way, emphasizing the fact that we are still citizens of Sleepy Hollow. There is no doubt but that the citizens generally are anxious for the celebration to take place; a majority of them have so expressed themselves in The Press; they realize the benefits to accrue from the celebration and are ready and willing after a fashion, to go into it, but each one says, "Count me in," and that is about as far as anyone seems willing to go. "Counting in" isn't worth a bent copper coin when it comes to getting up a celebration. One or two cannot plan and execute the entire programme and unless something more than a "counting in" is done the affair will, like most of the suggestions of The Press, have to take a back seat.

We thought from the beginning that the movement took on we would have a big day in Clanton, but if each sits silent and waits for the other to do things it is far better that it be not undertaken at all.

And just here, let us say that The Press has learned a severe lesson. It comes a little hard for us to digest it, for we believe in trying to do something even if it is not more than to turn a chunk. We believe in advertising the town, talking it, boosting the town and trying to [illegible] help shove it up the hill. This has been the motto of The Press since it was established, but one thing is abundantly evident, either the people object to The Press trying to help along in civic improvements and in boosting the town or else they do not care to move up. Either they take a suggestion of The Press as an impertinence or else they prefer to remain "in statu quo;" either they have decided that a new-comer has no right or business trying to help along in things that would tend to strengthen the town, or else they are entirely satisfied with present conditions.

We have learned our lesson. The Press will hereafter maintain silence. We've been here now eighteen months and more and have never heard or read a suggestion eminating from any other paper tending toward the upbuilding of the town; they seem to prosper and we have about come to the conclusion that it's a good way to prosper. From now on, hard as it will prove, we are going to keep our lips closed and let some one else do the suggesting. We are going to continue to do the best job printing in the county and to publish the best newspaper in the county, and to work tiringly for democracy's cause, but when it comes to suggestions we are down and out. We've learned our lesson.

We are not writing in a vindictive vein or sulking—the people have a right to reject any proposition they see fit to reject; they have an inalienable right to withhold their support from any movement which does not meet with their approval; they have—and exercise—a presumtive right to squelch any fellow who makes suggestions when those suggestions are not in accord with the will of the people.

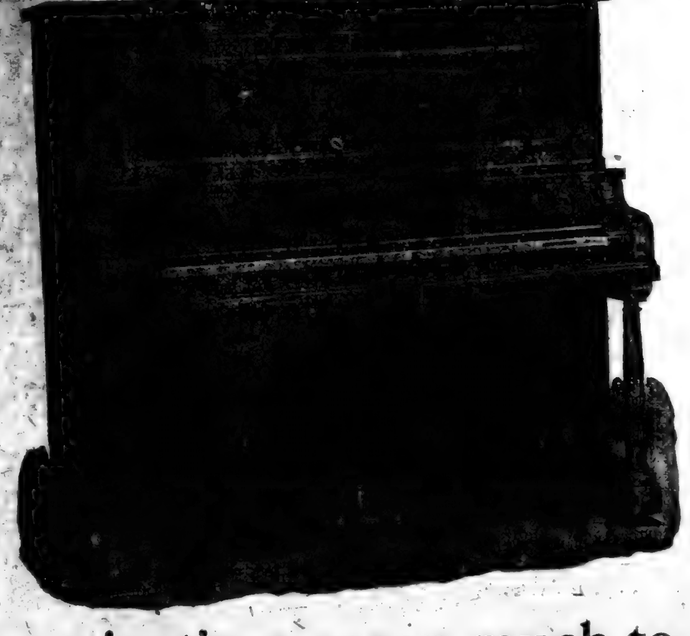
We do not mean to say that the movement is dead by any manner of means; we think it is like the Centurion's daughter—only sleeping—and that when the people have forgotten that it was a suggestion of The Press they will take it up and carry it on to a successful finish.

Too many of the merchants and too many of the farmers have expressed approval of the plan for it to die entirely; when the odor of the Press has faded away it will again come up serenely and will be a success from every point of view.

It may be that the movement will yet materialize—we hope so—for we know what it will mean for Clanton.

On Monday last Wiley Young called for Deputy Sheriff Smitherman and began something in the nature of a confession of the crime with which he is charged and for which he is to hang. Soon after his opening remarks Mr. Smitherman discovered that Wiley was telling a tale somewhat a variance with that related upon the witness stand by eye witnesses to the murder and he reminded Wiley that he was standing in the very shadow of death; that a falsehood now would avail him nothing and that while he might be able to deceive his fellowmen there was One whom he could not deceive. When Wiley heard these solemn words he seemed to have realized his position and turning to Mr. Smitherman, said, "You come back here in a day or two and I'll have something to tell you." Evidently the condemned negro does not realize even yet the fearful doom that awaits him or else he is hopeful that in the last hour something will arise that will save him from the hangman's noose.

ALL DAY SINGING.



The Press is informed that there is to be an all day singing at the court house on next Sunday. From the information gleaned we understand that the purpose is to use the new hymn books, an organ is also to be provided and a general pleasant day is to be spent by those who enjoy singing hymns of praise and thanksgiving.

A BUCKING BRONCHO.

Last Saturday night, just as the shades of evening were falling, the delivery horse of Ruffin & Son took it into his little cranium that things were not moving quite rapidly enough and that he would inject a dash of ginger into things generally, so cutting the action to the shoulder he started off on a wild scamper up the street, drawing the delivery wagon behind him. Every one is invited to participate and will be given every assistance and all information ticket to enable them to become the owner of this elegantly finished Piano and receipt for partial payment on another fine Piano.

READ THE PLAN CAREFULLY AND START EARLY; EACH DAY MEANS MUCH IN THE RUNNING.

In addition to the five hundred votes for cash subscriptions to the Clanton Press, the proprietors of the paper will give five votes in the contest for each one cent of cash advertising or cash job work that is brought to the office of the Clanton Press.

These votes are to be cast at the pleasure of the holder for the person nominated by the holder of the ticket.

Each ticket is plainly printed and contains a space for the name of the person for whom you wish to vote to be written thereon.

In case of a tie between contestants receiving the highest and next highest votes the prizes, or an amount equal to the value of the prizes, will be equally divided between them.

In addition to the votes given out by the Clanton Press we have arranged with several merchants to handle these Contest Tickets so that you may receive the benefit of your cash trade with them.

Below will be found the names of the merchants who will distribute Contest Tickets. With each one cent of cash trade done with them you are entitled to receive a ticket for one vote in the contest. Remember, one vote for each one cent of cash trade. If you spend one dollar in cash with them you are entitled to one hundred votes. If you spend ten dollars you are entitled to one thousand votes and so on. To obtain these tickets you will have to trade in Cash as no tickets will be given out for credit purchases. Each ticket will denote the number of votes to which you are entitled. For the convenience of the people two boxes will be used, one will be kept at the Upchurch Drug Company and the other at the office of The Clanton Press. Write on the ticket the name of the party for whom you wish to vote and deposit it in one of these boxes.

From time to time the names of the contestants and the number of votes each has received will be announced in the columns of the Press. Keep your eye on these announcements so that you can put your "best girl"—be she wife, sweetheart or daughter—up at the top of the column.

When you trade with merchants handling the contest ticket be sure to ask for them; you are entitled to them and they will gladly give them to you.

POSTAL BANK BILL PASSED IN SENATE

All Republicans Favor Measure, Which Goes Through by Big Majority.

DIFFERS FROM SENATE BILL

Minority Measure Is Voted Down, Even Democrats Opposing It—Goes to Conference.

Washington, D. C.—By the overwhelming majority of 195 to 101 the house passed the postal savings bank bill as recently agreed upon by the Republican caucus of the house. Not a single Republican voted against the measure on the final roll call. Prior to this action the house by 113 to 196 rejected the Democratic substitute for the bill proposed by the majority.

The large defection among the Democrats was shown when the Democratic substitute was voted upon, 21 of them joining the Republicans in voting against the measure, most of whom were opposed to a postal savings system of any kind. On the Republican side, Norris of Nebraska, "insurgent," was the only member who voted with the Democrats for their substitute.

On agreeing to the bill as proposed by the majority of the house, as a substitute for the senate measure, the vote was 175 to 105. On this vote 26 Democrats joined the Republicans. Six Republicans joined the Democrats in voting against the proposed bill of the majority.

After a momtion of Mr. Moon of Tennessee, to recommit the bill to the committee which reported it, had been defeated the house voted on the final passage, the vote being 195 to 101, 24 Democrats voting with the Republicans.

Under the terms of the bill a board of trustees is created consisting of the postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general, who shall declare what postoffices shall become postal savings banks. Deposits in these banks made by any one person shall not be more than $100 a month or exceed in total $500. An account may be opened with $10 but stamps of 10 cents each will be issued for those desiring to accumulate money to be deposited. On deposits 2 per cent interest per annum is to be paid. Any depositor can exchange his deposits for government bonds to be issued in denominations of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100 or $500, to bear interest at 2 per cent per annum. The money accumulated in the postal savings banks is to be deposited in both National and State banks in the vicinity of the postoffices in which the money is deposited by the people, such banks to pay 2¼ per cent interest.

Five per cent of the total deposits is to be retained by the secretary of the treasury as a cash reserve. Not more than 30 per cent of these deposits may be withdrawn by the government at any one time for investment in bonds of the United States, the remaining 65 per cent to remain on deposit in the banks.

The banks are required to give as security for the deposits they receive "public bonds or other securities supported by the taxing power," which restricts such securities to some form of national, state, municipal or other such bonds approved by the board of trustees in charge of the postal savings banks.

The bill passed by the house as a substitute for the senate bill differs from the senate measure in many particulars, chiefly in respect to the nature of securities that may be given by banks for the deposits of postal savings funds received.

GOVERNMENT WINS VICTORY

Alleged Bucket Shop Cases Transferred to Washington.

Philadelphia—The six men arrested in this city on April 2, charged by the government with conspiracy in connection with the operation of alleged bucket shops in the district of Columbia, were ordered removed to Washington. Judge McPherson in the United States supreme court here deciding that the defendants can be taken to that city by the federal authorities for trial. An appeal was immediately taken to the supreme court of the United States.

The defendants are Thomas Campbell, Marshall Parrish, Humphrey Evans, Harry Stumpf, George Turner and Albert Ford. They were arrested on warrants issued in the District of Columbia at the time the Washington authorities made a raid on alleged bucket shops in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Jersey City and New York.

The government considers the decision of Judge McPherson an important one and it may lead to further action in the crusade against alleged bucket shops.

Bank Closed.

Wooster, O.—The doors of the Marshallville Banking Company, a private bank at Marshallville, Wayne county, were closed after a run during which part of the depositors were paid. NATIONAL GRAFT CRUSADE

Organization With Open Offices at Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.—The first concerted step toward suppressing graft in all its forms throughout the country will be taken here when the organization, whose future name probably will be the "National Anti-Graft Movement," will open offices in this city, from which it will conduct its campaign. Harry W. Walker will be in charge. The movement is the direct result of the antigraft speech made last week by Former Governor Folk of Missouri at a banquet tendered him by the Missouri Democracy.

It is said that considerable funds already have been pledged to put the organization on a substantial basis, and that it will have the moral support of leading theologians representing all phases of religious thought.

Among those who are said to be prominently identified with the movement are Perry Belmont, Rudolph Spreckels, Augustus Thomas, the playwright; Joseph J. Willett of Alabama and Norman Hapgood.

The date for holding the first national convention, it is expected, will be fixed this week in Paris, where Messrs. Belmont and Spreckels will hold a conference.

March Figures Show This Increase Since 1897—Advance Has Been Constant.

Washington—Beginning with September, 1908, there has been a monthly increase in wholesale prices, without a break, up to March, 1910, and during the latter month the prices were higher than at any time in the preceding 20 years, according to a report which has just been issued by the bureau of labor.

The report is based upon an investigation of 257 commodities, and says that the wholesale prices during March of the current year were 7.5 per cent higher than in March, 1909, 10.2 per cent higher than in August, 1908, 21.1 per cent higher than the average yearly price of 1900, 49.2 per cent higher than the average yearly price of 1897, and 33.8 per cent higher than the average price for the 10 years 1890 to 1899.

MORE SMALL BILLS

Treasury Department to Supply Banks With Ones and Twos.

Washington, D. C.—The Treasury Department has taken steps to increase the supply of small bills, for which there always is a heavy demand during the fall months of the year. Especially is this the case with the $1 and $2 denominations, their issue legally being limited to the silver certificates.

Recently the Comptroller of the Currency, at the request of the Treasurer, addressed the national banks to ascertain what proportion of the silver certificates of $10 and over held by them they might be willing to exchange for notes of smaller denominations. There have been inquiries made and these are now being compiled for the Treasurer's consideration.

Washington, D. C.—The conference report on the river and harbor bill was adopted in the senate by a vote of 45 to 12. Labor Clause Eliminated.

The action of the senate committee on appropriations in striking out of the sundry civil appropriation bill the house provision directing that no part of the money appropriated for enforcing the anti-trust law shall be utilized in the prosecution of combinations looking to the increase of wages, the shortening of hours and the betterment of the conditions of labor, was sustained by the senate after an animated debate. The vote was 34 to 16.

Message on Tariff.

President Taft transmitted to the house of representatives a statement of negotiations between the United States and all foreign governments under the maximum and minimum provisions of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. The message contained summaries of reports obtained by the state department through instructions issued to diplomatic and consular officers, and related especially to differential and discriminatory treatment of the United States.

PEARY SUED FOR $10,000

Associate of Dr. Cook Charges Explorer With Extortion.

Berlin—Rudolph Francke, who was associated with Dr. Frederick A. Cook in Arctic exploration, has brought suit against Commander Robert E. Peary in the sum of $10,000. The amount is estimated at half the value of furs and walrus and narwhal teeth which Francke bought from natices in the Arctic regions upon arrangement with Dr. Cook that they should share them half and half.

According to Francke's statements, Commander Peary found him seriously ill at Etah owing to a fall on a glacier and took advantage of this circumstance to demand the entire collection as the price for transporting him to America. Francke claims that he did not act of his own free will, but by compulsion, and says that Peary set aside a part of the collection to present to ex-President Roosevelt.

RAILROAD FLURRY OVER

Eastern and Central Lines Will Not Advance Rates.

Washington, D. C.—The recent flurry as to the railroad situation is now a thing of the past. The railroad presidents went home, President Taft went horseback riding, and the railroad bill went to conference.

The Eastern and Central railroads, at a conference with the president, agreed to withhold all proposed freight rate increases until the new railroad law becomes effective, and after that to submit the reasonableness of the increases to the Inter-State Commerce Commission. The railroads interested in the Southern territory declared they had not as yet filed notices of increases, but that if they did, they would be ready to abide by the decision of the commission.

LARGE DISTRICTS IN ITALY DEVASTATED

Earthquake and Cyclone Cause Death and Property Damage.

MANY BURIED IN RUINS

King and Queen Go to Devastated Region—Not as Bad as Messina.

Rome, Italy.—Misfortune seems to have chosen Italy as a target. While the south has been afflicted by an earthquake, the vast region of Sardinia, the largest island in the Mediterranean after Sicily, was ravaged by a violent cyclone. The districts of Lanusei, Tortoli, Ilbono, Elini and Jerzu have been devastated, and the crops, vineyards and cattle destroyed. It is believed that many shepherds have followed the fate of their flocks. The damage in Sardinia is estimated at $2,000,000.

Great apprehension has been caused again by seismic disturbances, the official reports showing that the zone affected by the earthquake shocks is a vast one, embracing practically the whole of Southern Italy, as well as a portion of Tuscany, and Venetia to the north. But the district where serious damage occurred only extends about 50 miles around Mount Vulture, which is an extinct volcano near the town of Calitri, in the provence of Avellino.

Government to the Rescue.

This region has suffered much in the past from earthquakes and in 1851 800 persons were killed. The number of casualties resulting from the earthquake has not yet been definitely ascertained, some of the reports estimating the dead at fifty and the injured at several hundred. It is feared that there are many buried in the ruins of the houses which were thrown down in Calitri, while great damage was done at other places with doubtless a considerable loss of life.

The government has taken hold of the situation with promptitude, and although the earthquake occurred during the night it was not long before the military and civil authorities were hard at work rendering aid to the injured and preparing places of shelter for the homeless.

Premier Luzzatti received word of the disaster and he at once communicated the news to the king. The latter decided to leave immediately for the district. He intended to go alone, but Queen Helena insisted upon joining him.

The king thought that this was not necessary as the situation at Avellino was not to be compared with that at Messina, where their majesties spent several days in alleviating the distress of the people.

TROOPS ROUT INDIAN REBELS

Stronghold of Outlaws Is Taken After Many Are Killed or Wounded.

Mexico City, Mexico.—Valladolid, the stronghold of the Indian insurrectionists in Yucatan, was captured by federal troops, according to telegrams received from Merida. The rebels were driven from the town to the mountains. Many dead and wounded were abandoned in the flight, and many prisoners were taken by the government forces, among them Nicolas Soza, ringleader of the insurgents, who was wounded.

In the fighting 30 of the National Guard were killed and a number wounded. The attack was led by Colonel Lara, whose men carried with them two rapid-fire guns. After the skirmish when the Indians were dislodged from their trenches, the government troops camped within gunshot of the town and followed up their advantage at daybreak. The National Guard of Merida, to the number of 1,200 opened the engagement before daybreak. In three hours they had taken the plaza of San Juan, in the outskirts of Valladolid. The troops were reinforced by 600 federal soldiers under Col. Luque, and the fighting was continued until the town was captured.

OXFORD HONORS ROOSEVELT

CIVIL LAW DOCTOR NOW

Ex-President's Romanes Lecture Is Greeted With Enthusiastic Applause.

Oxford, England—Oxford after an address by Theodore Roosevelt has conferred on him the honorary degree of doctor of civil law. Mr. Roosevelt's reception surpassed in enthusiasm anything within the memory of the oldest Oxonian.

The colonel's Romanes lecture which dealt with "Biological Analogies in History," proved to be a powerful exposition of all the "strange anologies," as the lecturer expressed it, "in the phenomena of life and death, of birth, growth and change, between those physical groups of animal life which we designate as species, forms, races, and the highly complex and composite entities which rise before our minds when we speak of nations and civilizations."

Towards the close, however, Mr. Roosevelt's voice failed, and he was obliged to leave undelivered a portion of his prepared lecture. But before he withdrew the former president had won the great audience by his vigorous utterances and forceful gestures, being cheered repeatedly at various stages of his speech. Even the solemn red-robed Dons stood up and joined in the loud hurrahs.

Colonel Roosevelt made the point that the chief danger to both England and America lay within rather than without and he arraigned in a way the privileged class of both nations.

HARRIMAN LINES GIVE BIG ORDER

To Spend $1,125,000 for New Locomotives—Baldwin Company Is Busy.

New York—At a time when the heads of some railroads were announcing that their companies were about to cut down expenses because of the attitude of the government on freight rates, the Harriman lines have gone ahead and ordered new locomotives, to cost $1,125,000.

This order, which calls for the building of 85 passenger locomotives of the most powerful type, has been secured by the Baldwin Locomotive company of Philadelphia. It is the biggest equipment order given since the recent disturbance in the railroad world. Deliveries are to be made during the three last months of the year.

Alba B. Johnson, vice president of the Baldwin company, said no orders given to his company had been recently cancelled and he did not expect any cancellations. On the other hand purchasing on a gratifying scale was anticipated. He said that the company had enough orders on hand to keep the force of 14,500 men employed for the remainder of the year.

The money order form is two and a half inches longer than the one now in use. It consists of a stub, order with marginal check, coupon to be retained by the postmaster who makes the payment and a receipt for the remitter. The order and coupon to the person in whose favor the order is drawn.

The new form will be put into use as soon as the public printer can obtain the necessary sully of "safety" paper.

In the death of J. D. Barron of the Montgomery Advertiser staff, the newspaper fraternity loses one of its most valued members.

Mr. Barron was a man of rare ability; keen insight and logical reasoning powers.

His death is a distinct loss not only to the newspaper world but to the state at large.

The republicans of Chilton seem to be having a pretty fight between themselves just now and the fur is flying in several directions. Crimination and recrimination seems to be the order of the day with them. Well, let the dance go on; when they get through the democrats will tend to what is left of them. We are here for that purpose this year and we propose to do them a neat, complete, satisfying job.

Almost every newspaper of note that one reads these days tell of great democratic victories achieved. Nor are these victories confined to any particular locality or section or clime. They come from every quarter, thus showing conclusively that the people—the plain people, the people who make the government and sustain it—are becoming fearfully tired and disgusted with the party of plutocrats and high tariffs.

Harmon and Marshall, O'Neal and Seed, Blackmon and Curry, Deason and Jones. That's a pretty ticket from a national, a state, a district or a county standpoint. There's magic in those names that will conjure success. They have the very odor of victory to us.

What are you doing for the success of the FREE AUCTION DAY? Have you spoken to any one about it, written about it in your letters, planned any particular amusement for that day? DO SOMETHING. Talk, write, ACT! Let's make it the greatest day Clanton has had in a social way for many years. Get with the committee and pull like a draft horse. Let's not have a drone in the hive this year; we can get along without them for a season, at least. If we talk Clanton, work for Clanton and write for Clanton then we will soon have the Clanton of which we have dreamed so long. Remember the day of the FREE AUCTION and work for it—July Fourteen, Nineteen Ten.

It is a well-known fact, established both by history and experience, that no country is greater than its inhabitants, no state is grander than its citizenship and no community rises above the average level of those who make the community. A man cannot take himself by the boot straps and lift his body over a fence; no more can a community sit supinely and expect to see industries springing up around it. [illegible] It takes work, unceasing work; the work of faith in self and in the cause for which we work. It takes concert of action; a steady determination on the part of all to succeed. But this is not the only element of success; there are other requirements that must enter into the complex problem to bring about such a degree of success as makes the heart swell with pride and the face glow with enthusiasm.

Clanton has all the elements of success; she has all that enter into this complex problem and she should lose no time in assembling these elements and in starting on the problem that spells success.

We refer especially now to an up-to-date system of water works for the city. Such a system as will furnish pure, healthful water to the famishing citizen, that will put to route the dust evil and that will save dollars—thousands of dollars—to Clanton in insurance premiums.

Aside from its establishment as a utility, a comfort and a luxury, it should be established as an absolute necessity and as a money saver.

We are not living in the eighteenth century now; those things were then looked upon as novel, expensive and experimental, but in this enlightened day a town is judged as much, or more, by its public spirit, its public utilities and its invitations to outside capital as it is by its churches and schools. These latter were once the standard by which a community was judged—and they are excellent standards, too—but, however handsome the churches, however commodious the schools may be if a community has nothing else to offer these days that community will be found to lag in the onward march of communities.

There was a day when Clanton did not need a system of water works; a day when such a system would have been expensive and almost inoperative, but that day has long past. We must keep up with the procession; we must not fall behind our sister towns and cities. We need these things; we are able to have them; we must have them.

We sound this note to put our people to thinking. From now on The Press is going to devote much of its space to agitating this question. We believe that the people want water works, we believe that they are willing to pay for water works, we believe that they will demand water works, and we believe that the demand of the people will be granted.

Let the carping critic continue his carping and let the knocker go on with his knocking, we are going to have water works and that at no distant day. In every community there are boosters and there are knockers—some with little tack hammers and some with the ponderous sledge hammers, but, notwithstanding these, we are going to have water works.

Which are you, anyway—a booster or a knocker; a shouter or a groaner, a hold-back or a go-forward? To which side do you belong?

Come, jine the BOOSTERS!

The republicans have a very admirable trait which we democrats would do well to learn. They almost invariably have their little tiffs before the primary or convention, then they settle down to real business and work manfully for the nominees. This year is no exception. They are flinging great gaubs of mud at one another, but the probability is that when the mud slinging is over they will begin to prepare for a love feast. Why cannot democrats learn this lesson? It is almost impossible to select candidates, all of whom will be acceptable to every voter, but we can stand by the party under the stress of all circumstances. The party is much bigger than any candidate, the organization is to be preserved even though half a dozen men should have to suffer in consequence.

We are now on the high road to success; the future for democracy never looked brighter. The fire of enthusiasm is glowing in almost every bosom. Let us keep these fires burning; let us work and talk and think success. Let the republicans do as they please, as they will, but let democrats close ranks, touch shoulders and march together to victory.

If there is a candidate who happens not to be your particular choice, remember that he is the choice of a majority as declared in YOUR primary; remember that the party to which you belong looks to you in this hour for strength and succor. Do not fail her in this time of approaching success merely because some candidate whom you opposed succeeded in securing the nomination. Roll up your sleeves and fight for him with a hearty good will because he is the nominee of YOUR PARTY.

The Press has delivered itself elsewhere about a system of water works for the town. We believe that nine-tenths of the citizens desire a well-equipped system of water works owned and operated by the city. We know that it will be a cheap investment with a rich return.

Clanton pays out annually for fire insurance premiums enough money to install a system of water works, that would be a pride to the town. Then, too, because of the excessive rates of insurance there are many who do no insure. This being true, the individual suffers, while [illegible] not as much protection [illegible] of insurance that would justify them in taking insurance to the extent allowed; each would receive better protection and the burden would be equally distributed.

Enough money leaves Clanton each year to swell the holdings of the already rich insurance companies to give power and weight to the cryptic hand of moneyed aristocracy, to install a system of water works here that would be both a pleasure and a blessing to the people; and the beauty of it all is that it could be done without the outlay of one dollar more than is now being sent away from our town to go into the coffers of strangers, to build up the stocks and bonds of others. With the sweat of of our toil are we contributing to the poverty of ourselves and the enrichment of aliens, whereas with a little energy, push and concert of action we could make these hours of toil and grime become the master builders of our town and entribute to the pleasure, happiness and health of our people.

The press has had several communications presented to it this week for publication bearing on the republican primary. We have politely declined to enter into republican politics. We know what republicanism means for the white people of the south; we know for what that party stands and we propose to give them no aid or encouragement in any kind whatever. We are constitutionally opposed to republicanism. Our father gave of his life blood to establish democratic principles; we were nurtured at the breast of a democratic mother; we have been educated by democratic teachers and have eaten democratic bread all our life.

There is nothing for which the republican party stands that we uphold, and there are many things for which it stands that are repulsive to us. But that is to be reserved for the telling of another day; what we wanted to say was that we have no desire to enter republican politics in any manner, and especially do we wish to avoid mud slinging for the enemy. We are going to fight the republicans out in the broad open; we know they cannot defend their party or their principles before intelligent people and we do not believe that it requires mud slinging to defeat them when once the people become acquainted with the facts as they really exist. We have refused to publish these communications because we look upon the republican rumpus now going on as a family affair in which we have no concern. After they have nominated their candidates we are ready to tackle them and we will do so—and we hope by God's help to show the people of Chilton county some facts that will convince them of the desirability of democratic rule. We have declined to publish articles written by both sides in the controversy and we shall maintain this rule during the campaign. We might sell a few more papers and get several new subscriptions by playing that kind of politics but we would rather not have subscriptions secured that way.

We want to publish clean, reliable NEWS and we shall decline to publish anything that smacks of mud slinging or that will open the gates for mud slinging.

We have some good friends among those deluded ones who call themselves republicans and we cherish their friendship. Against them personally we have nothing to say and against them politically we will not say anything until they become candidates of the republican party.

CHILTON SCORES ANOTHER MURDER.

Chilton county is making for herself an unenviable reputation as a field of manslaughter, murder and kindred crimes. There are now in the county jail three persons charged with murder in the first degree; two have just been sent to the penitentiary for life and two more against whom there are charges that if proven true would land them either upon the scaffold or in the penitentiary for life.

The latest arrival at the jail is young Mr. Walter Arledge, charged with the killing of his father, Buck Arledge, in Stumps Hills.

Mr. Arledge killed his father early Tuesday morning of this week and immediately telephoned to Sheriff Catts asking that an officer be sent out as he wished to surrender himself.

Sheriff Catts went himself and about noon on Tuesday brought young Mr. Arledge to the county jail. The Press man called upon the prisoner and asked if he had any statement which he wished to make in regard to the killing. His reply was that he had nothing whatever to say till he had talked with his lawyer and so The Press gives only such information as could be gleaned upon the streets of the town during the day.

It seems from the reports of those who visited the home immediately after the shooting that young Arledge had gone to the lot to catch a horse preparatory to plowing for the day. The horse was somewhat lively and would not submit to the bridle without considerable [illegible] on the part of Arledge. When [illegible] the horse was secured the young man [illegible] to going to the field, the father began to abuse him for his rough treatment of the horse. A lengthy discussion arose in which the father made use of many insulting and abusive remarks, at one time, so it is stated, threatening to kill the boy. As the son started out of the house the father again repeated his threat and the boy went around the house to avoid contact with his father. At a corner of the house the father, having a big rock in his hand, encountered the boy. The father continued to advance and the boy to back away, all the while the father threatening to do him bodily harm. When they were so close together that further escape seemed impossible and the father continued the advance with the rock raised as if to strike, the boy pulled his gun and fired at the father, the bullet entering just under the jawbone and breaking the neck.

The Press has no desire to prejudice the case in any way, whatever. We give these reports as street rumors. We cannot vouch for their truthfulness, either one way or the other. The young man very properly refused to talk till he had consulted his attorney and The Press man had no desire to insist upon a conversation under the circumstances.

Walter Arledge is a young man, about 21 years of age; he seems to be a bright young fellow of more than ordinary intelligence, and when The Press man visited him at the jail, his eyes were red from weeping.

Buck Arledge, the father, was perhaps known by every man in Chilton county.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. Arledge employed Hon. Osmond Middleton as his attorney, who immediately took steps to have his client released from [illegible]. A warrant was sworn out [illegible] he made almost immediately. The preliminary trial will come up again on next Tuesday morning before Justice J. P. VanDerveer.

A BROKEN CHAIR; A BRUISED FACE.

Deputy Sheriff Curlee came in on Tuesday morning from Maplesville bringing with him Columbus Whatley, a bright mulatto, against whom there is lodged a charge of selling liquors against the peace and dignity of the state of Alabama, and of fighting, contrary to the law of the land. But Deputy Curlee did not go especially for Columbus; in fact, he went after the assailant of Columbus—his brother—Frank Whatley.

Columbus has been successful in eluding the officers for two years, but his brother succeeded in corralling him the other night with a hickory chair as an assistant.

Columbus and Frank had a misunderstanding and Columbus started after his brother with an ugly looking knife. Frank called to him to stop, but like the boy on the burning deck—he would not—and so Frank proceeded to comb his hair with a hickory chair of the home-made style.

Columbus fell like a beef, and Frank, fearing that, Cain like, he had killed his brother, left for parts unknown.

It was for Frank that Mr. Curlee went; he wanted to accompany him to the county jail and give him an abiding place, but Frank would not. He used the 23 signal on Mr. Curlee, and so, the deputy not to be outdone and to prevent his long journey from being altogether fruitless, took Columbus in tow and brought him to the place where all bad negroes ought to be.

A BUSY PLACE.

By invitation of Mr. Tom Wood[illegible] The Press man visited the plant of the Clanton Lumber company's planing mill, which has recently been put into operation. Everything in the vicinity of the mill was hustle and bustle. No idleness there and no time for idle conversation. Every man was onto his job and stepping lively. The offices are equipped with all the latest improved furniture and fixtures for rapid and systematic office work. The rooms are commodious, furnishing an abundance of light and fresh air and just far enough from the planer to keep the office force from being disturbed by the noise and bustle of the whirling machinery. The mill itself presented a scene of activity and power. The great engine which drives the machinery was purring and pulsing as if indeed with life and the constant whirr and buzz of the machinery as it received the rough timbers and turned them out the finished product told in magic words of the industry and thrift that it represented.

The payroll of the Clanton planing mill is no insignificant thing for a town like Clanton. It represents the earning power of more than fifteen abled bodied men, and these fifteen men represent perhaps seventy-five persons, who receive their daily bread and clothing from the mill. Only that Clanton had more industries of this kind!

Mr. J. Q. Wade and family have moved into their neat little cottage on the east side of the railroad. The home is not yet completed in all respects, but is fast approaching completion.

Mr. Wade expects to install a system of water works and electric lights in his home and when finished will be one of the most comfortable as well as one of the coolest homes in Clanton.

MOUNTAIN CREEK.

Miss Zora Kicker and Mr. Oliver Garrett were married on last Thursday afternoon by Justice of the Peace J. D. Sims. This wedding came as quite a surprise to every one on Mountain Creek. All join in wishing them a happy married life.

Miss Maymie Baxley and Mr. Sam Shoemaker were married on Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. The wedding was a very quiet affair, only the immediate family and Miss Baxley's Sunday school teacher, Mrs. E. L. Thornton, and the superintendent of the Sunday school, Mr. E. L. Thornton, were present. Miss Baxley was very pretty in a dress of brown taffeta silk with hat and shoes to match. The young couple left immediately after the marriage ceremony for Lookout mountain and other points of interest.

Miss Nell Gray is visiting relatives in Tuscaloosa.

The ice cream supper that was to have been given on the evening of July 16th by the Ladies' Aid Society has been postponed on account of the protracted meeting now going on at Salisbury.

Miss Urma Henderson is visiting relatives in Oxmoor.

Judge and Mrs. Chilton of Montgomery spent Saturday and Sunday with their, daughter, Mrs. E. L. Thornton.

Miss Lucy Simpson is again at home, having returned to spend the vacation after a session in school.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bentley have returned from a pleasant visit to Oakford.

BILLINGSLEY.

Please permit us to say through your paper that we are going to have a grand picnic on next Saturday at Patillos' mill, five miles south of here.

We will have two good games of baseball and extra fine music and singing. Every one is invited to come and bring a well-filled basket.

The Normal Musical Institute begins here on Monday, July 11th, and will continue twenty days under Prof. J. P. Stephens.

We are anxious to have at least 200 pupils in this school. Billingsley is a fine place to spend the summer vacation; special arrangements have been made to accommodate those who desire to attend the institute. Those desiring information should write Prof. Stephens or Mr. M. W. Culp.

We want to say that our baseball team is now ready to accept any challenges from amateur clubs. We believe that we can make it interesting to any team in this section and will be glad to hear from those who have open dates.

With best wishes for The Press.

SUBSCRIBER.

JEMISON JOTTINGS.

Mrs. Cross is on the sick list; we hope her a speedy recovery.

Mr. Crysell has returned from a visit to friends in Birmingham.

Miss Ola Moore is visiting friends this week.

The singing led by Messrs. Frankmore and Crumpton last Sunday afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed by the crowd.

A cool, delicious drinks call at the postoffice, where Mr. George Colvin has recently opened up an attractive stand.

Mr. Davidson, from Bessemer, visits friends here on last Sunday.

Mr. W. G. Hand returned last week from a visit to Hot Springs, where he went for his health. On his return he has again been sick.

Mr. Johnson of Birmingham was a recent sojourner in Jemison last Saturday, having come down on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Attaway.

Mr. E. H. Standifer, from Tuscaloosa was a visitor to our town last week.

We are glad to hear that Clanton is going up something to amuse them at least one day during the season. Perhaps this is but the forerunner of other entertainments we can look forward to with pleasure. We wish Clanton abundant success in getting up her FREE DAY day. Wish you could arrange to have it last two or three days, the longer it lasts the better it will be for Clanton it would seem.

"Sure, Ben, what did you shoot him for? I ain't got no quarrel with him." "You had a field with Jim, didn't ye?" "I did, but Jim's dead. I'm his executor."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

PRESS—SEVEN

SAMARIA.

The rain last week did considerable damage to the land in this section. It was, perhaps, the heaviest rain we have had in many months and the land was washed badly and the ground packed hard about the young plants, but the farmers were not discouraged; they went immediately to work to breaking the crust of the land so as to allow it to breathe and now everything is looking in fine order.

There will be another debate held at Samaria school house on next Saturday night. The subject for discussion is:

"Resolved, That the negro should be colonized."

The speakers for the affirmative are: H. G. Williams, Prof. Emile Aldridge and C. M. Roper, while those for the negative are, Prof. H. M. Williams, Prof. R. A. Smith, Prof. J. K. T. Daniel.

We extend a cordial invitation to all to attend.

Our people are looking forward with great pleasure to the Free Auction day which The Press has started and we hope that all will join hands to make it a big success.

THEODORE.

THORSBY GLEANINGS.

Another delightful affair was the party on Friday evening, the 3rd inst., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Magne Anderson, where twenty or more young people were entertained.

Dainty refreshments were served and after an evening of much merriment the crowd dispersed for their respective homes.

Mr. Thomas Lucas and daughter, Miss Vivian, were passengers to Birmingham one day this week.

Mr. J. F. Peterson and daughter, Miss Ruth, have gone to Birmingham for a visit.

Miss Charlotte Turnquist was a Calera visitor last Sunday.

Mr. Hunter, who has been attending the Thorsby institute, left Monday morning for his home in Autauga county.

Mrs. C. F. Wheelock left Monday for an extended visit to her parents at Rockford.

Miss Charlotte Turnquist and Mrs. P. W. Peterson were passengers to Clanton on Monday last.

Miss Jenkins, who has been teaching at the Thorsby institute, has gone to her home in Atlanta, Ga., to spend the vacation season.

Miss Pearl Johnson went down to Clanton on a shopping expedition on last Tuesday.

Our people are not talking July Fourteenth very much at present; we are waiting to see what Clanton will do first and then we expect to do our part.

RED WING.

FAIRVIEW FACTS.

The farmers have been moving along nicely of late, but the heavy rainfall has caused them to get somewhat behind in their work just at present. However, the crops are cleaner and in better condition this year than they have ever been at this season.

The Sunday schools of this part of the county are doing fine work. Children's day exercises seem to be all the go just at this time.

School here will soon be out and we regret to see the time come when we will have to part with our schoolmates as we have spent many happy days together here.

We congratulate The Press in succeeding in getting up the BIG day for Clanton. Probably the Banner will get up one, too, as it did the contest. However, we wish it well.

The Fairview girls and boys are now organized ready for debate. We once had a team of ball players, but it has now become a team of debaters. We will try our second match game Saturday night.

Things political are quiet at present in this section. It seems that the democrats are anxiously awaiting the republican primary that they may know whom they are to beat in the general election. We think that we will be able to make it more than interesting for the republicans in this section this year of grace. We can win if we will try, for this is the first time the republicans have appeared in the open. They would not have done so this time if there had been any way for them to dodge the law, but the penalty which makes them sail under their own colors prevents them from being "just any old thing" for the sake of deceiving the people and catching the votes. When our people find out what real, genuine republicanism means then they will leave that party and support democratic candidates.

Prof. W. C. Culp will sing at Mount Nebo church the fourth Sunday afternoon. Prof. Culp is our former teacher and we wish to see as many out to greet him as will come.

With best wishes for The Press and hoping it may live long to continue its work.

ROUNDER.

MAPLESVILLE.

Maplesville, a small village of perhaps five or six hundred, situated between Birmingham and Selma, Montgomery and Tuscaloosa at a point where the M. and O. and the Southern railroad crosses, has for years been noted for its crime and immorality, but for the last two or three years it has taken on a new life and a better spirit prevailed until the recent killing of young Mr. Holditch, which is to be sadly regretted. However, everything is normal again and thegood people of the community are to be complimented upon the admirable way in which they have borne up under these transgressions of the law. (Just here the editor would like to say that he thinks Maplesville is no worse than many hundreds of other small towns situated as is Maplesville. There are lawless men in every community, but there are many, many good men in those communities also. Maplesville, is unfortunately, situated at the juncture of two great systems of railroads which gives the lawless element an easy way of escape in almost any direction and at almost any hour. It is surrounded with lumber camps, mining camps and numerous sawmill plants. To these places the law-breaker from other sections naturally drift and the lawlessness of which our correspondent speaks must not be construed as the acts of the good citizens of that charming little town. He does not mean to even intimate any such thing.)

Maplesville is, perhaps, the best market that can be found in this section for country produce of all kinds, as we have here the Twin Tree Lumber company, which employes quite a number of men, who, with their families, have to be fed; then there are numerous other industries, sawmills, coaling, railroading and the like.

The two churches here, the Methodist and Baptist, are both prospering and doing most effective work.

On last Sunday the Methodist people, under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Simmons, began what will doubtless prove to be the best series of services ever held in that church. The choir of the church has been making daily preparations for the meeting by frequent practices and the people generally have gotten themselves in readiness for it. Rev. Simmons has secured the assistance of one of the ablest men in the conference.

We have a very good school building at Maplesville, and that is doing good work that is highly commendable.

Maplesville boasts of three secret fraternal organizations—the Masons, Odd Fellows and the Woodmen—the latter having a membership of 42.

The unveiling of the monument last Sunday by the Woodmen attracted a throng of people from every section of the country; there were, perhaps, five hundred or more visitors. The camps of Woodmen at Selma, Plantersville, Riderville, Stanton, Billingsley, Clanton, Lawley, Centerville, Eoline and Randolph were all well represented.

The sovereigns met at the forest over the Twin Tree Lumber company's office, where an address of welcome was delivered to the visitors by the consul commander of Maplesville lodge and talks by visiting Woodmen, after which the line of march was arranged under the direction of Master of Ceremonies I. M. Tidwell. The team work was under the direction of D. W. Vines and each performed his part in a most admirable manner. After reaching the cemetery, the family were seated in the wedge, and the ceremonies of the day were begun. Miss Branch, one of our most excellent young ladies, was called upon to read the poem and in a most excellent manner did she respond. The choir from Plantersville, composed of Dr. R. B. Walker, Hugh and Henry Shapp and Mr. Abe Sanders of Stanton, rendered some of the sweetest music that the writer has ever heard.

The monument unveiled was to the memory of Walter Hull, who was killed by a drunken man near Randolph last Christmas. He had been a member but about six months and his wife was paid $500 at his death by the lodge as insurance upon his life, besides having the monument erected to his memory. The lodge, since its organization, has lost two members, the latter being Sov. D. W. Wilkins, who was buried about two weeks since with camp honors.

There was an all day singing at Coxe's chapel last Sunday and the people present enjoyed themselves immensely. These all day singings are fine when properly carried out. There the people can meet and aim to the glory of Almighty God. It is also a fine place for the young people to get their best girl after democratic republican primary.

referred to, and he shall never regret it. Let's have more of these good things and less of the other kind.

Well, as Haley's comet is a thing of the past, let's begin to talk about better roads.

MATRIMONIAL.

The matrimonial market has been somewhat dull this week. While there seems to be a good demand and a steady market the deliveries are somewhat short and this is the month of birds, too. The poet has asked, "What is so rare as a day in June?" and the love-lorn has replied by asking the question, "What more lovely than the bride of June?"

Yet, only two or three licenses have been issued from the court house this week. We fear the courage of the boys is beginning to wane with the approach of warm weather.

The following are the licenses issued this week:

Mr. Pinkney Collum to Miss Effie Killingsworth.

Mr. S. P. Shoemaker to Miss Maymie Baxley.

WHAT WE DO FOR YOU.

The Press believes in advertising. It believes in the merchant who puts money in printers' ink; who is not afraid to tell the people what he has to sell. It believe in the town which talks of its advantages and offers inducements to outsiders to locate within its borders.

Acting upon this belief we wish to say to the merchants and to the people generally, that we have about the best job printing plant ever established in any small town in Alabama. We can print anything from a visiting card up to the largest posters and do it in such artistic style and at such extremely low prices that it makes your head swim to think of sending your job work elsewhere to be done.

We have recently received some of the neatest visiting cards ever put on the market; our letter heads and bill heads, our envelopes and statements are undoubtedly the product of modern methods.

We invite an inspection of our plant and of our work.

EARLY COTTON.

Mr. Albert Gore, of Route 4, was in the office the first part of this week and stated that he had 12 acres of the prettiest cotton he had ever seen at this season of the year. It is more than knee high, said he, and if the grass doesn't catch me since the last rain I am going to make the man that brings in the first bale of cotton this year spell his name Albert Gore. He states that he has any number of squares in his field already that, within a few days he expects to see the blossoms burst out all over the field.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, and State of Alabama, and to me directed, whereby I am commanded to make the amount of a certain judgment recently obtained against A. Lofthus out of the goods, chattels, lands and tenements of the said A. Lofthus, I have levied on the following property, to-wit:

Lot No. 8, in Block No. 1, in the town of Thorsby, Chilton County, Alabama.

Therefore, according to said command, I shall expose for sale, at Public Auction, all the right, title and interest of the above named A. Lofthus in and to the above described property, on Monday, the 11th day of July, 1910, during the legal hours of sale, at the Court House Door, Clanton, in Chilton County, Alabama.

Dated at Clanton, Ala., this 7th day of June, 1910.

JOHN S. CATTS,
Sheriff Chilton County, Alabama.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION. ATTENTION, SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS.

The Executive committee met in Clanton Tuesday and arranged program, and place of meeting for the County Sunday school Convention, which is to be held at Verbena, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 5-6. Program will be published next week, if all necessary arrangements can be made. As the time is short, and the work to be done is great, let us all get a hustle on ourselves and make this one of the very best conventions we have ever held. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY.

Let me urge all Sunday-school Superintendents to be sure and elect two delegates, (as that is the number each school is entitled to) at once, please don't delay this matter, for procrastination is the thief of time and has been the cause of many sad defeats.

From now until the convention is over, let us be earnestly engaged in prayer to our Father, that he may give us wisdom to do the things that need to be done, and that we shall be blessed in the doing of them. Let each one be willing to do his or her part in this work for the Master, and then go forward in this great work.

Washington Post Office Hawk Caught.

The Baron, the old hawk which for years has made the Post Office tower his roosting place, was captured today. Having evaded the bullets of sharpshooters, the wiles of the would-be captors and the charged wires placed in the tower to catch him, the gallant old bird, who belongs to a species of falcon now nearly extinct, fell a victim to his own appetite this morning.

He was smothered in a huge piece of canvas thrown over him while he was attempting to catch a chicken in the rear yard of Tim Honlon's place, near Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. The bird is uninjured save for a few ruffled feathers, and he will be placed on exhibition. The mangled bodies of pigeons have been the only evidences generally of his occupancy of the tower. When it became known that he was the last of an almost extinct race orders were given that he should not be shot.—Washington correspondence Baltimore Sun.

Microbe Causes Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, known to medical men as tetanus, is one of those terrible maladies which occasion great suffering and baffle the best attempts of the profession to successfully treat them. Commencing with stiffness of the jaw muscles, tetanus quickly goes on to produce violent convulsions, which utterly exhaust its victim's strength, while preventing him from taking food, owing to his being unable to open his mouth; hence its more popular designation of "lockjaw." Investigations have shown that this dreadful disease is due to a microbe which commonly exists in ordinary soil and the surface mud of the streets, which habitat explains the reason why tetanus frequently attacks persons who have been injured in street accidents and had their wounds contaminated with refuse and dust from the roadway. Although no certain cure for tetanus is yet known, progress is being made with injections of "anti-tetanic serum."—London Telegraph.

A DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE

Medicine Not Needed in This Case.

It is hard to convince some people that coffee does them an injury! They lay their bad feelings to almost every cause but the true and unsuspected one.

But the doctor knows. His wide experience has proven to him that, to some systems, coffee is an insidious poison that undermines the health.

Ask the doctor if coffee is the cause of constipation, stomach and nervous troubles.

"I have been a coffee drinker all my life. I am now 42 years old and when taken sick two years ago with nervous prostration, the doctor said that my nervous system was broken down and that I would have to give up coffee.

"I got so weak and shaky I could not work, and reading your advertisement of Postum, I asked my grocer if he had any of it. He said, 'Yes,' and that he used it in his family and it was all it claimed to be.

"So I quit coffee and commenced to use Postum steadily and found in about two weeks' time I could sleep soundly at night and get up in the morning feeling fresh. In about two months I began to gain flesh, I weighed only 146 pounds when I commenced on Postum and now I weigh 167 and feel better than I did at 20 years of age.

"I am working every day and sleep well at night. My two children were great coffee drinkers but they have quit drinking coffee, Postum cannot hurt their bones, and are far more healthy than they were before.

Why France Is Rich.

Paris is the mecca of foreigners. They come from all parts of the world to enjoy life in the great metropolis; and the yearly income from this source alone approximates $600,000,000. Along with this item the earnings of French capitalists on their investments in the securities and properties of other countries amount to fully $250,000,000 yearly. On the other side of the account is an adverse balance of trade, which in 1907 amounted to $120,000,000. Deduct this outgo from her income of $850,000,000, and it leaves France with $730,000,000 to the good. Instead of getting an income of $600,000,000 from foreign tourists, the United States pays out at least $150,000,000 for the expenses of American tourists abroad. Again, instead of drawing $250,000,000 yearly from foreign investments, this country pays out $300,000,000 to foreign investors in our securities and properties. A third factor is the army of aliens who flock here from all parts of the world to hoard up money which they take back to their own countries; this drain costs us $300,000,000 more. Add $100,000,000 more which we pay for ocean freights to foreign vessels and the yearly outgo is $850,000,000. Deduct our yearly income of $500,000,000 for favorable trade balance, and it leaves a yearly deficit of $350,000,000.—Moody's Magazine.

A Suggested Raise.

Harry Thurston Peck, the brilliant critic, was talking at the Century Club in New York about the value of suggestion in literature.

"Suggestion is often more effective," he said, "than out-and-out statement. This is especially true regarding a hero's excellence. A hero's excellence, stated out and out, may win him, you know, the reader's dislike.

"Suggestion is more artistic, and this is true no less in life than in literature.

"A business man said one day, after borrowing his office boy's knife:

"'Now, Jo-se, Tommy, that you, Rose, always sharpen your pencils with your knife, like a gentleman, and not with your teeth, like a savage.'"

GOOD ROADS

Why Not a Good Roads Laboratory?

The problem of maintaining good roads, always a most important one in the United States, has recently been rendered of critical urgency by the rapid development of the automobile—the most destructive vehicle to road surface that ever ran on our modern highways. The public resentment or regret, as the case may be, against the destructive effects of automobile traffic should be tempered by the recognition of the fact that it has been the most active instrument in awakening the public to the necessity for abandoning the old slipshod methods of road building, and constructing them according to the best engineering practice.

If it were possible to rebuild all our roads of the most approved and highest class of construction, and if the most suitable material were every where available, the problem would be greatly simplified, but such uniform excellence is impossible, both because of the cost and of the difficulty of finding the ideal materials within economical hauling distance of the work. In a country of such wide extent and such varied geological formation as the United States, the question of the best kind of roads to build in any locality must be determined largely by the local conditions—the climate, particularly as regards the amount and distribution of the rainfall; the nature of the underlying soil, its bearing quality, capacity for quick drainage, etc., and above all, the character of the materials available for road building, must all enter into the problem.

The French engineers, with their characteristic thoroughness, have long recognized the importance and complexity of the good roads problem, and nearly half a century ago they commenced that careful investigation which is still being carried on by a force of trained experts. The analytical study of the subject, which was set on foot by M. Buffet, Engineer of Roads and Bridges, as far back as 1868, has developed into the present municipal laboratory, which has so greatly extended its field of work, that to-day it is considered by many to be the finest in existence. At the date mentioned, apparatus was installed for testing the resistance of paving materials to wear by friction; which was followed by a machine for testing the resistance to abrasion of the stone used in Macadamn roads. The laboratory also includes means for artificially producing those conditions and forces of a climatic character which tend to break up and destroy road surfaces.

Now here, it seems to us, is a plan which might very well be followed in this country by the founding of a national good roads laboratory, say at Washington, which might co-operate with similar but smaller institutions provided for and controlled by the various State legislatures. The cost of carrying on such institutions would represent but a moderate percentage of the money that is annually thrown away on the construction and so-called repair of highways by the present defective methods. — Scientific American.

Washington Post Office Hawk Caught.

The Baron, the old hawk which for years has made the Post Office tower his roosting place, was captured today. Having evaded the bullets of sharpshooters, the wiles of the would-be captors and the charged wires placed in the tower to catch him, the gallant old bird, who belongs to a species of falcon now nearly extinct, fell a victim to his own appetite this morning.

He was smothered in a huge piece of canvas thrown over him while he was attempting to catch a chicken in the rear yard of Tim Honlon's place, near Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. The bird is uninjured save for a few ruffled feathers, and he will be placed on exhibition. The mangled bodies of pigeons have been the only evidences generally of his occupancy of the tower. When it became known that he was the last of an almost extinct race orders were given that he should not be shot.—Washington correspondence Baltimore Sun.

Microbe Causes Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, known to medical men as tetanus, is one of those terrible maladies which occasion great suffering and baffle the best attempts of the profession to successfully treat them. Commencing with stiffness of the jaw muscles, tetanus quickly goes on to produce violent convulsions, which utterly exhaust its victim's strength, while preventing him from taking food, owing to his being unable to open his mouth; hence its more popular designation of "lockjaw." Investigations have shown that this dreadful disease is due to a microbe which commonly exists in ordinary soil and the surface mud of the streets, which habitat explains the reason why tetanus frequently attacks persons who have been injured in street accidents and had their wounds contaminated with refuse and dust from the roadway. Although no certain cure for tetanus is yet known, progress is being made with injections of "anti-tetanic serum."—London Telegraph.

A DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE

Medicine Not Needed in This Case.

It is hard to convince some people that coffee does them an injury! They lay their bad feelings to almost every cause but the true and unsuspected one.

But the doctor knows. His wide experience has proven to him that, to some systems, coffee is an insidious poison that undermines the health.

Ask the doctor if coffee is the cause of constipation, stomach and nervous troubles.

"I have been a coffee drinker all my life. I am now 42 years old and when taken sick two years ago with nervous prostration, the doctor said that my nervous system was broken down and that I would have to give up coffee.

"I got so weak and shaky I could not work, and reading your advertisement of Postum, I asked my grocer if he had any of it. He said, 'Yes,' and that he used it in his family and it was all it claimed to be.

OIL DISTRIBUTION AN EXACT SCIENCE

Fully a Million Dollars a Week in Foreign Gold Comes to This Country to Pay For Standard's Product That Is Peddled to the Doors of Hut and Palace, According to the Rockefeller Plan of International Barter.

This Rockefeller Foundation, to make a story of it, is in reality just this—it is the dream of a poor boy come true. It is the happy ending of an American novel of real life. It is the climax of one of the most dramatic and impressive careers that this country, or any other, has ever known.

The dream—or the novel or drama, whichever you like—began more than half a century ago. It began in a shabby little boarding house in Cleveland, in the brain of a lad of eighteen who was clerking for a shipping and real estate company. There were at that time about a million other American boys of the same age, and not many of them had received fewer privileges than this one. He had been educated partly in the public schools, but mainly at home, by his mother and father. His pay, at this time, was sixty cents a day. His hours of labor were from breakfast until bedtime. For his room and meals he was paying $1 a week, so that his net income—the basis of his dream of fortune and philanthropy—was not more than $135 a year.

Even at this time, and with this income, he built a tiny little foundation of his own. Out of the sixty cents a day, he set aside a few pennies for the church, or for some hungry family, or to drop into some hat that was passed around in the office.

The notebook in which these little philanthropic entries were made is still in existence. It is known by the name of "Ledger A" in the Rockefeller family. It is a completely worn out little notebook, with broken cover and tattered pages of faded writing, but it is one of the most precious treasures in the Rockefeller vaults. It has more than a personal interest now. It has suddenly become historic, because it records the origin of "the most comprehensive scheme of benevolence in the whole history of humanity."

The managerial instinct was so strong in this boy that he was not satisfied with merely paying his share into the contribution boxes. By the time he was nineteen he had ripened into an organizer of benevolence. He was a member of a mission church, which was fast breaking down under the weight of a $2000 mortgage. This sixty-cent-a-day youth undertook to collect the money, and he did it.

"That was a proud day," he said in later years, "when the last dollar was collected."

Little as he knew it, the boy was then at work upon the fulfilment of his dream to become perhaps the greatest getter, and the greatest giver, of his generation.

Later, when he became a prosperous man of business and large affairs, he still retained the habit of organizing his giving as well as his getting. He even went so far as to organize his family into a sort of foundation. At the breakfast table he would distribute the various appeals for help among his children, requesting them to investigate each case and make a report to him on the following day. In this way his children, and especially his son and namesake, who is destined to distribute the revenue of the Rockefeller fortune, received a Spartan training in "the difficult art of giving."

The whole bent of the Rockefeller mind seems to have been inclined from the first toward the working out of this problem of distribution. The business of the Standard Oil Company itself is much more a matter of distribution than of production. It was unquestionably the first company that undertook to sell its product directly to the users on a world-wide scale. For the most part, it delivers its oil, not to wholesalers and middlemen, but to the family that burns it, whether it be in the United States or in the uttermost parts of the earth. It has, for instance, no fewer than 3000 tank wagons traveling from door to door in the twenty countries of Europe, selling pints and quarts of liquid light to whosoever demands it. Fully $1,000,000 a week, in foreign gold or its equivalent, comes to this country to pay for the oil that is peddled to the doors of hut and palace, according to the Rockefeller plan of international distribution.

Consequently, both by natural aptitude and business experience, Mr. Rockefeller was well prepared to work out the problem of distributing the surplus money of the rich in a systematic and efficient manner. His new foundation is no afterthought. It is no sudden change of mind or change of heart. It is the natural result of fifty years of experience and experiment. What he began to do as a poor boy in a Cleveland boarding house, he is now about to complete on an international scale—that is the explanation of the new plan that has excited so much comment and so much curiosity.

My mother bought me a bottle of Cardui and before it was gone I was eating heartily. Before 4 bottles were taken I was entirely well."

Woman as a Writer of Fiction.

Meredith's point in the "Essay on Comedy" that only the equal association of men and women makes possible the comedy of life or of fiction, is sustained in the Study article in Harper's. The latter eighteenth century in England having permitted men and women to come together in intellectual recreation, says Mr. Alden, made possible the social novel as launched by Fanny Burney, whose "Evelina" was an "epoch-making surprise," praised by Dr. Johnson Burke and Sir Joshua Reynolds. Susan Ferrier, whom Scott greeted as a "sister" in fiction, and Maria Edgeworth, who, he said, had inspired him in the Waverley novels, were also influential. It was the society novels of Richardson, Fielding and Scott that opened the way for such work. "Woman's admiration, generously accorded to this masculine fiction, must have had its reserves. She certainly must have felt," says Mr. Alden, "the inadequacy of man's attempt to interpret the impulses of a woman's heart."

The way never to do a thing is to make a good resolution about it.

Why the English Make You Mad.

W. Pett Ridge, who won his public in this country several years ago when the Harpers published his novel of a young London girl of the slums, entitled, "By Order of the Magistrate," is counted in London, where his public is very wide, a most excellent raconteur. One of his stories is of an infuriated musician who rushed up to a policeman and demanded vengeance on a small urchin who, he protested, had insulted him.

"I was coming along the road in a hurry just now," he explained wrathfully, "when the young scoundrel stopped me and asked me the time. I said, 'It is ten to three,' and he said 'At three o'clock get your hair cut.'"

The policeman glanced slowly at a neighboring clock.

"Well," he replied stolidly, "you're all right, sir—you have still got a good eight minutes."—Harper's.

This is generally accepted as the first discovery of terrestrial helium, although Nasini and Andelini in 1906, on examining the flame spectrum of a large number of volcanic incrustations, failed to recognize the presence of helium in any of the specimens they examined under the condition described by Palmieri.—Scientific American.

ELECTRIC REVOLVING DOORS.

Motor Operated and Set in Motion by Pressing a Button.

In some buildings of a semi-public nature in which revolving doors are installed, as hotels and stores, they keep a man at the entrance to help operate the door for the greater convenience and comfort of persons entering and leaving the building. This man starts the door in motion, thus making it easier for the person entering to push the rest of the way.

But the attendant, according to his natural strength or his mood at the moment, may start the door swiftly or slowly, thus hurrying or retarding the incomer. And then on a personally operated door one man in the door, impatient, may push the door fast and bang the leaf in front of himself against the heels of the man in the compartment ahead, making him peevish. All these variations and uncertainties in the movements of the door are eliminated by operating it with an electric motor.

The electrically operated revolving door has a motor attached to the upper end of the shaft from which the leaves extend. The motor is quite out of sight above the horizontal sheathing at the top of the doorway. From the motor and also quite out of sight wiring extends to a push button set in the wall at the side of the doorway within the building, where the door attendant stands.

With a door thus equipped there is no reaching out and grabbing a leaf and pushing or pulling on it to start it. The attendant simply presses the button and so turns the current into the motor, and the motor does the rest, starting the door gently and then keeping it going with a motion that is steady and uniform.—New York Sun.

Register in Lawes

GENERAL NEWS.

Editor Press:

I write to register a protest against the train whistle nuisance, and to ask of my fellow citizens why we submit to it? Strangers visiting our town are often heard to express amazement that we should do so.

One time a Clanton citizen took courage to approach a high railroad official on this subject, and got laughed at for his pains. Said the official, "Why, if the people of your town are fools enough to submit to such insults, it is none of my business. Let your council pass an ordinance against the loud blowing of train whistles, and when an engineer breaks the law, arrest and fine him."

The postoffice, being so near the railroad, the poor little lady there is in hard lines. I happened to have business theer the other day, while a train was shrieking and screeching through her window not more than twenty feet away. She says that often as many as three engines are yelling there at one time.

A SUFFERER.

We clip the following special to the Birmingham News, which will prove interesting reading to Mr. Gray's many friends. We congratulate him most heartily upon the outcome.

GRAY TO HOLD HIS OFFICE.

Special to the Birmingham News.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—J. B. Gray, postmaster at Mountain Creek, Ala., will be continued in office, according to assurances received by Senator Johnston from the postoffice department. Charges made against Mr. Gray were investigated and found to be groundless.

An Anxious Moment.

Last Thursday night the Woodmen were out in the grove on the east side of town practicing for the exercises to take place on Sunday afternoon. There was quite a number of the members of the order in the grove besides not a few onlookers.

Deputy Sheriff Smitherman had gone some distance out in the county to make an effort to catch a criminal for whom he had a warrant and the jail was somewhat exposed, both jailers being absent. Only Sheriff Catts was keeping vigil at the county jail but right faithfully did he guard his post.

There had been persistent rumors on the streets that the Governor would probably commute the sentence of Wiley Young the condemned murderer, to life imprisonment and so many one was, more or less, in a state of expectancy and doubt.

About nine o'clock one of the county officials seeing the assembled crowd in the grove took it to be a mob organized for the purpose of lynching Wiley Young in order to prevent any interference on the part of the Governor and so he hastily informed the Sheriff that a mob was being organized. Forthwith Sheriff Catts got busy; he sent for Deputy Smitherman, post haste, and lost no time in summoning others to protect the jail and his prisoner.

The jail presented a scene of activity and bustle for a few moments and when Deputy Smitherman arrived. On being informed of the source of the excitement he smiled and said: "Oh, nothing but those Woodmen boys having a little practising out in the grove; tain't do mob at all."

Then the joke was on the Sheriff and the other official.

Up to now we haven't heard which has paid for the soft drinks but from a sportsman's point of view it seems as if the "cokes" were on both of them.

Sunday School Picnic.

Next Sunday the officers and teachers of the Methodist Sunday School have decided positively to give the children of the school a picnic. Committees were appointed to take the affair in hand and to arrange for the comfort and pleasure of the little chaps—and the grown ones, too. The school, the invited guests, are requested to assemble at the church on Friday morning at nine o'clock from which point they will either march or ride to Baker's grove in the western part of town.

The baskets are to be at the church no later than nine o'clock and a committee of ladies will see that they are properly cared for and delivered at the picnic grounds.

Each pupil is permitted to invite as many guests as he or she will provide for.

There will be wagons at the church to convey all the dinner baskets to the ground. The committee of arrangements will have a sufficient supply of ice, lemons and such other refreshments on hand so that the young folks will have plenty of cool, refreshing lemonade to drink during the day. Swings will be provided so that the children need not have a dull moment during their outing and there will be enough grown people on hand to look after the comfort and safety of the little ones.

Wilson Memorial.

Last Sunday afternoon was the day set by the Woodmen for the unveiling of the William M. Wilson monument. It was a beautiful day and a vast throng of people took advantage of the balmy weather to witness the imposing ceremonies.

The Woodmen formed a line of march at their forest castle and marched in a body to the cemetery. Here there was perhaps five hundred people awaiting the exercises at the grave. Lieutenant Governor Walter D. Seed was the orator of the day and to say that he delivered a magnificent address would be but lightly expressing it. Everyone who heard it pronounced it a masterpiece of its kind and many were the congratulations showered upon the next Lieutenant Governor for his excellent address. At the conclusion of Gov. Seed's address Mrs. Gamma Anderson, in her own inimitable style, recited, "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud." Those who have heard Mrs. Anderson on previous occasions were prepared for a treat at her hands nor was anyone disappointed, for in her characteristic style she entertained the audience.

After this there was music suitable for an occasion of the kind and then the great crowd dispersed with the unanimous verdict that the ceremonies were a complete success in every detail. Much credit is due to the officers of the lodge for the excellent manner in which they had trained each one of the members to discharge the duties devolving upon him.

The monument is a beautiful one, patterned after the design of the Woodmen of the World. It is of grey marble with a shaft about five feet high and pedestal. Upon one face of the shaft is engraved the name of the deceased comrade, Wm. M. Wilson, and on another are the words, "We shall meet again on the resurrection morn."

Taken all in all the exercises were most imposing and reflect great credit upon the Order of Woodmen.

A Cat Farm.

Mr. D. N. Riggins has branched off into a new industry and states that from now on he will be able, he thinks, to supply the demand for cats. Read his advertisement below and if you are in want of a feline call upon Mr. Riggins, who will undertake to supply your wants both as to quantity and quality. The advertisement reads:

I have a surplus of nice Spring and Summer cats, also a few older ones, which I am anxious to dispose of at the earliest possible date. First come first served. Call early if you wish to have the pick before the assortment is broken. The first one applying and paying for this advertisement can select four of the best ones and can have as many more as is desired at a very close figure.

D. N. RIGGINS,
Cat Breeder.

An Enjoyable Outing.

Last Thursday quite a jolly party went out to Dake's Mill to enjoy the day at a picnic given complimentary to Miss Elizabeth Sealye of LeGrand, and a most pleasant day was spent by all those fortunate enough to be of the party.

The day was spent in wading, fishing, kodaking and other amusements and all returned home tired, after the day's festivities, pronouncing it one of the most thoroughly enjoyed of the many holiday affairs thus far held. Those composing the party were:

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Jones, Mrs. J. M. Churchwell, of LaPine; Mr. C. W. Cox and Mrs. Bama Kemp, Mr. P. D. Wilson and Miss Minnie Muse, Mr. Alonzo Pool and Miss Rosalie Moore, Mr. Sam Cox and Miss Gertie Moore, Mr. C. J. Davis and Miss Elizabeth Sealye, Misses Callie Watts, Naomi Belle Moore and Kate Davis; little Misses Blanche and Kate Churchwell, Eloise Kemp, and Leona Pipes, Masters Hoke and Claude Pipes and Roy Sealye.

At noon a sumptuous dinner was served, fit for the gods, and right royally did everyone enjoy it. In the forenoon Mr. C. W. Cox made himself famous as a chef by securing some water mill meal and making a pone of old time corn bread large enough for each to have a hunk and good enough for each to want more. Returning the crowd, though almost exhausted from the day's outing, still had vivacity enough to give vent to their feelings in pleasant song.

A Rush Order For Death Box.

Mr. W. E. Maddox is to be congratulated upon the prompt execution of the order for a coffin to be used in burying the body of Wiley Young.

The order was given sometime after seven o'clock and Mr. Maddox, in the midst of working his force immediately left the field, went to his shop and began work on the coffin. Considering the amount of labor to be performed it was a quick and a neat job.

The boards had to be secured, measured and sawed, then they had to be put together and the inside of the box trimmed. After this the larger box had to be made. Within two hours after the order was given Mr. Maddox was on his way to the jail with the coffin.

Pretty quick work wasn't it?

Nancy Thompson Passes Away.

On last Sunday there occurred a death in Clanton among the negro population that deserves more than passing mention. Old Aunt Nancy Thompson, a faithful servant and friend, after a lingering illness passed to her reward. Aunt Nancy was well and favorably known by most of the residents of Clanton and none knew her but to respect her.

For some months she had been a patient sufferer from that dread disease—consumption. Death came peacefully to release her from her suffering and on Monday afternoon she was laid to rest.

The passing of these faithful negroes brings to the older people of the South a pang of regret for but few of them now remain. Where once their tribe was legion it has now dwindled down to a small remnant. The faithful old ante-bellum negro is scarce indeed.

Gone A-Fishing.

On Tuesday morning Messrs. Curry, Kicker and Woodyard started off on their semi-annual camp fish. They left for Coosa river points and expect to be gone for several days angling for the finny denizens of the famous Coosa. Catawba worms began to get full ripe and these faithful disciples of Ik Walton could not resist the temptation to "try their luck."

Heavy Hail Storm.

Reports come from Thorsby that a heavy hail storm prevailed there last Monday doing considerable damage to young plants. While no hail fell here the atmosphere was considerably cooled and a high wind was in evidence during the latter part of the afternoon.

The Upchurch Drug Company received this week for its use in the store one of the handsomest cash registers ever seen in this part of the country. In addition to having all the appliances heretofore seen on cash registers here it contains a self-locking drawer for the proprietor and one for each of the clerks. This enables each one to keep their cash sales separate from the others till the general cash is made up in the afternoon and should any amount be short it can easily be ascertained just who made the mistake. Then it has a tabulating device by which the cash sales of each individual clerk is stated and then the total cash sales is computed by another set of wheels. Then too it has a tabulated list of credit sales, of exchanges made and many other new attachments by which, at a glance, can be told the transactions made in any department of the store, whether cash or credit, by whom the sale, exchange or charge was made and the total number of sales made by each person during the day. All in all it is a great labor saving device and has been greatly admired by everyone who has seen it.

Marriage Licenses.

But one or two marriage licenses have been issued thus far this week but by glancing over the communications of the several correspondents it will be found that there are several booked for the near future.

Licenses were issued this week to:

Mr. J. M. Hester and Miss Sallie McMillan.

Mr. Charles Smith and Miss Annie Smith.

Attempted Purchase.

The Press learns that an effort was made by some of the physicians to secure the body of Wiley Young for dissection for the benefit of medical science but that the effort resulted in failure.

It seems that they did not know it was necessary to get the permission of the prisoner himself before the body could be secured, and when Wiley learned that his own people did not care for his body he made an especial request that the body be buried by the county and that no one be allowed to use it for purposes of dissection. So as soon as Dr. Johnson officially pronounced the body dead it was taken in charge by the county officials and buried. Dr. Higgins was especially anxious to come into possession of the eyes in order that he might dissect them and demonstrate the action of the light upon the eye.

Glasscock was elected chairman, and Marion D. Foshee Secretary, and W. F. Culpepper, Jeff Ruffin, and L. T. Grant was elected as committee on arrangements for the day.

After the election of officers Judge Reynolds made a welcome address, which was enjoyed by all.

The following leaders sang twenty minutes each: W. O. Rich, Willie Culp, John Gore, L. T. Grant, S. M. Yates, they dismissed at 12 until 1 o'clock, when they again met and the following leaders sang 20 minutes each in the afternoon: Charlie L. Glasscock, J. L. Harris, Zack Lowery. At 2:30 they adjourned and went to the cemetery and attended the unveiling of W. M. Wilson's monument by the Woodmen of the World, after which they returned to the court house and Mr. R. A. Smith and G. W. Rutherford led a lesson.

Willie Culp, Mrs. John Gore and Miss Maymie Foshee were the organists for the day.

MARION D. FOSHEE,
Secretary.

Clanton Normal School.

The special normal school conducted by Mr. W. W. Monroe opened in Clanton on June 13th with a full attendance, pupils being present from practically all sections of the county. This is an enterprise which deserves encouragement both from those expecting to become teachers and from those who for any reason desire to make up work along special lines; when it is known that practically half of all those applying for certificates of the different grades, before the State Board failed outright or secured a lower grade certificate than was anticipated, not only the need but the necessity of such a course of training and preparation becomes apparent.

Mr. Monroe is a man who has educated and trained himself especially for school work and has added to this education and training ten years of actual experience in the school room. The advantages to those attending, therefore, are not alone the accumulation of the necessary knowledge for passing the State examination, but it also gives them the opportunity of watching the conduct of classes in late and approved methods by a skilled teacher. This is of vast importance, especially to young men and women who are expecting to teach for the first time.

This deserves to become a permanent institution for Clanton and Chilton County. It should be understood that each year this school will be conducted for the benefit of Chilton's prospective teachers and that those who each season leave the county and go to other places for this purpose could be just as well, and probably better, served at home.

Put McCall and Joe Ervin in Toils.

For some days Put McCall has been hankering after some fresh meat and if there is any one kind of meat that he likes better than another it is sausage. Joe Ervin's appetite is a little more delicate; he craves soft boiled eggs and milk toast. Tuesday night the two were discussing the various things that go to make life beautiful and enjoyable and during the conversation their minds turned to things edible. Put's eyes began to twinkle and Ed's mouth to water as they discussed these things and finally temptation became so strong as to be almost or quite irresistible. Going to the back of McKee's market, the rear entrance of which was protected only by a screen door, one of them produced a trusty Barlow and with it slashed the screen. This done it was an easy matter to reach in and unlatch the door. Once in each sought the things that would appease his individual appetite. Put carried off a box of sausage and Ed hugged three dozen eggs close to his heaving bosom. This was the first "turn;" on their return they were met face to face by the night watchman who turned them into the city prison. There they still languish for some days, having nothing tangible but various and sundry dreams of the good things "that might have been" had the night marshal have just "let us alone."

Preliminary Trial.

The preliminary trial of young Mr. Walter Aldridge for the killing of his father last week out in the Stumpo Hill settlement was had on last Tuesday before Justice of the Peace J. P. VanDerveer.

Quite a concourse of people were in town either as witnesses or at attendance upon the trial. When Justice VanDerveer called court to order the court house was comfortably filled with spectators, those of whom [illegible]

After an exhaustive examination argument was made by both the state and the defense at the conclusion of which Justice VanDerveer admitted the defendant to bail in the sum of one thousand dollars.

The bond was quickly made by the friends of the young man and he immediately left for his home. One of the bondsmen was heard to remark that if that was all the court wanted they would make up a thousand dollars right then and there and allow the young man to go.

MAJESTY OF THE LAW VINDICATED

On last Monday morning at the jail house in Clanton the last sad chapter in the life of Wliey Young was written at the end of a hempen rope and the concluding lines of this chapter in the life of Wiley Young was "The way of the transgressor is hard" and the majesty of the law must be vindicated.

The crime for which Wiley Young forfeited his life was committed six weeks ago in the little town of Maplesville, when he in company with others, took the life of Cleve Holditch, a young white man of that place. Besides Wiley Young three others were charged with the crime, two women and another man. Upon investigation it was determined that the other man was not connected with the crime and he was permitted to depart in peace. The two women were tried and received sentences to imprisonment in the State penitentiary while Wiley Young was held to be the principal in the great tragedy and was given the death sentence.

So great was the excitement created by the murder that a speedy trial and conviction was had in order that mob violence might not arise. It was fortunate indeed that the Grand Jury and the Circuit Court were in session at the time of the murder so that an immediate investigation ensued.

From first to last Wiley stoutly maintained his innocence of the crime. Even when mounting the gallows he stated that he was not guilty of the death of Cleve Holditch. But once during his incarceration did he make any statement that could be construed as admitting his guilt. Once when in private conversation with Deputy Smitherman he stated that he was present at the murder, saw the women catch the young man and beat and cut him badly; saw the young man get away and hide in some bushes and afterward saw the women again catch him and cut him to death. He admitted this in a private conversation which he of his own volition sought with the deputy.

On the morning of the execution after prayer had been had in the jail and final preparations had been made for the march to the gallows; after Wiley had stoutly maintained his innocence of all connection with the crime Deputy Smitherman, in the presence of the ministers who were with Wiley, asked him if he objected to his repeating a conversation which they had in the jail, referring to the conversation in which he stated that he was present at the murder but took no part. Wiley agreed that Mr. Smitherman should repeat what he had told on that occasion and the preachers thereupon stated that all through their visits to Wiley he had stubbornly maintained his innocence of all connection or knowledge of the crime and that this was the first time they had ever heard him admit that he was so much as present at the murder.

Wiley seems not to have had any knowledge of a future life or else he faced it with stoical indifference. He was not seen or heard to pray during his confinement and to all who visited him he flatly denied all participation in the crime.

The execution was delayed somewhat because of the late hour at which the coffin for the body was completed.

At ten fifteen in the morning the Sheriff and his deputies went in to the condemned man and told him to prepare for his execution. Without a tremor the negro submitted to the handcuffs and walked with steady stride from the jail house to the door leading to the gallows. There he was asked if he had anything to say to the assembled multitude but he replied that he had nothing further than to say that he was not guilty of the crime for which he was to be executed.

Quickly he mounted the gallows, quickly the black cap was adjusted and quickly was he swung off into eternity.

The rope though well stretched and [illegible] struck the ground a reef was taken in the rope so that his body swung clear. The body was left dangling in mid air for twenty-two minutes after which Drs. Gregg, Johnson and McNeill pronounced the negro dead from strangulation.

There were perhaps a thousand people congregated near the jail trying to get a view of the hanging; but few, however, were permitted within the enclosure.

Wiley Young's body will be buried at the expense of the county, his family having telegraphed that they wanted nothing more to do with him.

Thus is written the final chapter in the life of Wiley Young, the murderer, who in defiance of all law, took the life of his fellowman. May God Almighty have mercy upon his poor soul!

HUNDREDS DROWNED THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Floods Sweep Central Europe and Cause Great Loss in Many Districts.

LOWLANDS BECAME LAKES

Austria, Switzerland and the Balkan Lands Are Devastated — Survivors Are Starving.

Budapest, Hungary—Nearly 300 persons were killed and several villages annihilated by a cloudburst in Krasso-Szoreny, a county of Hungary, bordering on Transylvania, Roumania and Servia. The capital of the county, which is mainly peopled by Roumanians, is Lugos.

It is expected the death roll will be greatly increased when communications, which have been almost completely cut off, are restored. Bridges, telegraph and telephone wires in the district have been destroyed and it is feared that many of the survivors of the flood will die of starvation or exposure before it is possible to send assistance.

Berne, Switzerland—The floods in Switzerland, caused by continued rains, particularly in the eastern and central districts, have proved to be the most disastrous in the last 60 years. Twenty lives have been lost in the swollen waters.

Many bridges constructed at great expense have been either carried away or seriously damaged. Property losses aggregating $2,500,000 have already been reported.

Constantinople — The government began efforts at relief work in the flooded districts of European and Asiatic Turkey. It is believed that the roll of killed will be 500 in Armenia alone.

Geneva — Melting snows increased the seriousness of the flood situation in Switzerland and Bavaria. Four towns on the borders of Lake Constance are under water, according to dispatches received, and hundreds of their inhabitants are marooned.

The lowlands of Western Switzerland are particularly affected. Through the valley of the Orbe, running from Lake Neuchatel to Lake Geneva, towns are flooded, bridges swept away and crops destroyed, according to dispatches from Neuchatel. Yveron is menaced, and the towns of Vuffient, Bushigny and Daillens are under water wholly or partly, the inhabitants having been forced to flee.

Advices from Zurich say that that city is also inundated, as well as Aldorff, Stanz and Asrau. Reports from Lucerne say that great damage has been done there, and in the surrounding territory.

Belfirade—Reports received from King Peter, who is conducting the relief work in the flooded Morava river valley, indicate that between 300 and 400 persons have lost their lives and that at least 20 towns have suffered heavy loss, besides incalculable damage in the rural districts.

MINERS BARELY ESCAPE

Woods Around Port Arthur, Ontario, Also on Fire—Homes Burning.

Naco, Ariz.—The entire mining town of Mevarabi in Sonora, Mexico, including a ten stamp mill, has been destroyed by the forest fire that is sweeping the Ojo and Bacoachi mountains. The miners had a narrow escape and had to build back fires to enable them to flee to Cananse.

The forest fire has jumped a wide gap and is now spreading in the timber covering the Bacoachi mountains. The fire line now extends for 50 miles. The ranch property of John Hopstad, a pioneer American ranchman, has been swept away. Along the Yaqui river, near the railroad, many panthers and bears and other wild animals have been driven from the forests and lives of a number of people have been imperiled by the beasts.

The property recently sold by the Banco de Sonora to an English syndicate has a fire line of 15 miles and 125 men are fighting the flames.

Port Arthur, Ont.—Damages to standing timber that will reach hundreds of thousands of dollars, dozens of settlers rendered homeless, their effects destroyed and their fields scorched so that there is little likelihood of crops being raised this season, is the result of forest fires surrounding Port Arthur. Some very narrow escapes from death are reported by persons whose homes became isolated by acres of flames.

$3,000,000 Road Improvement Off.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Projected improvements calling for the expenditure of $3,000,000 by the Santa Fe road in California have been abandoned. The reason, acording to a statement from the officers of the company, is that the government's action in holding up the proposed increase in freight rates has made it impossible to procure the necessary money on equitable terms.

Philadelphia—A new altitude record for this state was made here by the balloon Philadelphia II., with Dr. Thomas E. Eldridge, Dr. George H. THOUSANDS GREET FORMER PRESIDENT ON HIS RETURN

COLONEL THEODORE ROOSEVELT

New York—With the guns of two forts and a battleship booming out a presidential salute, Theodore Roovevelt came into his home port after an absence of 15 months, during which he journeyed more than 26,000 miles.

He received a welcome such as no other private citizen has been vouchsafed in America. City, state and nation united to do him honor, while Rough Riders whooped their joy and everyone cheered to the best of their ability.

The weather, which had been rainy during the night, with his vessel, the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, slowly poking her nose through a dense fog, cleared early in the day and the bright sun shone through a thin haze, assuring complete success of the great pageant prepared for the wanderer.

People from all of the 46 states joined in the greeting to Mr. Roosevelt, who took part in an imposing marine display and parade through the streets of New York.

Immediately after landing he pledged himself to put his shoulder to the wheel and help solve the problems that confront the United States. He uttered no word as to whether he would support the administration or the insurgents in congress.

The welcome to Mr. Roosevelt was extended to him while he was still on the water. That of the city was given when the ex-president landed at the Battery after the marine parade in which he took part on the revenue cutter Androscoggin.

The formal reception at the Battery was imposing. With tens of thousands cheering, Mayor Gaynor was escorted there by a squad of 90 mounted police, one of whom carried the mayor's flag.

Hhe mayor welcomed the returned traveler and Mr. Roosevelt replied briefly.

Of all the events of the busy arrival, the one that stood out most prominently was the meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and the members of his family whom he had not seen in 15 months.

He bore with his usual buoyancy a day of heavy fatigue, public duties and private emotions commingled and at 4:40 o'clock, after a family reunion at the home of Theron Butler, grandfather of his prospective daughter-in-law, Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander, left the city he had surveyed the same morning from afloat, reviewed in parade ashore and greeted by explicit word of mouth, to be welcomed more intimately by his life-long neighbors at Oyster Bay, L. I.

PARR GRANTED $100,000

Customs Deputy Who Nosed Out Sugar Frauds Gets Moiety Fund.

Washington—Richard Parr, the customs deputy at New York who materially assisted the government in recovering over $2,000,000 in the sugar underweighing frauds, is to be given a reward of $100,000.

The decision to reward Parr in the amount named was reached at a conference between President Taft and Secretary MacVeagh.

Parr discovered the secret spring on the dock of the American Sugar Refining Company by which the underweighing practice was carried on. There were two other claimants with Parr for reward. They were Edwin I. Anderson and Charles M. Daily. Secretary MacVeagh submitted to Attorney General Wickersham the question whether he was authorized to reward the three men, but the attorney general held that Parr only was entitled to any compensation from the moiety fund.

Guthrie, Okla.—"Insurgency" was denounced by the Oklahoma Republican state convention, which adopted a platform decidedly "stand pat." James A. Harris was re-elected state chairman by acclamation.

ROOSEVELT THANKS AMERICAN PEOPLE.

Declares That He Is Eager to Do His Part in Solving Problems.

New York—Replying to greetings from Mayor Gaynor at the reception to ex-President Roosevelt Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I thank you, Mayor Gaynor. Through you I thank your committee and through them I wish to thank the American people for their greeting. I need hardly say I am mot deeply moved by the reception given. No man could receive such a greeting without being made to feel both very proud and very humble.

"I have been away a year and a quarter from America and I have seen strange and interesting things alike in heart of the frowning wilderness and in the capitals of the mightiest and most highly polished of civilized nations. I have thoroughly enjoyed myself and now I am more glad than I can say to get home, to be back in my own country, back among people I love. I am ready and eager to do my part so far as I am able in helping solve problems which must be solved if we of this, the greatest democratic republic upon which the sun has ever shown, are to see its destinies rise to the high level of our hopes and its opportunities.

"This is the duty of every citizen, but it is peculiarly my duty, for any man who has ever been honored by being made President of the United States is thereby forever after rendered the debtor of the American people and is bound throughout his life to remember this as his prime obligations, and in private life as much as in public life so to carry himself that the American people may never have cause to feel regret that once they placed him at their head."

SENATE FINALLY ADOPTS THE RAIROAD BILL

Republicans Pull Together and Roll Up Majority of 50 to 11.

Washington—The senate placed its final stamp of approval on the administration railroad bill, which has been pending in one stage or another almost since the beginning of the session, by adopting the report of the conference committee on that measure.

The vote came at the close of a day devoted to a fragmentary discussion of the measure and was without especial feature. The report prevailed by a large majority, the ayes being 50 and the noes 11. All of the negative votes were cast by Democrats and Senators Chamberlain, Clay, McEnery, Simmons, Stone and Taylor united with the Republicans in support of the bill.

Just before the vote was taken Senator Stone elicited a statement from Senator Elkins to the effect that no agreement had been entered into between the Republican leaders and Democratic senators looking to the elimination of the capitalization provisions of the bill.

"The motion to strike out the capitalization feature was made by a Democrat and was supported by the votes of all but one of the senators," added Mr. Elkins. "After that there was no necessity for a bargain, and so far as I know there was none."

STATEHOOD BILL PASSES THE SENATE

Vote is Unanimous on the Substitute for the House Measure.

CONCURRENCE IS ASSURED

After Three Months' Effort Senator Beveridge Gets Bill Off the Calendar.

Washington, D. C.—After remaining on the senate calendar for almost three months in a state of uncertainty as to its fate, the bill providing for the admission of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona to separate statehood, was passed by the senate after a debate consuming little more than two hours.

The measure was called up by Senator Beveridge, chairman of the committee on territories, and passed after speeches by Senators Beveridge, Frazier, Nelson, Hughes and Smoot. All the speeches were favorable to the creation of the two states, but the Democrats favored the house bill.

When the vote was reached there was a division on the senate substitute for the house bill, but with that amendment accepted, the senate voted solidly for he passage of the bill. The senate substitute was adopted as an amendment to the house measure by a strictly party vote, the ballot standing 42 to 19.

As passed the bill would provide for the admission as states of the two territories, but not until after a constitution had been adopted by each of them, approved by the President and ratified by congress.

Representative Hamilton of Michigan, chairman of the house committee on territories, said he had no doubt now of the enactment of the statehood bill into law at this session of congress.

STEEL TRUST PROBE IS PASSED BY HOUSE

Stanley Resolution, Calling on Attorney General for Information, Goes Through.

Washington—Without show of opposition, the house adopted the resolution introduced by Representatives Stanley of Kentucky, directing the attorney general to send to the house whaever information he might have on the relations between the Carnegie Steel Company, the Federal Steel Company, the American Bridge Company, the American Tin Plate Company and the other constituent companies of the United States Steel Corporation.

The resolution was reported to the house by Chairman Parker of the judiciary committee, with a recommendation that it pass. There was no objection to immediate consideration and passage of the resolution, and it went through without a dissenting vote.

ALL BUT FIVE DROWN

Only One Passenger of Dutch Schooner Van Herdt Which Is Wrecked, Survives.

Willemstad, Curacao—The government schooner Van Herdt has been wrecked on the northeast coast of Curacao. The captain, crew and passengers, with the exception of four sailors and one passenger, were drowned.

The lost include the governor of Buen Ayre.

The Van Herdt was bound for this port from Buen Ayre, a Dutch West Indian island on the Venezuelan coast 30 miles east of the Island of Curacao. She struck during the thick weather of Sunday night. News of the disaster was brought here by the five survivors.

The Van Herdt was a craft engaged in the interisland traffic of the Dutch Antilles. Her passengers were residents of the islands.

REVIVE BULL FIGHTS

Bill in Cuban House; Americans May Get Concession.

Havana—A bill legalizing the revival of bull fights has been favorably reported from committee to the house and is now awaiting further action.

The bill gives a company, the capital of which is principally American, the exclusive concession for 30 years to operate a Monte Carlo on a tract near Camp Columbia, at which the attractions will be gambling games, bull fights, cock fights, horse races and other sports. The object of the bill, it is declared, is to attract tourists to Havana.

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRATS NOMINATE STATE TICKET

Platform Demands Revision of the Payne-Aldrich Ta...

Allentown, Pa.—The Democratic state convention nominated the following state ticket upon a platform, the principal point of which is tariff revision.

Governor—Webster Grim, lawyer, Doylestown, Bucks county.

Lieutenant Governor—Samuel B. Price, lawyer-banker, Scranton, Lackawanna county.

Secretary of Internal Affairs—James I. Blakslee, owner of a power, heat and light plant, Lehighton, Carbon county.

State Treasurer—Samuel B. Philson, banker, Meyersdale, Somerset county.

The platform as finally adopted reads as follows:

Under the mask of protection to American labor the Republican party has taxed the necessaries of life for the benefit of corporate trusts.

It has used the tariff, not with the constitutional object of raising revenue, but that the trusts may increase their profits and enlarge their dividends. By this unlawful abuse of tariff lays it has increased the cost of living and laid an oppressive and cruel burden upon the mass of the people, to whose cries for relief the present Republican Congress has turned a deaf ear.

Pledged by its National platform and the explicit promise of the President to revise the tariff so as to reduce duties and lift from the daily need of the citizens the intolerable burden it has imposed, the Republican party has, at the dictation of the trusts, passed a tariff bill that not only fastened the existing iniquitous taxes on the necessaries of life, but in many instances augmented them and created new burdens.

Taxes Benefit Classes.

We charge the Republican party with exploiting the taxing power of the Government for the benefit of special classes, special interests and its political advantage, to the obstruction of private enterprise and the oppression of the people.

The Democratic party, therefore, declares reform in our revenue laws to be the first and most urgent duty of Congress, and that in the levying of a revenue tax the following principles should be strictly observed:

Free raw materials.

The lightest possible tax in necessaries of life. Luxuries should bear the greatest burden.

The products of monopolies and oppressive trusts should be made to face the free competition of the markets of the world, that the people may not be subjected to arbitrary exactions.

No special privileges.

The needs of the consumer and the comforts of the many to be considered before the profits of the few.

We demand the strictest economy in every department at the National and State Goverment and insist that such methods of public accounting be established and enforced as to put them on a thorough businesslike footing, and secure unmistakable individual responsibility on the part of every force entrusted with authority.

The public lands, the forests, the water porer, the mineral resources of the territories of the United States, which have not passed out of the governmental control, must be safe-guarded by the thorough legislation from exploitation of any kind that will render them private property.

We favor the principle of arbitration in all labor disputes and the enactment of practical and effective Federal and State arbitration laws for the settlement of labor disputes involving public service corporations.

We favor further legislation, both National and State, which will definitely determine what campaign expenses, incurred by candidates and their agents, are to be regarded as legitimate, and such laws as will provide for the compulsory publication in detail under heavy penalties of such expenses.

For our public schools we demand legislation bringing them to a state of efficiency unexcelled anywhere, and assisted by liberal appropriations as will secure this efficiency properly distributed among the people, through their chosen and directed school bonds; and to ask for legislation which will codify and simplify the school code of the State.

We favor appropriation for good roads to the betterment of the highways in this Commonwealth, insisting upon a more economical and workmanlike construction of such roads, and declare that such roads should be built from co-centers to accommodate rural districts, and the public at large, rather than by constructing a few broad highways across the State.

And we further declare for such legislation as will effectually prevent the nomination of minority party candidates by voters of the mapority party.

We recommend the amendment to the act of Assembly of the first of May, 1907, relating to the railroad commission of the Commonwealth, so that additional power be given to the settled commission to enforce its decisions, decrees and rulings against unjust discriminations in freight or passenger rates, as against any localities or industries in this Commonwealth, or in favor of any particular localities, industries, corporations or individuals in the Commonwealth or beyond the limits thereof.

RAILROAD BILL BROUGHT INTO SHAPE AT LAST

Report of Conference Committee Laid Before Senate and House.

SOME NOTABLE CHANGES

Commission May Suspend Rates Ten Months—Injunction Amended.

Washington, D. C.—The conference report on the administration railroad bill was presented to the senate by Chairman Elkins of the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce. It represented one week's work by conferees of the senate and house in an effort to harmonize the differences in the bills passed by the two branches of congress.

As finally perfected by the conferees the bill carries most of the features of the original administration measure except the actions to permit railroads to make pooling agreements, to authorize the government to regulate the issuance of stocks and bonds and to permit a railroad to purchase the remaining stock of another line in which it already controls 50 per cent of the stock.

In the place of the house provision the conferees incorporated a provision authorizing the president to appoint a commission to investigate questions pertaining to the issuance of stocks and bonds by railroads. Expenditures by the commission are limited to $25,000 and it was not given authority to summon witnesses or to compel the production of books and papers. No time was fixed for the making of a report.

The bill as perfected, therefore, and as likely to become law, would create a commerce court composed of five judges, the first of whom are to be selected by the president, and thereafter by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. This court will have jurisdiction over all suits brought to enforce or set aside orders of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. In other words, it would centralize the existing authority and jurisdiction of circuit courts in matters affecting inter-state commerce.

Extension of Power.

Other sections would enlarge the power of the commission over railroad regulations and practices and place under the jurisdiction of the commission, telegraph, telephone and cable companies, whether wire or wireless and would broaden the scope of the word railroad so as to extend the jurisdiction of the commission over bridges, ferries and terminal facilities. This extension of power is regarded as of the utmost importance.

General provisions are made affecting railroads to compel them to furnish rates upon application and to authorize the commission to institute inquiries on its own motion. By provisions adopted by the house and retained by the conferees the scope of the commission to make regulations was enlarged. It also provided that a consignor of freight shall have the right to designate by which of two or more through routes his property shall be transported to destination.

The new court will be known as the Commerce Court as provided by the house, instead of the Court of Commerce as desired by the senate.

CANADA BARS POOR LABOR

Authorities Enforce Regulations Requiring That Aliens Have at Least $200.

Washington, D. C.—Canadian authorities on the northwestern boundary are rigidly enforcing a regulation requiring alien laborers, with the exception of Americans, applying for admission to that country to have $200 in cash. The result has been that thousands of railroad laborers and others needed on large contract work practically have been shut out.

Some of the American railroad builders in Alaska have been enforcing a rule that only white men can work for them, all nationalities being excluded except laborers from northern Europe, America, Australia and New Zealand.

EDITORIAL.

The attempt of the republicans of Pennsylvania to extricate Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State, from an embarrassing position by nominating him for Governor of the state seems to have proven abortive. President Taft insists that he remain in the cabinet so that he may continue to undo the "my policies" of a certain Big Noise known as Teddy the Trotter.

Like Belshazzah of old the republicans have viewed with alarm the handwriting upon the political wall and are now exerting every effort to "get together." Conciliations are being offered the "insurgents" and petitions are being presented them to remain within the party. It all comes too late, however. The people—the common people—the people who sustain the government—have done the writing this time and they are going to write in no uncertain line next November. The party of plutocrats and high tariff is doomed. The party which favors the few and belittles the multitude has been "hoisted on its own petard." They had the rope and with that rope they have proceeded to hang themselves. The plain people of the hills and valleys will now have a word—and to this word the money sharks and political aristocrats will have to listen whether they will or not.

From far off Maine even down to the arid plains of Texas comes the cry "give the masses a chance for a full dinner pail." Let republicans retire since they have made such a miserable failure of restoring to the common people the privilege of living upon their own wages.

We print elsewhere a communication from a sufferer who asks release at the hands of the town authorities from the abominable tooting and screeching and snorting of the engines that infect this place.

As suggested by the writer, there is a way to abate the nuisance—an effective way—but the Press has issued its manifesto in so far as "suggestions" are concerned. We would like to see the outrage stopped but if the others can live under it we can do so. To a nervous woman or a real busy man this constant blasting of the steam whistle is more than a nuisance—it is a detriment to business and a breeder of nervous disease. But if the Press should happen to make a suggestion as to a remedy it would be sure to go awry just as have lots of other suggestions emanating from this paper; hence, we sit right steady in the boat entertaining the hope that after a cycle of years the town will wake up to its rights or else the engineers will grow tired of their tooting. A suggestion from us would be a signal for tooting and spontaneous encouragement to the trainmen to toot louder and longer. While we are with "A Sufferer," being ourselves a sufferer, we deem it foolish to make any effort to abate the outrage or to even suggest that it be modified. The effective way, from the viewpoint of the Press, would be for "A Sufferer" to join hands with the Press and insist upon more, shriller, longer and harsher tooting. If that were done we might get our "wish" but to suggets a discontinuance—never!

From all over the county comes news that the democrats are growing more and more aggressive and more and more confident of victory in the Fall. This is as it should be. The republicans all over the Union have placed themselves in the midst of a dilemma from which they are unable to extricate themselves. They must give an accounting of their stewardship this year and they will be unable to meet the demand.

Let Chilton County democrats take heart; the victory is ours. We have every reason to be jubilant, no reason to be grouchy.

Some men want the public to hand them positions of trust and honor upon silver waiters while others refuse to turn loose even when the public uses a pitchfork to "unhinge" them.

Rumors of the new paper are again afloat in the atmosphere. The editor is reminded, ere he begins, that there is but one word in all the English language that will rhyme with "editor" and that is the word "creditor." Beware, beware, beware!

It's a long lane that has no turn, so the adage goes. Democracy in Chilton has been travelling that long lane hopeful of the turn at every mile post but never flagging because she saw it not. Now that the turn is in sight all are ready to break into a canter to get to that turn. Just be steady boys, it's in plain sight now and we'll march up the turn next November singing songs of triumph.

LED BY SATAN.

Satan's seeking whom he may devour,
Each second, minute and hour,
And as we careless glide
With the world and its pride,
On with our wicked ways
Evil thoughts and sinful plays,

He takes us high upon the hills
And shows us the beauties of the world,
Tells us how he can feed, cure ills
If we but humble to him and serve.
Oh, poor creatures in the flesh
Submit to Satan and fall in his mesh?

He tells us to taste of the sweets
Of life as we journey through
He can carry us along on balmy sheets
With never a quiver, I trow
And we listen, so weak in the flesh,
That we finally fall in his mesh!
At his sweet music he bids us to dance,
As David of old, we're each a saint
And for heaven we're taking no chance
For all shall go and none shall faint.
Poor, silly things so weak in the flesh
We fall, forthwith, into Satan's mesh!

Then finally the Reaper will come
And the chaff will He bundle and burn
And will say to the faithful of earth
Enter now the home of love and mirth.
Prepared for you of lasting joy
But the faithless must consume and destroy.

LOVE.

Love is a sacred thought,
And was lawfully taught.
No greater command
Was ever given man.

Is there a girl or boy
Who says love is not joy?
Both young and old
Will speak out bold.

And we truly love
Our God in heaven above,
Who gave our heart
For love thou who art.

And as we sit alone
Amid gloom of day
And think of home
And friends away

If we but knew
That love was near,
With heart so true
Would there be cheer?

God is love, my dear,
And love and joy alone.
He is always near
To give comfort to his own.

When sorrow and trouble arise
And turn us blue
We sink and raise our eyes
To God so true.

We beg his love
And tender care
His spirit from above
To claim us as we are.

The mother loves her darling child,
God loves us better still
And to his mercy we confide
Our cares and joys and ills.

Dame Nature, herself, knew a good thing, for she sent her old moon out bright and shining on the evening of the 18th of June to accommodate the club, it seemed, and greet the twenty or more young people who assembled at the grove. It was an evening of great gayety and the fact that it takes the Bachelors' Club to do the entertaining stunt, was demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt. Nuf sed.

The revival at the Methodist Church which has been in progress here for some days came to a close Monday night. The Rev. Mr. Haskew has been in charge of the services and it has been in every particular a great success. Mr. Haskew presents the word with power and the people respond readily to his ministry.

The meeting was held in the Methodist church but all denominational lines were withdrawn and all invited to the meeting which was greatly appreciated and enjoyed. It was thought at one time that the crowds had become so large as to necessitate a larger building but arrangements were made for seating all by securing chairs from the dealers and from private residences. At the close of the Baptist Sunday School, last Sunday a line of march was formed with the two smallest children in the lead and all marched up to the Methodist church, where special seats had been reserved for them. There were about ninety in the line of march and it made a pleasant sight to see the young ones going to divine service.

A special meeting for Ladies only was conducted by Rev. Mr. Simmons last Friday with a good attendance. The services were greatly enjoyed by all who attended.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Haskew conducted a special meeting for men and boys which was well attended and greatly enjoyed. Mr. Haskew spoke in plain language of the sins so common among men and boys and appealed to their reason and pride to abandon these transgressions of the law. Mr. Haskew is but twenty-eight years of age—a bright future awaits him.

There is quite a lot of sickness around in this community—fever and chills.

There was a wreck on the Southern eleven miles below here last week, all of the coaches leaving the track but not a passenger was hurt. The train was running two hours late and had orders to make Selma as quickly as possible. The same crew had been in a wreck previously during the day and the engineer was bruised up considerably so that the fireman was acting as engineer when the second wreck occurred.

Last Wednesday the fire alarm was sounded at the Twin Tree Lumber Co.'s plant but the fire extinguishers were brought into immediate use so that the fire did not spread. Had they waited to use the hose the probability is that the fire would have gotten beyond control.

Miss Jessie Mae Morris went to Centreville yesterday and reports a most pleasant visit with friends there.

Mr. Grady Williams is at home again and we are glad to welcome him as he is a good fellow and we want all of this class we can get.

Hon. H. E. Reynolds, Hon. Jerome Fuller and Mr. White, of Centreville, were visitors here last Tuesday.

Misses Estelle and Lillian Tucker, of Troy, who have been visiting Mrs. J. C. Merchant, left for their home Tuesday much to the regret of their many friends.

Mr. T. U. Crumpton, our beloved citizen, spent Tuesday in Selma on business. Mr. Crumpton is our main dependence here when we want things done.

We notice that the Grand Jury recommends that the county issue bonds to work the public roads. We do not favor this but think that the Dallas County plan is the better way and less expensive.

The crops here are in good condition and the farmers are looking commensurately happy. J. M. M.

(Note by Editor).—Our correspondent calls upon us to give the Dallas County plan of road working and suggests that we ought to get together. The Editor fully agrees with the correspondent, but he is for a bond issue, just as Dallas County did. Later on we will try to explain the matter in detail. This paper is for good roads first, last and all the time. There is no reason why we should not have them twelve months in the year. That is one of the hobbies of the Press.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION. ATTENTION, SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS.

The Executive committee met in Clanton Tuesday and arranged program, and place of meeting for the County Sunday school Convention, which is to be held at Verbena, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 5-6. Program will be published next week, if all necessary arrangements can be made. As the time is short, and the work to be done is great, let us all get a hustle on ourselves and make this one of the very best conventions we have ever held. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY.

Let me urge all Sunday-school Superintendents to be sure and elect two delegates, (as that is the number each school is entitled to) at once, please don't delay this matter, for procrastination is the thief of time and has been the cause of many sad defeats.

From now until the convention is over, let us be earnestly engaged in prayer to our Father, that he may give us wisdom to do the things that need to be done, and then we shall be blessed in the doing of them. Let each one be willing to do his or her part in this work for the Master, and then go forward in this great work with the full assurance that God will shower his blessings down on us in our convention work.

"Arise, let us go home. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY."

Fraternally,
A. K. HORN,
County President.

Until further notice I will be out of my stable on THURSDAY of each week. Returns will be made same day. Thanking you for past favors, I am

TAFT SIGNS THE RAILROAD BILL

House Passes Railroad and Statehood Measures

GETTING READY TO ADJOURN

Adamson of Georgia Puts Up Fight Against the Bill to the Last and His Is the Only Vote Recorded Against It.

Washington.—President Taft signed the railroad bill shortly after his return from Pennsylvania. The measure, as had the statehood bill, had been passed by the House and sent immediately to the White House. The President did not sign the statehood bill.

Washington.—Two of the most important administration measures in the railroad and statehood bills, were acted upon in finality by Congress, and the former became law as soon as it received President Taft's signature.

The House took this action, the Senate having previously disposed of both measures. It was accomplished practically without debate and in record time, not even a roll call being required in the whole proceeding.

The railroad bill was the first to receive consideration, Chairman Mann of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce calling the conference from the speaker's table. Brief speechess were made. Among them were several by members in expression of their opposition to railroad legislation as perfected in conference.

Final action on statehood legislation was accomplished with even greater ease. By reason of pressure from the White House and aided by Postmaster General Hitchcock, opposition to the Senate amendments to the statehood bill were almost entirely dissipated.

The democrats were induced to forego their objections through the judicious circulation of a report that if the bill went into conference it might not emerge during the present session.

Chairman Hamilton of the House committee on territories at once realized that the only way to put the legislation through and not delay the present session was to agree to the Senate amendments and he welcomed the assistance of the administration.

It cannot be definitely stated when Arizona and New Mexico will come into the union under the legislation acted upon. It requires that the constitutions adopted by the proposed stated must be ratified by Congress and approved by the President.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS OF MRS. MORSE ARE SOLD.

New York.—Mrs. Charles W. Morse is in Atlanta, Ga., where her husband is a federal prisoner, because she wished to be away from New York when the auctioneer, commissioned to sell her household goods, valued at $300,000, went to the Fifth avenue home to make inventory of everything in the house preparatory to the sale which will take place on June 23. Many of these are treasures collected by Mrs. Morse and her husband in Europe and America, and have sentimental as well as intrinsic value. According to Mrs. Morse's friends, the ordeal of showing and assisting in cataloguing them was more than she could bring herself to face.

The lake is very deep and the bodies have not been recovered.

JAP PRINCE'S TRAIN HITS BURNING BRIDGE

St. Paul, Minn.—Traveling 30 miles an hour, the Oriental limited the fast Burlington train from Chicago to St. Paul, carrying Prince Fushimi, cousin of the Emperor of Japan and Princess Fushimi, shot out on the bridge which spans the Wisconsin river, while the structure was burning. The engineer kept steam on until his train had run through the flames, then applied the brakes and members of the train crew, with fire extinguishers and buckets of water, put out the fire.

Suggestion for the Use of Part of the Fund for Immigrants and Poor Folks

By Joseph N. Francolini

IN connection with the gift of Mr. John D. Rockefeller the following plan has suggested itself to me as meeting many ill conditions:

First, the purchase of farm land adjacent to a large city.

Second, on every several acres of the land to be provided a house and warm with horse, cow and farm implements, seeds and trees according to the ground conditions in the judgment of an expert agriculturist.

Third, immigrants and poor people to be transported there and maintained (with a stipulated quantity of flour, dried meat, fruits, etc.), at the company's expense for a few months or more.

Fourth, at the termination of one year or more payments in instalments to be made by farmer (company until full amount of indebtedness has been paid.

Fifth, if at the termination of one year or more the farmer has not made the farm yield a certain percentage of increase another man to be placed there in possession.

The effects of this would be:

First, the dissemination of immigrants and those who live in congested city districts.

Second, the increase of wealth and produce in the country.

Third, the uplift of people who would otherwise live in a demoralizing environment.

Fourth, the question of a national land [illegible] would be a long time in coming.

PROCEEDINGS FILED AGAINST PACKERS

Five Companies Sued in Missouri Supreme Court

OUSTER IS DEMANDED

Attorney General of Missouri Asks That the Corporations' Licenses Be Forfeited and They Be Denied Corporate Rights.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Attorney General Elliott Major began ouster proceedings against five meat packing companies by filing quo warranto informations in the supreme court. The companies attached are Armour Packing company, Morris & Co., Swift & Co., Hammond Packing company and St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision company.

The Armour, Swift and Morris companies are charged with violating the anti-trust law and conspiracy, and the Hammond and St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision company as subsidiary companies of the National Packing company with conspiracy to control the business in Missouri.

The five companies are named in two petitions which ask that the corporations be excluded from all corporate rights; that their licenses be forfeited and that all or such portion of their property as the court may deem proper be confiscated, or in lieu thereof a fine to be imposed.

Armour, Swift and Morris are charged with having entered into a conspiracy in 1909 to control the prices to be paid by dealers in live stock, poultry, butter, eggs, dairy and agricultural products; to control the prices to be paid by retail and wholesale dealers for dressed meats, and to control the prices to be paid by all retail and wholesale dealers for butter, eggs, poultry, game, dairy and agricultural products and byproducts from the business of slaughtering live stock.

The second count of the petition charges that the three packing companies conspired to restrain trade and destroy competition in purchase and sale of meat products, livestock, poultry, butter and eggs, by fixing a price to be paid by all members of the alleged agreement, and conspiring to control the business of buying, selling and dealing in packing house products.

The alleged absorption of the Hammond and St. Louis Dressed Beef Provision companies by the National Packing company is said in the petition of the attorney general to have taken place in September, 1902. The Hammond and St. Louis companies are charged with having entered into an unlawful agreement with others engaged in meat packing for the purpose of restricting competition and to prevent lawful trade.

The National Packing company, the information filed in the court alleges, was chartered in New Jersey in 1902 with a capital stock of $15,000,000 to engage in meat packing and selling and to hold stock of any other corporation.

The National Packing company, the petition says, "was not organized in good faith for the purpose of engaging in the business authorized by its charter, but as a corporate scheme to effect an unlawful trust among the Hammond and St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision companies and numerous other corporations, individuals and partnerships engaged in the same business in Missouri and throughout the United States with a view to lessen, restrict, limit and destroy trade and competition in the purchase and sale of all packing house products in which the Hammond and St. Louis and other companies were dealing for fixing the prices and for limiting the amount and quantity of packing house products sold and offered for sale in Missouri and throughout the United States."

It is charged in the petition that the National Packing company obtained control of the Hammond and St. Louis companies which had previously been engaged in Missouri as legitimate competitors and that the National has ever since voted the stocks of the companies, collected the dividends and used the companies in furtherance of the alleged unlawful trust.

The Hammond and St. Louis companies, through the National Packing company, the attorney general charges, have become members of the alleged trust and have been guilty of abuse of privileges not granted to them by Missouri.

Public Building Bill Reported

Washington—An omnibus public building bill carrying authorizations for appropriations aggregating $19,288,500 with $3,095,000 additional for continuing contracts stretching over varying periods of years was reported to the House.

This action, while anticipated for several months, is unusualy during a sessions when a rivers and harbors appropriation bill has been passed. Both measures are popularly called "pork barrels," and they have had an unbroken history of alternating in the past, Congress never passing both at the same session.

Conferences have been held between President Taft and leaders of both houses of Congress, including Speaker Cannon, apparently assure the enactment of the bill into law.

The bill makes liberal provisions for plans for new and imposing public buildings in Washington where the government now pays over $500,000 in annual rentals to private property owners. It authorizes for three new department buildings on sites previously acquired—for the departments of state, justice and commerce and labor—whose ultimate cost is limited to $8,000,000; for a new city postoffice building at the new union station at $3,000,000 and a modern office building to accommodate the geological, Indian, reclamation and mines bureaus at $2,500,000.

Following are among the items of $50,000 or more:

Provision is made for the construction of new buildings on sites heretofore acquired as follows:

Alabama—Cullman, $50,000; Opelika, $55,000.

Georgia—Quitman, $50,000.

MOTORMAN'S LIFE PAYS FOR HEROISM

Washington.—Charles Diver, a motorman, lies dying in a local hospital from injuries he sustained while endeavoring to save passengers of his car from the deadly electric fluid of a broken feed wire.

The car with others, had been stopped where overhead repairs were in progress on the Cabin John bridge line. The passengers had left the car and were walking about.

Two young women approached too near the sputtering feed wire. Diver saw their danger, leaped forward, brushed them aside and with a newspaper in his hand seized the wire. The current hurled him back against his car and his clothing burst into flames.

As scores of people looked on, shuddering at the spectacle of the burning man, someone sprang forward and smothered the flames with a coat.

Diver was then lifted and borne to the bank of the Potomac river near by, where water was thrown on him and fruitless efforts made to bring him back to consciousness.

It was long after he reached the hospital before he became conscious. Then his wife, who had been a mother but two weeks and who had arisen and come to his side, was told there was little, if any, change for his recovery.

HAMILTON TAKES KITCHENER'S PLACE

London.—Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, adjutant to the forces, has been appointed to the post of inspector general of the Mediterranean forces, to succeed Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, whose resignation was communicated officially to the house of commons by War Secretary Haldane on June 13.

Lord Kitchener was appointed to the Mediterranean command last August to succeed the Duke of Connaught.

There was a strong agitation to have Kitchener appointed to a more weighty place, and many protests against sending the best organizer in the British army to such a remote post were made.

Lord Kitchener's resignation, therefore, occasioned no surprise. General Hamilton is second military member of the army council.

He was chief of staff to Lord Kitchener in 1901-2 in South Africa, and was one of the defenders of Ladysmith in the Boer war. He served as military representative in India and with the Japanese army in Manchuria in 1904-5.

PRESIDENT TAFT SIGNS STATEHOOD BILL MONDAY

Washington.—President Taft signed the statehood bill at 1:40 o'clock Monday afternoon in the presence of Postmaster Hitchcock, Senator Beveridge, chairman of the Senate committee on territories; Representative Hamilton, chairman of the House committee on territories; Delegate Cameron of Arizona, Delegate Andrews, of New Mexico and several others.

Two pens were used in affixing the signature. "Approved, William H.," was signed with a solid gold pen made to order for Postmaster Hitchcock, who has done much hard work in putting the bill through. "Taft" was written with a big eagle feather pen, presented by Delegate Andrews, and "June 20, 1910," was written with the gold pen.

After signing the bill the President congratulated the citizens of the territories who were present and was heartily congratulated by them.

A New Version.

Apropos of George Washington and the cherry tree story, Senator Beveridge said at a dinner in Indianapolis:

"I asked a little boy what the story was the other day, and he actually didn't know. He said he knew, though, the story about the judgment of Solomon, and he proceeded to tell it to me.

"Solomon, he said, was a very wise man. One day two women went to him, quarrelling about a baby. The first woman said, 'It is my child.' The second said, 'No; it is mine.'

"But Solomon spoke up and declared:

"'No, no, ladies; do not quarrel. Give me my sword and I will make twins of him, so that each of you will be supplied.'"—New York Tribune.

PRESSURE OF LIGHT.

Reason Why the Tail of Comet Points Away From Sun.

Because the tail increases in splendor as the sun is approached, and because it invariably points away from the sun, no matter where the comet may be in its orbit, it follows that some solar force, more powerful than gravitation, must drive matter from the head to form the tail. It is only recently that a satisfactory explanation has been found for this anomaly. An undreamed of force has been discovered to which we may attribute some of the vagaries of a comet's tail. That force is nothing less than the pressure of light.

It is rather startling to learn at this late day that the sunbeams which play upon green grass and blue water are actually pressing the earth. But that pressure has been so accurately measured that we know now that the earth sustains a light load of no more than 150,000 tons. Why is it that we do not see objects pushed into space by the solar effulgence? Simply because light pressure acts not so much on masses as on surfaces. The greater the mass and the greater the surface the more pronounced will be the effect of light presure.

Divide a ball of lead weighing a pound into one thousand little balls. The total weight remains the same, but the surface has been increased. Divide each little ball again into a thousand smaller balls. The result, being one million balls still weighs a pound, but the surface has been enormously augmented. Carry this subdivision so far that leaden particles are obtained measuring one two-thousandth of an inch in diameter. Each one of these particles, if projected into interstellar space, will remain stationary because its weight (gravitation) will exactly counterbalance the light pressure of the sun. If the division be carried beyond that critical diameter, light pressure will wrench each particle from the grasp of space.—Circle Magazine.

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food That Helped Her.

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food, I determined to secure some," said a woman of Salisbury, Mo. "At that time there was none kept in our town, but my husband ordered some from a Chicago traveler.

"I had been greatly afflicted with sudden attacks of cramps, nausea and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. As soon as I began to use the new food the attacks disappeared and have never returned.

"My old attacks of sick headache were a little slower to yield, but by continuing the food, that trouble also disappeared entirely. I am now perfectly well, can eat anything and everything I wish, without paying the penalty that I used to. We would not keep house without Grape-Nuts.

"My husband was so delighted with the benefits I received that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a large trade on the food. He tells them by the case to many of the leading physicians of the city recommend Grape-Nuts very highly. There is some satisfaction in finding a really scientifically prepared food."

The success of the experiments with the Lacoste brake on the battleship Indiana may mean another development at sea as important as that which followed Westinghouse's invention on land, comments the Boston Transcript. If steamships can be brought to a dead stop within their own length, or even within a not much greater distance, by "putting on the brake," the risks of accident on the sea will be correspondingly reduced.

No Peace for Him.

The usual after-dinner tiff had taken place, and Smithers had cooled down. After all, peace was a good thing and well worth the having, and a little more or less humble pie did not much matter. He determined to try woman's weak point—dress—and remarked in a pleasant voice:

"I see dresses are to be worn longer than usual this season."

But the hard lines at the corners of her mouth were still there.

"Well," she observed bitterly, "if they are to be worn longer than I am compelled to wear mine they will have to be made of sheet iron, that's all!"

And then they started all over again.—Modern Society.

It was the poet Cowper who sang of domestic happiness as the only bliss that has survived the fall. One of the burning and unsolved questions of today is, Will it survive the twentieth century? Will it survive rapid transit and bridge and woman's rights, the modern novel and modern drama, automobiles, flying machines and intelligence offices? Dawn of Civilization.

In the light of the latest facts it appears that Babylonia was in a comparatively high state of civilization about 6,000 years before the Christian era. At about that time from the East came Babylonian settlers, who found their way toward the West and, finally halting to the northwest of the Red Sea, colonized the region on either side of the Nile. When these colonists arrived from Babylonia they were not wild barbarians, but, as we know from the most learned Egyptologists, possessed great ability in certain arts—in a word, were civilized. Thus Egypt, long supposed to be the Mother of Civilization, must henceforth give way to the land of the Euphrates.—New York Tribune.

Honey No Longer Here.

A young Californian often visited a leading Santa Barbara hotel because of its excellent honey.

When the young man got married the wedding trip included Santa Barbara, so that the bride might taste this superb honey.

But the first morning at the Santa Barbara hotel there was no honey on the breakfast table. The bridegroom frowned. He called the old familiar waiter over to him.

"Where's my honey?" he demanded.

The waiter hesitated, looked awkwardly at the bride, then bent toward the young man's ear and in a stage whisper stammered:

"Er—Mamie don't work here no more, sir."—Ladies' Home Journal.

SONGS TO AWAKE CHINA.

Used by the Progressive Element to Spread Modern Ideas.

The progressive element in China has seized upon the folk song as a vehicle for spreading modern ideas, says Albert Maybon in L'Opinion of Paris.

The old Chinese notion of patriotism mainly resolved itself into a system of emperor worship, but the new generation is becoming imbued with more democratic ideas, veneration for the motherland taking the place of the cult of the son of heaven. The writer gives extracts from new popular song books, which he says are being distributed in native schools throughout the length and breadth of the empire from Nanking to Mukden.

Some of the folk songs are modernized adaptations from ancient epics, others deal with political and other questions of the day. Most noticeable is the fact that through all of them runs the martial spirit. To be respected China must be a nation in arms is the keynote of the modern Chinese educator.

George Washington is the favorite example of lofty and pure patriotism. Lord Byron also comes in for praise, and Greece's struggle for liberty against Turkey furnishes a topic. Lessons drawn from Russia's defeat by Japan are paramount in all these patriotic song books.

Another favorite song has for its theme the fate of dead nations, crushed under the conqueror's heel, such as Poland. Even the "Marseillaise" has been translated.

Exhortations to loyalty toward the reigning dynasty are curiously scarce. One collection of songs entitled "The New China," which is published in Shanghai, recounts the glorious deeds of Chinese warriors and legislators in past ages, and blames the present regime for defeats at home and unavenged humiliations abroad. The Manchus, it says, are doomed to decadence.

Male Fashions of 1850.

Male fashions of sixty years ago had other discomforts besides long hair. Trousers were tight and buttoned under the foot with broad straps. Every man who aspired to be well dressed wore his coat so high in the collar that the back of the hat rested on it. This fashion was so prevalent that, according to Sir Algernon West, "every hat had a crescent of cloth on the back of the brim to prevent the rubbing of the beaver or imitation beaver, of which the hat was made, for silk hats were not then invented." And from the same authority we learn that "opera hats were unknown, and in the evening a folding chapeau bras was always carried under the arm. Nobody but an apothecary or a solicitor would have dreamed of leaving his hat in the hall of the house where he was calling or dining."—London Chronicle.

Washington

Confronted by the probability that Congress will adjourn without taking any steps to increase the commissioned personnel of the army, the Secretary of War has ordered that wherever possible officers be restored to their line duties, including those now detailed to staff duty, work on the Panama Canal, at educational institutions, etc. This will not greatly affect the work on the Panama Canal, for the reason that most of the officers on duty in the canal zone are there by express provision of law, but it will mean that many of the officers now at military schools, etc., will be returned to their regiments and their places filled with retired officers found competent for the work. The order will probably affect officers on duty with the quartermaster-general, the commissary-general, in the medical corps, etc. Secretary Dickinson has also urged Congress immediately to pass the bill designed to place the general staff on the same plane as other staff bureaus, so that vacancies made by the assignment of officers to the general staff may be filled by promotion until the vacancy at the foot of the line is filled by the commissioning of a second lieutenant. The Secretary frankly expresses his regret that it should be necessary to replace officers at the military schools with retired officers, but he believes this step is imperative.

A development which promises to make greatly for the popularity of the Taft administration is the installation of Charles D. Norton as secretary to the President. It is no exaggeration to say that the whole atmosphere of the White House changed with the appearance of Mr. Norton on the scene. Those who had appointments with the President found that they were received on time. Newspaper correspondents had no difficulty in obtaining satisfactory information regarding the news of the White House, and following the conference with the railroad presidents, a larger number saw the President than at any previous time since his inauguration. Everything moved with a snap and an order which augur well for the future, and predictions of the success of the new secretary were heard on all sides. It is betraying no confidence to say that one of the weak spots of this administration has been the conveying of news to the press—not, of course, those matters which should not be made public, but those which should. Mr. Norton begins his work with a realization of the importance of this phase of his numerous duties, and there is reason to believe that he will be successful in the performance of this delicate and highly important task.

The Committee on Claims reported to the Senate a bill granting $773,647.25 to the Southern Pacific Railroad for the work it did to check the Salton Sink and save the Imperial Valley from permanent inundation. The amount spent for this work by the Southern Pacific, which was carried in the bill introduced by Senator Flint, was $1,663,136.40, and the payment was strongly recommended by President Roosevelt in a special message to Congress on January 12, 1907. Of course, the railroad cannot compel the United States to pay more than it chooses for this work, which was done without any contract, and Congress appears to think it will be doing its full duty by passing the bill reported, although it carries considerably less than half the amount spent to remedy the break in the Colorado River and save the valley, which is occupied by between 6000 and 10,000 settlers.

A prominent New Yorker recently in Washington is authority for the statement that no man has grown so rapidly in public life as George W. Wickersham, Attorney-General in President Taft's Cabinet. This authority asserted that Wall Street was confident when Mr. Wickersham was chosen for this responsible post that it would find in him a quick and ready sympathizer, but that now that it has come to a realization of the fact that Mr. Wickersham is acting with a full appreciation of the fact that he has the entire American people for his clients and is showing remarkable ability in the conduct of the business of the nation, Wall Street's admiration and confidence have turned to hatred, and there is nothing too bitter for it to say of Mr. Wickersham. To this keen disappointment are attributed some of the recent attacks on the Attorney-General, but in proportion as a certain class of business men are turning against the Attorney-General the great mass of the people are turning to him, and since he initiated the injunction proceedings which brought the Western railroads to the White House as suppliants for peace at any price, and the ultimate effect of which was to protect the people from a general advance in freight rates, the conviction of the West that Mr. Taft's Attorney-General is a really great man can hardly be shaken.

GENERAL NEWS.

An Unfortunate Runaway.

Last Saturday afternoon, Mr. Robert Marcus and a party of friends drove up to Waddy to witness a game of base ball. Later on in the evening they started on nthe return trip homeward and when near Cane Creek church some part of the harness broke, frightening the team of horses which immediately made a wild dash down the road. Mr. Marcus did his best to keep control of the team and to hold them in the road but so badly were they frightened that they soon became unmanageable. After running for some distance, the buggy struck a stump on the side of the road and overturned, throwing the occupants out and bruising them up considerably. In some way Mr. Bob Marcus was entangled in the lines and the horses in their frantic speed dragged him some distance before he could extricate himself.

Upon examination it was found that Mr. Marcus, besides sustaining a considerable number of bruises had both his bones broken. This will, of course, necessitate his remaining in bed for some days and will require special dental and surgical work to enable him to perform his regular duties.

The affair is especially unfortunate, not only because of the serious accident to Mr. Marcus, but it will greatly interfere with his business which he had just established and in which he was meeting with great success.

Mr. Marcus was already more or less disabled by reason of an unfortunate railroad accident which befell him some years ago.

The other occupants of the carriage, Messrs. G. C. Giles, Homer Giles and Obey Mahan were more or less bruised but none sustained serious injuries.

The buggy was a complete wreck.

A New Warehouse.

Mr. W. I. Mullins is making extensive preparations for the erection of a mammoth warehouse for his own use in the mercantile business.

So extensive has his business grown that he feels the need of more room for the immense stock which he carries, therefore he is going to erect a store-room that will take care of his goods and at the same time be in close proximity to his sales rooms.

The warehouse will be built just back of the present store house and will have all modern conveniences so that teams can drive into the storing room and load or unload as the case may be. It will be seventy by seventy two feet and will contain two departments; one for storing merchandise such as grains, hay, fertilizers and the like and the other department will be a store room for buggies, wagons, harness and farm machinery. When completed it will be one of the most modern and convenient places in Clanton. It will be built almost entirely of brick, thus rendering it as nearly fire-proof as possible.

Quarterly Conference.

Last Saturday Presiding Elder Rev. J. B. Cumming held the business meeting of the Clanton Circuit quarterly conference and on Sunday conducted the religious services at the Methodist church.

The conference on Saturday was not well attended, but three churches being represented in the meeting. Collections were reported somewhat backward so far as the Pastor's and Presiding Elder's salaries were concerned but all expressed the opinion that each of the churches would come out with the full assessment before the conclusion of the conference year. The church collections, ordered by the annual conference, were reported by the pastor to be in fairly good shape and the outlook for full collections bright.

The Sunday morning services were especially interesting. The Elder preached a magnificent sermon on temptation at the conclusion of which the administration of the Lord's supper was had and quite a number availed themselves of this opportunity to reconcentrate themselves to the service of the Master.

At the night service Mr. Cumming preached on the "Church's Need of Money." A rather strange or out of the ordinary topic for a sermon, some will say, and yet it was a most opportune and appropriate topic. Many considered that at its conclusion the collection did not attempt a collection for the church but the matter of raising money at this time was not mentioned. He went into detail, somewhat, showing that the church is the part of the world and is for the salvation of the world; that commerce is rapidly advancing and every art and science and trade known to man is progressing at a rapid rate and that they require more money in this twentieth century than they did in the days gone by and that if the church is to keep pace with the world in this onward march—the only way it can save the world being to keep up with the world in its progress—it must have more funds; more men and more talent. He stressed the point that Christ wanted men to make money for the advancing of his kingdom as well as preachers for the administration of his ordinances and the spread of his gospel of salvation.

All in all it was an excellent exposition of the subject in hand and no doubt will bring forth much good fruit.

Democrats Are Active.

Out in the western portion of Chilton the democrats are especially active. This is particularly true of the younger ones of the party. They realize that upon their shoulders must devolve much of the work that is to be done during the present campaign and they do not propose to dally the Summer away and then have a super-abundance of work to be done in the Fall. That is where these young men are extremely wise. They have more time to devote to the political affairs of their section now than they will when the harvesting season and the business season begins and therefore they are taking time by the forelock and organizing actively for the work.

Last Saturday night Mr. J. D. Sims, the old war steed of that section, and others went down to Sardis and organized an enthusiastic democratic club which has gone into the work with a determination to win. An account of this superb organization appears elsewhere in The Press and we would like for all good democrats to read it carefully and profit thereby. The work and the vim of these young men will accomplish much for the party as well as for themselves. Older democrats, those who have had longer service, and more honors, would do well to take example from these and get actively into the work. There is enough for all of us to do even if we kept constantly at it and it is more than certain that battles cannot be won by sitting down with arms stacked and swords sheathed.

The work of the democracy of West Chilton is to be highly commended. It gives the chairman and secretary of the committee much encouragement to learn that these young men propose to have bi-weekly meetings and to discuss topics of interest to Chilton county's welfare.

The editor of this paper would be delighted to strike hands with the young men of that portion of the county and to bid them God speed in the work which they have so enthusiastically undertaken.

Big Picnic.

Waxahatchie Tribe of Red Men are making arrangements for a big picnic celebration to be held by that lodge some time in the near future.

Correspondence is now in progress between th Secretary of the lodge and Montgomery parties looking toward the securing of Jackson's Lake for the occasion and if they are successful in securing it the date will be definitely fixed at the next meeting of the lodge.

If, however, they cannot secure the Lake some other place equally as attractive will be selected.

A Pleasant Outing.

Quite a party of Clanton people went down to Mountain Creek Tuesday morning to enjoy the day at the Soldier's Home.

They took baskets along and will have a wood's dinner after the fashion of the picnic crowds. In the party were: Mrs. P. I. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch, Mrs. Guy Upchurch, and son Guy, Mrs. West, Miss Hurley, Miss Nell Mullins, Mrs. Renfroe Mullins, Misses Lucile and Evelyn Upchurch, Messrs. Grady Reynolds, Sam Latham, Dr. Amzi Gowan, and little Misses Frances Hopkins and Mary Upchurch.

A New Meat Market.

Since Mr. Popwell has closed out his meat business Mr. Harmon Headley has taken charge and is now having the place thoroughly renovated and repaired preparatory to handling fresh western meats exclusively. Mr. Headley will install a small cold storage plant in connection with his meat business and will be prepared to keep all perishable articles for an indefinite length of time.

The Republican Pow-Wow at Thorsby. Loaves and Fishes to Some, a Sop To Others. Lots of Loaves and Right Smart of Fishes on One Side. Just a Wee Bite for Others.

The republican county convention convened at Thorsby Monday morning and aside from electing delegates to the state and district convention, did nothing of special moment in so far as county affairs were concerned. The State delegation consists of the following:

L. H. Reynolds, A. C. Smith, J. O. Middleton, T. J. Dorminy, W. C. Edder, Z. J. Jones, W. Y. Nix, R. L. Clark, G. C. Mickleson and M. C. Williams.

The district delegation elected was: L. H. Reynolds, W. C. Edler, J. M. Grant, J. T. Rockett, J. W. Sorrell, W. H. Gillespie, G. C. Mickleson, W. T. Bean, J. O. Middleton and A. C. Smith.

Resolutions were introduced looking to the endorsement of P. D. Barker, Post Master at Mobile, who is the Alabama member of the Republican National Executive Committee, the highest authority of the party in the entire government, but they were turned down by the convention.

Mr. Barker not only bears the distinction of being the National Executive Committeeman but he is one of the two referees of President Taft in Alabama political matters and has been a consistent and life long republican. However, he failed of an endorsement by the Chilton county convention for some reason while Jos. O. Thompson, the State Chairman, received the hearty and enthusiastic endorsement of the Thorsby gathering.

Another resolution was introduced calling upon the Tax Assessor to surrender his office; not because of any mal-practices in office, not because he had failed in any duty to the people, not because he is not a gentleman, but because he did not please the convention.

Some resolutions about subsidies and entanglements were also introduced by the committee on resolutions and passed by the convention.

We learn that the convention did its work quickly, having gone to Thorsby with the "quilting pieces" all cut and sewed together, all they had to do at the convention was to put the lining on and call it a completed job.

The committee of resolutions was: W. C. Edler, W. H. Conway, T. J. Dorminy, Walter Gilespie, Z. J. Jones.

Hon. J. O. Middleton was both temporary and permanent chairman of the convention.

The ruling spirits of the convenvention so we learn were W. C. Edler, the chairman, and W. H. Conway.

The body of J. W. Satterwhite, an old and highly respected citizen of Cooper, was brought to Clanton on Tuesday morning, he having died at his family residence the night previous. Accompanying the body were a number of Masons, of which order he was an honored member. The interment took place Tuesday afternoon in Clanton cemetery, the burial services being conducted by the Masons of Cooper, assisted by the local lodge. Mr. Satterwhite was one of the oldest residents of the county, being in his eighty-eighth year at the time of his death. He was a member of Poplar Springs Baptist church. Peace to the ashes of this honored citizen.

Mr. E. Hopkins is busily engaged in putting down a concrete curbing in front of the Kicker building on Main street. Now, if the other property owners will but continue the work begun by Mr. Kicker.

Sheriff Catts and Deputy Smitherman returned Monday from a trip of several days to Selma and neighboring territory on a search for Wade Raiford, the highwayman, who attacked the sheriff several weeks ago. The searching party were close upon the track of the noted outlaw, but he managed to keep just a few miles in advance for some days. They returned confident, however, that within a very short time the man will be taken into custody.

Clanton is preparing to again take the school census. The board of education has employed Mr. N. A. Kicker to supervise the matter, which is an assurance that it will be well done.

Mr. Kicker will begin the work immediately.

The Repubs Have a District Meeting.

The Republican Convention of the Fourth Congressional District met at Calera on last Tuesday and elected a new committee and transacted other business connected with the "saving of the country," among which was the selection of a new district chairman. Things seemed to be a little more harmonious than at the Thorsby convention. One side did not go in and gobble up everything in sight leaving the other side to pick the bones and then come out with a broad smile and a twinkling eye crying enthusiastically, "ain't we brethren though, and don't we treat each other sweet and kind?"

No candidate for congress to oppose Hon. Fred S. Blackmon was put up; that hopeless duty was left to be performed at a later date.

With several Republican conventions in the state endorsing one of the powers that be and refusing to endorse the other—each endorsing that side or that particular magnate from whom they expect hand-outs of pie, fishes and loaves, the Republicans seem to be in a sad plight, indeed.

After all, it merely goes to show that they are after nothing but office, for if one of the referees refuse to give them, or their particular favorite just what they want, they retaliate by refusing to "endorse" him in convention. But when the other "mogul" pretends to favor their particular side, they throw half a dozen hand-springs, beat the air as if they had a conniption fit and "endorse" him with so many resolutions of commendation that they almost become fulsome in their praises of a mere mortal.

The cry seems to be pie, pie, who will give us pie?
Endorsements galore for a hunk of pie!
No pie, no endorsement. Heap of pie, heap of endorsement.

Nor do they care a dried fig whether it hurts or helps their party so long as they get pie. One faction may feast while the other starves. It matters not to the victorious ones what becomes of the party so long as their insatiate appetite is appeased. Pie, Pie, Fishes and Loaves!

A QUIET MARRIAGE.
Cox-Kemp.

A quiet marriage, and one of much interest to the many friends of the contracting parties, was that of Mrs. Bama Kemp and Mr. C. W. Cox, which took place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the residence of Rev. F. M. Woods.

Mrs. Kemp is the daughter of Mr. Pink Moore, an old and highly respected citizen of the county.

The fortunate Mr. Cox is a progressive citizen of Clanton, now engaged in the nursery business with his brother, and has a host of friends, who admire him for his sterling manhood and his general disposition.

Both of the high contracting parties have many close friends here who will be delighted to know that they have joined their lives together and who wish for them a life of happiness and prosperity.

Only intimate friends of the couple were present at the marriage ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Cox will be at home to their friends for a short time at the Dennis residence in West Clanton.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION. ATTENTION, SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS.

The Executive committee met in Clanton Tuesday and arranged program, and place of meeting for the County Sunday school Convention, which is to be held at Verbena, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 5-6. Program will be published next week, if all necessary arrangements can be made. As the time is short, and the work to be done is great, let us all get a hustle on ourselves and make this one of the very best conventions we have ever held. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY.

Let me urge all Sunday-school Superintendents to be sure and elect two delegates, (as that is the number each school is entitled to) at once, please don't delay this matter, for procrastination is the thief of time and has been the cause of many sad defeats.

From now until the convention is over, let us be earnestly engaged in prayer to our Father, that he may give us wisdom to do the things that need to be done, and then we shall be blessed in the doing of them. Let each one be willing to do his or her part in this work for the Master, and then go forward in this great work with the full assurance that God will shower his blessings down on us in our convention work.

Arise, let us go hence. WE CAN DO IT IF WE TRY.

Fraternally,
A. K. HORN,
tf County President.

JURY MADE UP OF WOMEN.

Not Enough Men Available Since Fire Devastated Colorado Town.

Hahn's Peak, Col.—One of the first woman juries in a court of record in the United States was assembled in the County Court here by Judge Morning to pass on the sanity of Elizabeth Hutchinson. Hahn's Peak was almost wiped out by a recent fire, and the court could not locate enough eligible men in the town to make up the necessary jury of six.

The women were duly sworn, heard the evidence, and rendered their Hutchinson insane.

PEOPLE WHO WORK WILL RULE IN AUSTRALIA

Only One Lawyer Has a Place In Cabinet

LABOR HAS THE CALL

Election by Which New Regime Came Into Power Was a Landslide—One of Causes Was State Playing Into Hands of Coal Trust During Strike.

Melbourne, Australia.—The mine boy who could keep sweet tempered, the miner would could be an "agitator" without fuming and ranting, the labor leader who could smile as he worked—this is Andrew Fisher, child slave in the coal pits of Aryshire, Scotland, and now prime minister of Australia.

Never before in the history of the world has a great nation of people been asbolutely governed by the laboring men. But this is the condition in Australia in the year 1910. Labor, politically organized, completely controls the government.

The cabinet is not filled with lawyers, much less corporation lawyers. There's just one member of the bar in the ministry, W. M. Hughes, attorney-general, but he is a lawyer for working people and not for capitalsists. Andrew Fisher, the prime minister, is a mine worker. E. J. Bachelor, minister of foreign affairs, is a metal worker. Josiah Thomas, postmaster-general is a miner. Senator Pearce, minister for defense, is a carpenter. F. C. Tudor, a hatmaker, is minister of trade and customs. King O'Malley, a newspaper reporter, is minister of home affairs. Senator McGregor, vice chairman of the national council, is a day laborer.

Among the causes of the political revolution are the action of the state government in New South Wales in playing into the hands of the coal trust during the great strike, when it enacted a law outlawing strikes and boycotts; the reckless extravagance of the Deakin administration, and its refusal to enact progressive legislation which had been promised to the working people; sham tariff fights to distract the attention of the workers from their grievances; the growth of trusts and tax dodging by the rich.

The people smashed "states' rights" at the same time, in a referendum, by voting to nationalize state debts and centralizing the public financial power in the national government. This is the entering wedge to make the federal power dominant and the states subordinate.

There is no one-man rule in the new Australian scheme of things. In the United States the president appoints the cabinet and the speaker (or a packed committee) selects congressional committees. Here cabinet officers and the speakers of houses and committeemen are selected by ballot.

The curse of Australia has been the ownership of great tracts of land by individual owners. Many of the greatest holdings are in the hands of men who live in England and have never seen their land.

The single tax has been invoked to cure this evil. Land is taxed at its real value and idle land taxed just as land in use is. Improvements are not taxed. The result will be to break up the great estates into small farms and to free opportunity for labor and industry to united with nature's bounty in supplying food, clothes and luxury for mankind.

The new labor government comes into power finding a four and a half million dollar deficit, but the land tax is expected to make short work of that.

Australia has its trusts, too. The coal trust is the most cordially hated by the people, and the labor government will go after it at once. Attorney-General Hughes will prosecute the trust under the anti-trust law, which was a joke under the Deakin administration. But the prosecution is only a preface to the taking over of the coal mines by the government. The labor administration promises to take over and run all monopolies.

Other bills being drafted provide for a state bank, old age pensions, national insurance, civil equality of men and women, national initiative and referendum, exclusion of Chinese and Japanese coolie labor, amendment to arbitration law and limitation of bond issues.

The labor party is moderately for protection—what it terms "new" protection. In industries in which trade union wage scales and hours of labor are recognized and labor receives real protection, a moderate revenue tariff will be permitted. Where trusts and monopolies exist tariff duties will be abolished.

Australia is as large as the United States, exclusive of Alaska and the island possessions, and its government is similar to our in that it consists of federal states.

NATION'S LAWMAKERS CLOSE THEIR LABORS

Work Session in Enactment of Legisla- Probably Never Exceeded.

REVIEW OF THE SESSION.

Washington, D. C.—Notwithstanding the fact that action on many important measures was delayed by conflicts between "insurgents" and "regular" Republican factions in both brasches, and that the Democratic minority was an active force, congress concluded its long session with a record for enacting legislation that seldom, if ever, has been equaled.

In the matter of "reform" movements for which President Taft stood sponser there were many instances of success. Chief in the list of legislation for which the administration contended were the following:

Striking revision of the railroad laws, including the creation of a commerce court.

Admitting Arizona and New Mexico as separate States.

Authorizing the establishment of postal savings banks.

Giving to the president unlimited authority to withdraw public lands for conservation purposes.

Providing for publicity of campaign contributions.

Authorizing the issue of $20,000,000 in certificates of indebtedness to complete reclamation projects.

Creating a bureau of mines.

Extending the activities of the tariff board and appropriating $250,000 for its use.

Looking to the suppression of traffic in "white slaves."

Authorizing the entry of the surface of coal lands.

Creating a commission to consider economics in the administration of the Federal Government.

Providing a new tariff system for the Philippine Islands.

Legislation which ultimately is expected to give practical prohibtion to the Hawaiian Islands.

Few Measures Fail.

Measures which had administration sympathy but failed of passage were: Ship subsidy, anti-injunction, for new forms of government in Alaska and of the Panama Canal zone, to create a bureau of health, to provide increased rates of postage for second-class mail matter, to create the Appalachian forest reserve and increase the engineer corps of the Army.

The Speaker was removed from the Committee on Rules, which he had previously been credited with dominating, and a new rule was adopted for the purpose of effectually preventing pigeon-holing of bills by committees when they were approved by a majority of the house, regardless of party affiliation.

The enormous proportions of the demands for legislation which are pressed upon Congress is shown by the fact that since the beginning of the present Congress over 27,000 bills have been introduced in the House and over 9,000 in the Senate, in addition to hundreds of resolutions on various subjects. This record, so far as the number of bills is concerned, is without a parallel.

WED DOOMED MEN

Married After Death Sentence Is Pronounced.

Mexico City—Two brides were made widows a few hours after the wedding ceremonies were performed in the penitentiary at Valladolid, Yucatan, when their husbands faced a firing squad selected to execute them in accordance with sentences passed after their trial by the war department for sedition and murder, the accusation growing out of their participation in the recent rioting.

Immediately after the death sentences were pronounced on the three men charged with murder, two of them asked permission to marry before they were executed. Their requests were granted, and the young women went to the prison for the marriage ceremonies knowing that within a few hours they would be widows.

NATION'S EXPORTS SOARING

Manufacturers of United States Make New High Record.

Washington — Exports of manufacturers in May were larger than in any earlier month in the history of the export trade of the United States, the total value of exports for the month aggregating $71,000,000.

Exports of manufacturers for 11 months ending with May aggregated $699,000,000, indicating that June, the 12 month of the year, will bring the record for the fiscal year 1910 above that of any preceding year. Should June exports equal those of May, the total manufacturers exports for the year would be $770,000,000.

No "Dunning" by Mail.

Washington—Business men, especially those who are engaged in making loans, which they attempt to collect through the mails, should be careful about placing "dunning" notices on the face of their letters concerning bills which they are impatient to collect, because the postoffice department has just ruled that such matter is unmailable under the provisions of the postal laws and regulations.

TO SWELL POPULATION

French Parliament Makes Laws Against Old Bachelors.

Paris—A series of measures designed to stimulate the birth rate in France was introduced in parliament.

They include the imposition of additional military service upon bachelors over 29 years old, making obligatory the marriage of state employes who have reached the age of 25 years with supplementary salaries and pension allowances for those with more than three children.

ATTEMPTED TO BRIBE SENATOR

Mr. Gore of Oklahoma, Startles His Colleagues by Announcement.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Gore of Oklahoma, disclosed in the Senate what he interpreted as an effort to bribe him in connection with legislation affecting the fortune in attorney's fees claimed by J. F. McMurray of Oklahoma, for services rendered to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations in land and town site cases.

The charge created a sensation in the Senate, which later extended to the House. The latter body in consequence sent back to conference the general deficiency bill, which carried an item relating to contracts between the Indians and their attorneys.

As the result of the denouncement Senator Gore finally involved a member of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, a member of the House Committee on Indian Affairs, two former Senators, one from Nebraska and the other from Kansas, but whose names were not made public in debate.

In response to a suggestion by Senator Bailey that he should name the Senate member of the Indian committee Senator Gore demurred, but declared he would welcome an investigation of the charges so that the whole matter might be brought out before a body which would be authorized to deal with his allegations.

TWO KILLED BY BANDITS

One Assailant Is Dead, Another in Hospital and the Third Under Arrest.

Lynn, Mass.—Three bandits, armed with automatic magazine revolvers, shot and instantly killed Thomas A. Landregan, a shoe manufacturer, fatally wounded Police Officer James H. Carroll and ran away with a bag containing $5,000 which the manufacturer and policeman were taking from a bank to the shoe factory of Welch & Landregan for the weekly payroll. Policeman Carroll died shortly afternward.

The robbery was committed on a busy thoroughfare in the heart of the shoe manufacturing district.

An hour after one of the bandits was dead from a self-inflicted wound, a second was in the hospital with five bullet wounds in his body, while the third was under arrest. All but $7 of the money that was stolen by the hobbers was recovered. The bandits were Russian Poles, their ages ranging from 20 to 25 years.

HUNTERS OFF TO FAR NORTH

May Seek Records of Dr. Cook and May Not.

Boston—Carrying a bountiful supply of trinkets and gum drops for the igloo dwellers of the frozen north, the steamship Beothic, chartered by Harry Whitney of New Haven, Conn., and Paul J. Rainey of Cleveland, for a hunting expedition in the Arctic, sailed from South Boston.

The Beothic is under the command of Capt. Robert Bartlett, who made the trip with Peary. Others on the steamer were Dr. M. J. Johnson of Lexington, Ky., and Hugh M. Inman of New York.

Speculation as to whether Mr. Whitney would attempt to recover the records alleged to have been left by Dr. Frederick A. Cook at Etah remained unsatisfied by the last word of Capt. Bartlett, who said, with a smile:

"We probably will not bother to take the time to hunt up Cook's records."

BOAT BURNS; THREE DEAD

Fifteen Hundred Passengers Reach Island in the Mississippi River.

La Crosse, Wis.—Only three persons out of 1,500 lost their lives on account of the burning in the Mississippi river of the excursion steamer J. S., according to officers of the Acme Packet Company, owner of the vessel, after a careful search and rechecking of passengers.

While five other persons were severely hurt in the panic and 50 others were cut and bruised in escaping from the boat before it burned to the water, those who went through the experience of fire and water declare that the small number of casualties seems marvelous to them.

Prompt work by the crew and cool-headed men among the passengers in controlling the frantic passengers after the first alarm of fire was sounded was all that prevented hundreds of persons from jumping into the river in midstream.

Federal Parole Bill Passed.

Washington—The Federal parole bill which has just been settled in conference was agreed to by the House. It would permit parole of any prisoner in a United States penitentiary or prison who had served a third of his term and who has a good record. The superintendent of prisons of the Department of Justice and the warden and physician of each prison would constitute the board of control for such institution.

Sweden's Sobriety Vote.

Stockholm—The result of the plebiscite organized by the Swedish temperance societies on the question of total and permament prohibition in Sweden is overwhelmingly in favor of prohibition. Every man and woman was entitled to vote and the figures were: for prohibition, 1,845,249, or 54 per cent of the population, against 16,471.

POPULATION OF OUR CAPITAL

Washington Has 331,069 Citizens, According to Census Statement.

Washington—The population of the city of Washington is 331,069.

This statement by the census bureau is the first official announcement of the population total as the result of the 1910 census.

In 1900 the population of Washington was 278,718.

HIGH COST OF LIVING SUBJECT OF REPORT

Republicans and Democrats Fail of Agree as to Cause of Advances.

MAJORITY SUBMITS FINDINGS

Washington—Republicans and Democrats do not agree as to the causes for the great increase in the cost of living between 1900 and 1910.

The majority report of the special senate committee, which has investigated these questions was submitted to the senate by Senator Lodge, chairman of the committee. A meeting was held prior to the presentation of the report and the minority members protested against the character of the findings. After a long argument the minority was authorized to employ an expert to go over the report of the majority and prepare the minority views for submission to the senate.

The report made by Senator Lodge was an exhaustive one, compiled from testimony given by 41 witnesses, reports received from consuls and from foreign governments. It contains a large number of tables giving the range of prices over the last decade. The majority charges that its work was restricted by reason of the refusal of the senate to appropriate the $65,000 asked for by the committee which would have been used to employ agents in the field.

Some of the Causes.

The majority of the committee found thot of the many causes contributing to the advance in prices, the following were most marked:

Increased cost of production of farm products, by reason of higher land values and higher wages; increased demand for farm products and food; shifting of population from food producing to food consuming occupations and localities; immigration to food consuming localities; reduced fertility of land resulting in lower average production or in increased expenditures for fertilization; increased banking facilities in agricultural localities, which enabled farmers to hold their crops and market them to the best advantage.

It was found that this not only steadied prices but had a tendency to increase them.

Reduced supply convenient to transportation facilities of such commodities as timber.

Cold storage plants which result in preventing extreme fluctuations of prices of certain commodities with the seasons, gut by enabling the wholesalers to buy and sell at the best possible advantage, tend to advance prices; increased cost of distribution; industrial combination; organizations of producers or of dealers; advertising; increased money supply, overcapitalization; higher standard of living.

Analysis of Prices.

The foregoing findings were gathered by measuring the prices of 257 commodities, included in the price index number of the bureau of labor. These commodities were grouped and the advances noted for the different groups during the period from 1900 to 1909 inclusive. The general wholesale price level in the United States advanced during that period 14.5. The groups show advances as follows:

Farm products, 99.8; food, etc., 19.7; lumber and building materials, 19.6; miscellaneous commodities, 14.7; cloths and clothing, 12; fuel and lighting, 6.9; house furnishing goods, 5.3; metals and implements, 3.6. A decline was shown for drugs and chemicals amounting to 2.9 per cent.

Some Comparisons.

Concerning retail prices the report shows that in the United States in the spring of 1910 they were at the highest point reached for many years. As compared with the spring of 1900 prices for bacon were more than 70 per cent higher, ham was 33 per cent higher; flour was about 50 per cent higher; butter about 45 per cent higher; sugar about 12 per cent higher, and eggs 100 per cent higher.

Some few articles, such as coffee and tea, were about the same price as in 1900, but practically no articles of food were lower than in 1900.

Furniture was about the same price as in 1900. Earthenware was slightly lower. Shoes and clothing were considerably higher.

It was found that labor unions had not been apparently a serious factor in contributing toward advancing prices.

Advanced cost is laid to no small extent to increased expense for distributing food by wholesale and retail.

The report says it is clear that the consumers must pay the cost of advertising and the cost of fancy packages. Trading stamps and vouchers, entitling the holders to premiums, are paid for by increased prices. It was shown also that increased freight rates had a great deal to do with increased prices.

Bomb Fatal to Soldier.

Warsaw, Russian Poland—A bomb was exploded with one fatality in a squad of gendarmes at the Gordzisk on the Vienna railroad, 30 miles from here. The bombthrower was arrested.

Stolen Jewels Found.

Washington—In an old dust-covered lard pail, hanging from a rafter in the hay loft of a livery stable, $11,000 worth of diamonds and other jewelry were discovered by detectives. For nearly four months, while the police of every city in the country have been trying to trace them, the jewels had lung undisturbed, where they had been hidden by Scott Winbish, a negro, who had stolen them. When confronted with new evidence Winbish confessed.

Dayton, O.—Gov. Judson Harmon accepted a second gubernatorial nomination, which was tendered to him by acclamation by the delegates to the Democratic state convention.

The convention also indorsed Gov. Harmon for the Democratic nomination for President.

Atlee Pomerene of Canton, permanent chairman of the convention, was unanimously nominated for lieutenant governor on the second ballot.

The following is the full ticket named:

Atlee Pomerene, of Canton, for lieutenant governor.

Maurice H. Donahue, of New Lexington, for judge of the supreme court.

James Johnson, of Springfield, for judge of supreme court.

D. S. Creamer, of St. Clairsville, for treasurer of State.

Frank M. Kean, of Cleveland, for clerk of the supreme court.

Frank W. Miller, of Dayton, for State school commissioner.

J. A. States, of Allen county, for member of board of public works.

The platform recommends a revision of the "unjust and oppressive tariff" reducing rates so as to lower the prices imposed on consumers, and declares that the need of revenue for the conduct of the Nation's business must be the guilding principle in the construction of a tariff law, rather than the policy of protection.

Specific demand is made for the removal of duties upon the cheaper grades of articles of necessity.

The revision of the tariff law, the platform says, cannot be left to a party of "broken promises," but should be entrusted to the Democratic party.

280-MILE FLIGHT ON A DIRIGIBLE

Zeppelin's Deutschland Makes Journey From Friedrichshafen to Dusseldorf, Germany.

Friedrichshafen, Germany — The world's first regular aerial passenger cruise was made when the new giant Zeppelin dirigible, the Deutschland, commanded by Count Zeppelin, and with 20 passengers abroad, sailed from here to Dusseldorf, 280 miles to the north.

The trip, which was accomplished in 10 hours, was in every way a huge success, and marks the inauguration of a regular passenger service on dirigibles.

BIG FIGHT GOES TO RENO

Rickard Showed His Gameness by Declining Sure Guarantee to Gamble on Gate Receipts.

Reno, Nev.—Reno gets the big fight but the headquarters of the divorce colony did not have a walkover and as a few disappointed citizens of Goldfield remarked:

"Distance and the long ride beat us. We were on hand with the coin."

The men from Tex Rickard's old camp fairly paralyzed the Reno boosters when they agreed to take Rickard to the bank and place the sum of $200,000 to his credit. Tex scratched his head a long time over that offer and Reno begas to have visions of the big shop slipping away southward over the desert.

Then Reno went after the money in the old-time western way with a brass band. The brass band and the house to house canvass of the Reno committee did the business. At noon they informed Tex that the money was pledged and all that he would have to do would be to bring his fighters here and proceed as advertised.

STEAMBOAT MOVED

Virginia, Which Went Aground in Corn Field, Floated.

A remarkable feat was brought to a successful culmination after weeks of hard labor, when the steamer Virginia of the Pittsburg & Cincinnati Packet line, was moved and launched from a corn field in Willow Grove, W. Va., where she was stranded last March. The boat was moved 750 feet to the water and lowered 35 or 40 feet from its high elevation. A canal was dug through a high ridge by the John Eichlay Jr. Company, which did the work, and timbers, blocks, screws and steel beams were used to move the vessel. A dozen teams and 50 or 60 men were used to complete the task. The Virginia is one of the largest boats on the river, being 235 feet long, 42 feet wide, with a capacity of 1,200 tons.

Chief Kohler Acquitted.

Cleveland, O.—Frederick Kohler, the "Golden Rule" chief of police who was suspended from his position by Mayor Baehr upon the filing of charges alleging drunkenness and immorality, was acquitted by the civil service commission. The decision followed a lengthy trial. Kohler will be reinstated at once.

LAKE COMO MYSTERY SOLVED BY CONFESSION

Porter Charlton, Arrested on Reaching New York, Admits Killing of His Wife.

SLAYS WIFE IN FIT OF TEMPER

Captain Scott, Brother of Victim, Runs Hunted Man to Earth on Dock at New York.

New York—The Lake Como murder mystery is solved. Porter Charlton, an American youth of good family, sought by the police of two continents, was arrested in Hoboken, N. J., shortly before noon as he stepped from the North German Lloyd liner Princess Irene. In less than an hour he had confessed without tremor that in a fit of temper he beat his wife into insensibility with a mallet, jammed her body in a trunk, and sunk it in the waters of the Italian lake.

She was Mary Scott Castle of San Francisco, a women 16 years his senior, divorced wife of Neville H. Castle, a San Francisco lawyer, and a beauty.

Charlton is only 21, and a son of Judge Paul Charlton, law officer of the bureau of insular affairs at Washington and a classmate of President Taft's at Yale. The boy married Mrs. Castle in Wilmington, Del., last spring over his parents' protests. Ill-mated and both of erratic temperament, they sailed for Italy for their honeymoon. Murder brought it to an end, and her body was found in the lake by fishermen on June 10.

Hard Up and Shabby.

Fleeing from Italy under an assumed name, almost penniless and shabby of dress, Charlton on landing ran straight into the arms of Capt. Henry Harrison Scott, United States army, the murdered wife's brother. He was taken to police headquarters at Hoboken where, after a pitiable collapse, so spasmodic that it produced extreme nausea, he regained his composure and unflinchingly signed the confession.

He is behind the bars in the Hoboken city jail, pending settlement of the complicated problem of extradition brought about by his arrest.

PENNSYLVANIA REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION MEETS

Harrisburg — Without a dissenting voice, the Republican state convention nominated the candidates agreed on by the Republican leaders of Pennsylvania. The full Republican state ticket follows:

Governor—John K. Tener of Washington county.

Lieutenant governor—John M. Reynolds of Bedford county.

Secretary of internal affairs—Henry Houck of Lebanon county.

State treasurer — Charles Fred Wright of Susquehanna county.

Henry T. Walton of Philadelphia was elected Republican state chairman.

The platform indorses the administration of President Taft, approves the action of the state's senators and representatives in congress, and the administration of Governor Edwin S. Stuart.

"We believe that the tariff bill recently enacted is in accord with the Republican policy expressed in its last national platform 'to preserve, without excessive duties, the market against foreign competition to which American manufacturers, farmers and producers are entitled, but also to maintain the high standard of living of the wage workers of this country, who are the most direct beneficiaries of the protective system.'

"Since the passage of that bill the wages of employes in this country have been increased nearly $500,000,000 per annum. In a few instances the tariff on luxuries was increased, but on other articles the revision was downward. No increase in the price of the common necessities of life can honestly be attributed to the tariff, for the duties upon them were not raised. We agree with President Taft that it 'is the best tariff bill the Republican party ever passed.'

"The Republican party hereby pledges itself to a vigorous and prompt prosecution to final judgment of the civil proceedings already instituted by the attorney general of the commonwealth and now pending in the courts to compel restitution of all moneys alleged to have illegally been paid out of the state treasury in connection with the completion and equipment of the new capitol building, to the end that every guilty person may be compelled to return to the state all moneys fraudulently obtained.

"We stand for the continuation of the wise policy which has built up the great system of public education which, inaugurated by the Republican party, has made this commonwealth famous, and pledge ourselves to the enactment of such further legislation as will simplify the laws relating to the public schools and provide for the further development of free public education.

"Increased appropriations are demanded for institutions for the insane and afflicted and economy in the building of the institutions and the business administration of their affairs.

"The platform also points to the fact that the state is free from debt and is the only one of the great states in that position and that this has been accomplished without the imposition of increased direct taxation upon the people.

"The good roads plank, which was written by Senator Penrose, calls for continued and increased appropriations for the improvement of the roads of the commonwealth and recommends a system of improved main highways connecting all the county seats with the centers of activity and trade, for greater encouragement of townships in care of their dirt roads and expresses the hope that ways and means may be found to abolish the toll roads.

"The crusade waged by Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, state commissioner of health, against tuberculosis is highly commended and the protection of the food and water supplies of the state are demanded.

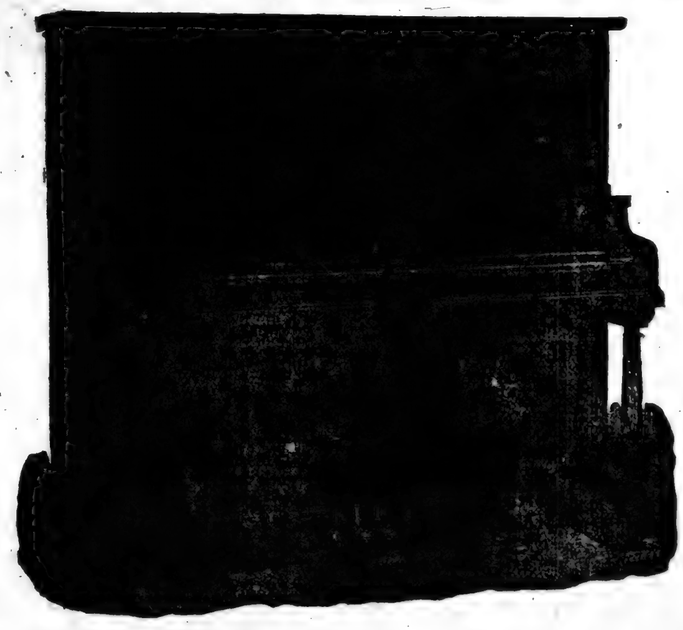
"Recognizing the menace of the habitants of the coal regions of the commonwealth by the sinking of the surface, due to the removal of the coal, we favor an investigation of the subject to the end that a remedy therefor may be provided.

"Recognizing our deep and lasting obligation to the soldiers and sailors of our senators and representatives in congress to support all pension measures necessary to secure them from want in their declining years and increasing infirmities.

"We favor legislation that will lead to the settlement of all labor disputes by arbitration to the end that a better understanding may be brought about between employer and employe, so that strikes, with their attendant losses to all parties, may be eliminated.

"To the end that the supremacy of the state of Pennsylvania in the manufacturing of iron and steel shall be maintained, we favor the appropriation of public moneys for the building of a canal connecting the Great Lakes and the Ohio river.

"We pledge the candidates nominated to a faithful and unswerving allegiance to the principles of the party and to the continuance of the present economical and wise administration of the offices to which they will be respectively elected in November and commend them to the support of all who favor state government thus administered."



In response to an offer of $10,000 for the best plan for the enlargement of Berlin and its suburbs 27 papers were received. The prize was divided among four of these.

Minnesota Republicans.

St. Paul, Minn. — Indorsing the "wise conciliatory" administration of President Taft, but laying on the table by an overwhelming vote a resolution "reaffirming our unalterable adherence to the policies promulgated by Theodore Roosevelt," the Minnesota Republican convention met and nominated a full state ticket. The delegates also indorsed the work of the Minnesota members in congress and their efforts in endeavoring to secure legislation in the interests of the people.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

The Chilton County republican convention last Monday at Thorsby went on record for one thing at least. They repudiated National politics in toto and spit in the dark brown eye of Frank Hitchcock, the postmaster general of these United States of America.

It will be remembered that Frank Hitchcock is the chairman of the Republican National Committee as well as the Chief Executive in the Postoffice department and that as the chairman he had much, if not all to do with the organization of the last republican convention—the one which nominated Taft. He engineered Taft's campaign against Bryan and for his success received the postmaster generalship.

He also had much to do with naming the committeemen who compose the national executive committee and as the head of the committee he doubtless had much to do with naming Prelate D. Barker as the committeeman from Alabama. The Chilton county convention setting aside all precedents refused to endorse the administration of Barker and thus it was that they, figuratively speaking, squirted ambeer in the optic of the National chairman of the party.

Besides this Barker is one of the referees of the President in this state; to him the President looks for advice in making appointments to office in this state. For some reason he (Barker) has not dished up the pie just exactly according to Chilton county republican appetite and he was told so in no unmistakable language. While he looked to the convention to pat him on the back and say: "Good, old fellow," they turned and gave him the marble hand and a large yellow lemon with juice enough and to spare.

This is the second turn down that Prelate D. has received at the hands of his party associates within the past few days.

It was but a few short days since the Marengo county republicans, composed largely of negroes, refused to sanction the interference of Prelate. He sent, so it's said, a negro up there to overturn the tables on which the republicans had written their county laws and when his man Thweet arrived he found the wool heads waiting for him and loaded "for bear." They took him into convention, denounced him as a marplot, reaffirmed the resolutions just previously passed and then closed the convention leaving Thweet blinking in the Summer sun and almost scared to return to his chief.

But those who presume to treat Prelate D. Barker in such manner reckon without their host, for he is a fighter, a master plotter and a shrewd politician. But few can cope with him in political chicanery.

He may have lost in one or two rounds but the fight has just begun; Barker can well afford to lose several endorsements and then come out victorious in the end, and when he does make his point woe be to those who crossed his path to knife him.

We've nothing to do with it; it isn't our affair and we care nothing about it but it means some political jugglery from now till the republican convention meets in July and we shall watch it with interest for we believe that Prelate is amply able to take care of himself in a party scrimmage. It's going to be dog eat dog from now on as we see it and we're going to keep our weather eye open and discover which has the best grinders.

Said a sterling democrat in our presence the other day, "we've the best chance for winning in Chilton this year that we have had in many years. Our party is in better shape, the organization is more complete and more enthusiastic than for a long time. If we will just keep out of entanglements and will stand true to our candidates we shall see them elected to office in November."

We believe every word this gentleman said and we endorse his every remark. Let's stand true to the party of the white man; the party which has labored in season and out of season for better wages and lower rents, for lower tariffs and better food, for less taxes and more privileges for the working man. Let's stand by and with the party which believes in white supremacy and repudiates negro equality.

Strange isn't it that some people will contend that the republicans want to elevate the white man and keep him above the negro and yet the two principal exponents of republicanism in Alabama—the referees—employ negroes for labors that could as well and as honorably be performed by white men?

Who sent the negro Thweet to Marengo county anyway and who is the letter writer for the other man? That's what we want to know in this section where people believe in white supremacy?

It begins to look as if Georgia is going to suffer another campaign by Brown and Smith. It will be practically the fight of two years over again except that Smith has added the Vice-Presidential bee, perhaps, to invigorate him and the campaign when he grows weary.

Wonder if P. D. Barker felt the earth shake underneath him about noon on last Monday? They certainly handed him a large bunch of the "sour" up at Thorsby.

Political campaigners should be careful of their stationery in these days. tI takes but a scrap of paper to trace a man from one place to another.

The Chilton repubs gave Thompson a wholesome and pleasant tonic up at Thorsby the other day, but Oh, my! that horrid dose they dished up to Barker! Wasn't it awful?

Counting chickens before the eggs hatch is a little speculative; one might hatch alright but then it might turn out to be a guinea, you know!

We would not presume to say that the Thorsby convention was not a love feast but somehow it looks like Thompson got all the love and Barker—well, he got left.

A national committeeman and couldn't be endorsed by his party in convention assembled! That's rough.

A referee of the President and to be set down on by a county convention—that's hard!

A kind-hearted old gentleman, and to be given the marble heart—that's cruel!

Marengo is composed of many voters but they are white people who belong to the democracy. It wasn't the democracy of Marengo though that sat on Prelate with a dull thud. Thweet, where's Thweet anyway?

Chilton county went and done it just like Marengo did!

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," was written long years ago. Wonder if it's going to hold true in this good year, 1910?

What has poor Prelate done, anyway, that he should have been trounced as he was?

"Man, proud man, clothed with a little brief authority doth cut such capers before high heaven as makes the angels weep."

Thus wrote the Bard of Avon more than a hundred years ago. He must have had a prophetic vision and was looking upon the Thorsby convention.

Said Abe Lincoln some days ago: "You can fool all the people some of the time and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

Looks like that Thorsby convention thought otherwise.

Are the Democrats preparing and willing to take advantage of their opportunities? We shall see.

The people can't be deceived altogether by a push pin in the hands of "the other fellow," even if the other fellow did make the thrust, they know who sharpened the point.

Fortune knocks at the door of every man one time, so 'tis said. She makes some pretty loud thumps upon the door of Chilton Democracy this year. Open the door for her, Democrats!

Never was a better time for campaigning than now; the crops are about layed by and the barbecue is ripe.

Mass meetings are not tests of strength. We once knew a congressman who had two in his mass meeting—himself and his private secretary, yet he was re-elected by a large majority when the time came.

The way Prelate D. had his wings clipped was a caution. He's served his day and generation and he ought to go way back and be a quiet little child now.

Who killed Cock Robin?
I, said the sparrow,
With my little bow and arrow
I killed Cock Robin.

Adam was the first man,
Eve was the other,
Cain was the wicked man
Who slew his little brother!
Hello, Thorsby!

Talk about your feasts to the fullness thereof, but did you notice that Thorsby convention? Talk about loaves and fishes, for which people hang about and are good, but have you cast your eye at the assembly at Thorsby?

Whales, doughnuts as big as barn doors; fried fish, broiled fish, baked fish, pickled fish, canned fish, fresh water fish and salt water fish, brook trout and deep sea bass, salmon, mackerel, snapper, pearch, bream, carvia, plase, soule, pompano, shad oysters on the half shell, broiled, stewed and otherwise, lobster, crab, clams, light bread, biscuit, rolls, doughnuts, cake, pie, cookies and all the rest for one crowd!

Well, anyway, the other fellows got a cat fish and a hunk of corn pone.

RED WING.

FAIRVIEW.

The farmers are now beginning to say farewell words to their crops.

The all day singing at Mount Nebo on Sunday was a great success notwithstanding the fact that many of the people in this neighborhood attended the burial at Pleasant Grove.

School at this place closed last Friday. Everybody enjoyed the term and those attending seem to have made great progress in their studies. We regret to see our teacher leave for he has proven himself to be a successful trainer of the minds of the young people and an up-builder of society generally. His untiring efforts in behalf of his pupils have given him a place of respect and love in the hearts of those who best know him and has gained for him high rank in his profession.

Prof. G. W. Culp will teach a singing school at Mt. Nebo beginning the Third Monday in July and continuing for twenty days. We hope the people of the community will assist in making it a success by giving it their patronage and support.

Owing to the prevailing rains lately the democratic club of this beat did not meet last Saturday night as usual, but will hold its meeting next Saturday night, the 2nd of July. The club intends to help organize another democratic club at Sardis school house. We hope to have a good attendance.

The rain last Saturday night kept the boys of the debating society in anxiety. They were unfortunate enough not to be able to hold their debate; however, they will try it over again next Saturday night.

The prospects for democratic victory grow brighter as the days go by and we are confidently looking forward to the time when the campaigner shall be in our midst shaking hands with the "good people." Democrats be on the alert! We have some shrewd tricksters to deal with but if we keep our eyes open we shall come out victorious notwithstanding the delusive arguments and the sophistries of the republican candidates.

ROUNDER.

Mountain Creek—Soldiers' Home.

On Saturday, July 2nd, there will be a barbecue and basket dinner at the Soldiers' Home. All visitors are expected to bring in their baskets sufficient provisions to provide for their own party. A committee of five veterans will receive the baskets, and have their contents properly placed upon the tables. This committee is authorized to obtain the assistance of such ladies or veterans as they may choose. All others will be relieved from care in this matter.

The officers of the day will have on hand sufficient help to preserve order.

The old soldiers would be glad to see their Clanton friends and all others come. A hearty welcome awaits all.

Dinner will be served at 1:30 p. m.

The old soldiers of the home are passing the summer hours about as usual, many of them taking advantage of the excellent library which has been established in the home.

If there are those who have books of any kind, especially war records, books of travel, biographies of those who took part in the great conflict between the states, we, the soldiers of the home, would greatly appreciate it if they are sent to the library of that institution. They will be properly labeled with the name of the donor and will be entered in our register and kept with care.

OUR COUNTRY GIRL.

True your 'phone girl, good and kind,
Does her work with a pleasant mind,
And from her we would not pluck
One bit of honor or luck.
We do not believe in tearing down
Any one that hails from town,
But we do believe in holding up
Our country girls to the very top,
For there is naught in all the worl'
That will compare with a country girl.

We admit she has no cunning wiles,
Neither has she those goo goo smiles
But as for things that are good to eat
You must admit that you are beat
For there's naught so good in all this world.
As the cooking of a country girl.

Pshaw! talk about your telephone lass!
You know your words are but second class.
You may say it is the height of bliss
To sing the praise of a telephone miss,
But to this we cannot all agree,
For every one must surely see
There is no bliss in all the worl'
To match the love of a country girl.

There is in all of this round worl'
Nothing to match a country girl
With the roses blushing in her cheek,
And smart as a cricket all the week.
She is so busy and so neat,
She is so cheerful and so sweet!
Nay, there is not in all the worl'
One thing to match the country girl.

Oh, some of you will no doubt prate,
Of the grit of the girl in the city gate,
But here we put you all to rout
For every one must cheer and shout
When speaking of Molly Pitcher's fame,
For she it was—the very same—
Who took her noble husband's place
With even a warrior's modest grace,
And the blood which she saw flow
Was more than sufficient to show
That there is none in all the world
Like the stout-hearted grit of the country girl.

And when it comes to grace and wit
We'll fix you again and then we'll quit.
For Ella Sanson's rapid thought
In the days gone by, with danger fraught,
Led Forrest to the ford of old Black creek
Without a paling of her cheek;
And on that day she bore the palm
Without a sign of fear, or qualm,
That's why we say, to this good day,
And say it, too, with pride,
There's no one thing in all the worl'
To match the wit of a country girl.

You will admit that it is true,
Our country girls are pretty, too.
Though the sun may have beamed upon her face
This gives to the roses the lillies place
It leaves, of course, no ugly trace
But blends the colors with queen' grace,
You may speak of your lillies, pale and white,
We want some color to greet the sight.
And there's no color in all the worl'
To match the cheek of a country girl.

There is no doubt of it on earth,
That when you come to seek true worth,
The honors you must pay that lass
Who never shirks or lets things pass,
But always ready, stands so true,
Beneath our Southern skies of blue,
And answers quickly every call,
Of mercy, merriment and all;
Again we say in all the worl'
There's naught to compare with the country girl.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING, 1468 Clybourne Ave., Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. POPULAR SCIENCE & INVENTION

SCIENCE NOTES.

A Cincinnati man has patented an electric air heater for barbers' use, compressed air passing through a cylinder containing a resistance coil.

Camille Flammarion thinks that the tail of Halley's comet is simply an optical phenomenon produced by the flight through ether, similar to the wake of a ship at sea.

Recent experiments have proved conclusively that coal dust which has been ground to a state so fine that it will pass a 200-mesh sieve will explode from contact with either a naked flame or with the arc of an electric current.

A writer in Physikalische Zeitschrift has been investigating the frequency of electrical oscillations when a condenser is discharged through a spark gap. He finds that this depends to a large extent on the nature of the electrodes. For instance, a discharge between copper and silver electrodes would give a longer wave length than a spark between magnesium electrodes, and he comes to the conclusion that magnesium is the most suitable metal for spark electrodes.—Scientific American.

A new system of jointing lead cables has been developed in England. It consists in placing a thin ribbon of pure tin between the surfaces that are to be joined, and then heating them with a blow lamp. The surfaces in the presence of the tin melt at a lower temperature than normal, and thus they are soldered together. The tin ribbon is treated with a composition to prevent oxidation during heating. Another system of jointing consists in the application of a mold over the cable. A piece of tin ribbon is applied to the surfaces which are to be joined, and then molten lead is poured into the mold. The flow is so directed as not to burn through the lead sheathing of the cable.—Scientific American.

The fourteen-year-old president of the Junior Wireless Club of America appeared before the Senate Committee on Commerce last week to protest against the bill introduced by Senator Depew for regulating wireless telegraphy. The young president gave a very forcible argument in favor of amateur wireless telegraph operators, pointing out the fact that if the bill were passed it would check the inventive genius of some forty thousand experimenters. He also called attention to the fact that it would be impossible to enforce the bill without a veritable army of expert wireless telegraph engineers. The junior wireless telegraphers claim that it is possible to cut out interference if the proper apparatus is used and that the present attack on amateur wireless telegraphers is unwarranted.—Scientific American.

HE WAS A BRILLLANT CLERK.

How a Virginia Prodigy Gave a 10 Per Cent. Discount.

I once had a promising bud of genius in my store down on the James River, said a Virginian to a reporter. I keep a general store there, and this bud, that promised to bloom into seven kinds of a loo loo flower, came to me from the far end of Prince George County, on the introduction of a friend of mine and his, who said as he wasn't good for anything else, perhaps he might be made handy in a store. I took him, just to be accommodating, of course, and promised to give him a chance to rise.

He was about 19 years old, and wrote poetry between times, so I put him to sweeping out as a starter. He could sweep well enough, and after a week I put him to doing the chores, and advised him to study the stock while he was resting.

After about six weeks of this kind of training I concluded he knew enough to take charge of my scrap counter, which was a counter where I put all my old stuff about every sixty days, with the most of it marked in big figures and with the additional information to those looking for bargains that there would be 10 off for cash.

Trade was lively the morning I put him at it, and he was doing as well, if not better, than the more experienced clerks, for I noticed several people getting around his way and getting out pretty quick with what they had bought. I didn't think much about the whys and wherefores until the young fellow came to me at the desk with a suit of clothes in his hands to ask me to explain something. The suit bore a large white card inscribed with a big black "$3."

"I don't quite understand this," says he. "The others I sold were marked $10.75, $11.50, $11.98, $12 and $12.48, and it was easy enough to calculate what 10 off would be and sell them for 75 cents, $1.50, $1.98, $2 and $2.48, but I'll be doggoned if I see how you're going to throw $10 off of an $8 suit, unless you want to give the customer $2, and I reckon you ain't that liberal, even at the scrap counter, are you?"

It mighty near gave me a spasm, that did, concluded the gentleman, and I put another clerk at my discount counter p. d. q.

George C. Boldt, the well known hotel man, was talking in Philadelphia about the hotels of Switzerland. "They are good," said Mr. Boldt. "At the price they are remarkably good. The Swiss are a nation of hotel keepers. The Alps, you know, draw all the world to Switzerland; and the Switzer who wants to become a millionaire goes into the hotel business as an American would go into steel or sugar. He begins at the bottom. He is a waiter.

"It is said that once in Berne, at an historic public meeting, all the leading men of Switzerland were gathered together. A vote had been taken, and in the intense silence preceding the epoch-making verdict of the tellers a wag shouted, 'Waiter!' Instantly the whole assembly rose as one man and answered, 'Yes, sir!'"—Tip in the New York Press.

Where the Thunder Storms?

Giant cosmic naturalists like Von Humboldt and Darwin concur in believing that thunderstorms are common near the mouths of great rivers on account of the mixture of large bodies of fresh and salt water at unequal temperatures disturbing the electric and humid balance of the atmosphere, and thus filling the different beds of the air full of electric effluvia. New York city and its bays and harbors have seemed to prove this theory true, for old-timers remember thunderstorms and forked and chain lightning hereabouts as fierce as Jupiter Tonans ever shot athwart the trembling air. But Tip wonders whether the high steel structure skyscrapers steadily and silently bleed out the electric juice of the sky nowadays. We see fewer of those ten-mile-long satanic sky snakes capering, cavorting and wallowing across the bellowing welkin, thundering and scaring the boldest stiff.—Tip in the New York Press.

"Confused and Wrong."

Henry E. Dixey, at a dinner at the Lambs, said of an actor who had failed in a new part:

"His idea of the part was so confused and wrong that it reminded me of Ferguson.

"Ferguson, you know, awoke one morning after a studio supper—you know what studio suppers are—and groaned and muttered:

"'Dear me, what a headache!'

"He screwed up his lips in disgust. The taste in his mouth was horrible. He thought he'd have a look at his tongue, and, reaching out for the hand glass, he took up by mistake a silverbacked hairbrush.

"He stared at the bristles a long while; then he shook his head and said:

"'Fergy, my boy, you certainly do need a shave.'"—New York Tribune.

Skin Rumor Lasted 25 Years.

"Cuticura did wonders for me. For twenty-five years I suffered agony from a terrible humor, completely covering my head, neck and shoulders, so even to my wife, I became an object of dread. At large expense I consulted the most able doctors, far and near. Their treatment was of no avail, nor was that of the —— Hospital, during six months' efforts. I suffered on and concluded there was no help for me this side of the grave. Then I heard of some one who had been cured by Cuticura Remedies and thought that a trial could do no harm. In a surprisingly short time I was completely cured. S. P. Keyes, 147 Congress St., Boston, Mass., October 12, 1909."

"I congratulate Cuticura upon my speedy recovery from pimples which covered my face. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent for ten days and my face cleared and I am perfectly well. Big Catch of Destructive Fish.

Mr. McGee, the gentleman who has the seining privileges on Moon lake, caught 908 alligator gars yesterday at one haul, the gars ranging from forty fifty pounds each. This is the largest catch ever recorded, and Mr. McGee caught only five spoonbills and one buffalo besides the gars.

This is the best thing that could have happened, since the gars are very destructive to game fish, and when the gars are eliminated fishing should be fine this spring.—Clarksdale Register.

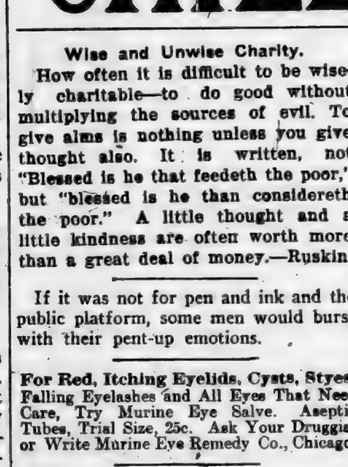
WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.



Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat — no smell — no smoke.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot turn too much wick — it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat — no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it — consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2- and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

THE PATRIOTS.

The burly cannon cracker to the slender little flag
Said, "How are you to celebrate the day?
You never make a single sound, you cannot jump nor shoot,
And where they put you, there you have to stay."

The rockets, roman candles and the giddy, racy wheels
With patriotic zeal began to brag
Of how they'd leap and bang and fizz and flare and whirl—and all
United to deride the silent flag.

But when the day was done, the crackers lay in scattered shreds;
And bits of wheels were clinging to the trees;
The rocket sticks were lying prone; but high above the scene,
The little flag still frollicked with the breeze.

Nancy Butler,
Daughter of the Revolution.
A TRUE STORY.
by Lissa May Lipscomb.

JAMES BUTLER, Duke of Ormond, had much to do with history making in the days when Cromwell ruled England, and it has often been said that if the latter had heeded the duke's wise counsel all would have gone better with the Protector.

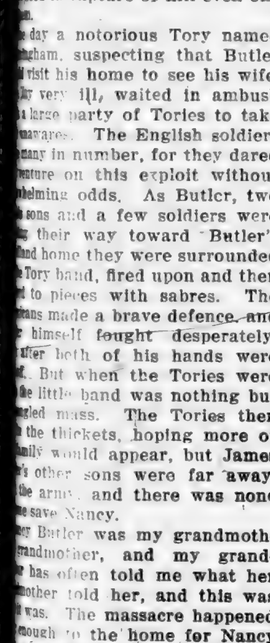
That the duke was a brave man is well known, that his courage was inherited ... of his descendants the history of our country truly testifies.

... story, however, has to do with ... courage of a young girl. Her father, James Butler, a namesake of ... ancestor, the duke, came to America when it was really a new world, ... settled with his family in South ... He had a wife, many stalwart sons, and our heroine, Nancy, ... -eyed girl of sixteen.

... country was in a state of revolt, and, while it was a time that ... men's souls, and women's too, ... also the opportunity for bravery, ... hardihood and loyalty. James ... and his sons were said to know ... , and were such "terrors" to ... enemy that it was considered a ... deed to capture or kill even one ... .

... day a notorious Tory named ... Bingham, suspecting that Butler ... visit his home to see his wife, ... very ill, waited in ambush ... a large party of Tories to take ... unawares. The English soldiers ... many in number, for they dared ... venture on this exploit without ... whelming odds. As Butler, two ... sons and a few soldiers were ... their way toward Butler's ... and home they were surrounded ... Tory band, fired upon and then ... to pieces with sabres. The ... ans made a brave defence, and ... himself fought desperately, ... after both of his hands were ... . But when the Tories were ... the little band was nothing but ... gled mass. The Tories then ... the thickets, hoping more of ... mily would appear, but James ... 's other sons were far away, ... the army, and there was none ... to save Nancy.

... Butler was my grandmother's grandmother, and my grandmother has often told me what her mother told her, and this was ... was. The massacre happened ... enough to the home for Nancy ... the shots, and fearing she ... not what she made her way ... the swamps and forests to ... scene of carnage. When the enemy saw that it was only a girl, they ... her, telling her how hard her ... was to kill and how he bounced ... the sabre strokes, and all this ... insulting tones that Nancy's ... eyes flashed fire, and she said: ... , make your boasts to a girl, ... wards! but if my father and ... were living you would be in ... her in her sad and terrible search. Then she went home to return with their "old sore back" horse and "wheeled sled," and a Mrs. Smith, the only neighbor, and together they carried the bodies home, dug the graves and buried them.



Grandmother used to say that her grandmother's Revolutionary experiences were not all so sad as this one, and once she was so thrilled at a story that she exclaimed:

"Oh, grandmother, I wish I could be in a war!"

Then Nancy Butler Brooks, as she was then named, was very angry.

"You wicked child, hush! You don't know what you are wishing!"

Anyway, poor grandmother had her foolish whim gratified, for she lived through the Civil War, and we have her portrait, painted after she was ninety years old. We also have a manuscript history of the Butler family, written by a descendant of Nancy's, in which the deeds of this rare girl are told.

The United States Flag.

Your stripes of red throb with the life blood of thousands; your stripes of white sigh with the burden of women's tears; your field of blue breathes the steadfastness of a country firmly united; and your stars sing of a union that is welded together by the mighty hand of an Almighty God.

A Famous Flag of the Revolution.

Only a few of the flags borne in the American army during the war of the Revolution are still in existence. One of the most noted of these was carried by the Maryland troops, according to tradition, at the battles on Long Island and Harlem Heights and the several subsequent engagements in which the Maryland regiments participated in the upper part of the State of New York. It is positively known to have been carried as the regimental flag of the Third Maryland March 28, 1781, the flag remained in member of the Old Defenders' Association, he carried the flag in all parades and functions of the association as long as he was able to take part, and died in 1885, aged ninety-nine. The flag remained in the possession of his family until 1894, when it was presented to the Society of the War of 1812, the successor of the Old Defenders' Association, and was preserved by that society until presented to the State of Maryland, at Annapolis, on October 19, 1907. It is one of the State's most valued relics.

HISTORIC FLAG CARRIED BY MARYLAND TROOPS DURING THE WAR OF THE REVOLUTION.
—Mrs. C. R. Miller.

Regiment under Colonel John E. Howard at the battle of Cowpens, S. C., in January, 1778, the color-bearer being William Bachelor. Bachelor was wounded and sent to his home in Baltimore, bringing with him the flag. After the death of Bachelor, on his family, and when the British invaded Maryland in 1814 it was again carried at the battle of North Point by Bachelor's son, William, a member of the Twenty-seventh Regiment of Maryland militia. This William Bachelor bore the flag in all the parades of the Twenty-seventh Regiment up to about 1840, when the regimental organization expired. Being a Forecast For July Fourth.

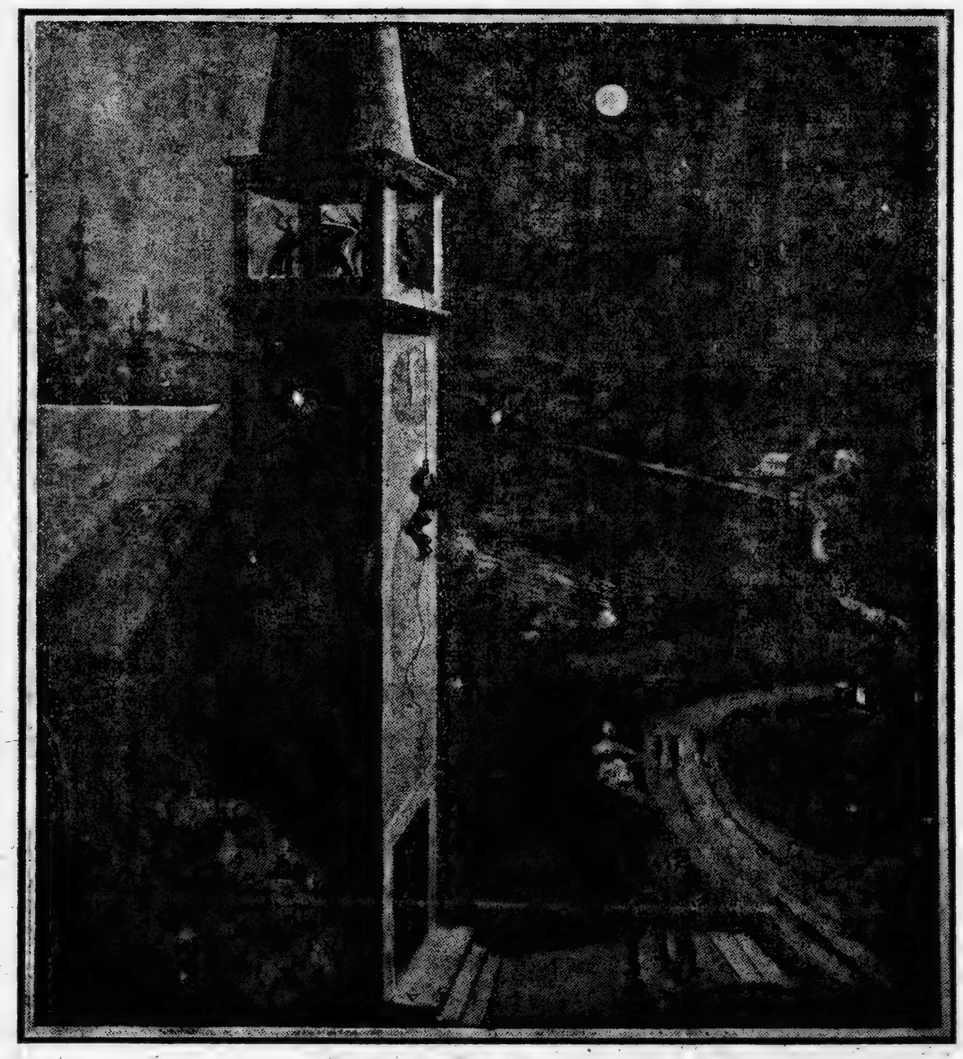
If Fourth of July be warm and fair,
Expect to smell powder everywhere.

If rain comes down and wet us through,
Look out for bands and processions, too.



If the sun shines bright and the sky be blue,
The balloon may go up at half-past two.

If clouds there be on the Fourth o' July,
The crackers will pop and rockets will fly.

If the wind blow north, south, east or west,
Horns, drums and trumpets will get no rest.

Whatever the weather may happen to be,
The Fourth o' July is the day for me!

HOW WE RANG IN THE FOURTH OF JULY,

For weeks we were scheming and planning,
But keeping it dark, just the same,
How to beat the old sexton, Bill Manning,
Who tried to get onto our game.
The hour for the deed was the midnight
When nobody near us should spy
Who climbed the tall steeple and startled the people
By ringing the Fourth of July.

And Bill was a foxy old fellow,
His purpose was settled and grim,
With a temper that never got mellow,
For boys were not boys to him.
On the Third he just took out the clapper,
With all of us boys standing by,
And he "guessed that would hold us," he said as he told us
We'd rung our last Fourth of July.

But he badly mistook us for nappers,
And for faint hearted quitters as well,
For hammers were better than clappers,
So long as he left us the bell.
We threw a stone up through the belfry
Which carried a rope on the fly;
And in spite of Bill Manning and all of his planning
We rang in the Fourth of July.
—The Household-Ledger.

To the Star-Spangled.

The Lily of France may fade
The Thistle and Shamrock may wither,
The Oak of England may soon decay,
But the Stars will shine on forever.

When "America" Was Sung.

"On one Fourth of July in Boston," write Dr. Hale in his "Reminiscences" in Woman's Home Companion, "I had spent all my allowance for July and all my 'election money' on the Common—possibly for a sight in the camera obscura, though I doubt if I had money enough for that—certainly for raw oysters, three for a cent if small, two for a cent if large; probably half a glass of spruce beer, one cent, and two or three checkerberry medals—die now lost—and make what allowance you please for tamarinds, cocoanuts, sugar-cane and other foreign delicacies. I was returning penniless, and had to pass Park Street Meeting House, when an event of historical importance took place. Long columns of boys and girls were going into meeting. The spectacle of a procession of children going to meeting on any day but Sunday was as wonderful to me as a volcanic eruption from the Blue Hills would have been. Of course, I joined the throng. So is it that I am one of the little company who heard the national anthem sung for the first time—

"My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,

"I hope I did not join in the singing, for at that time do was to me even as re and mi, and I am afraid I should not have improved on the harmonies of the occasion."

THINK what havoc the champions of today would have created at a meeting in the seventies!

In the hundred the man of today, Dan J. Kelly, would be almost ten yards ahead with his 9 3-5 seconds, while in the hurdle race, Kraenzlein, for instance, with 15 1-5 seconds, would be finishing while Maxwell would be only about at his eighth hurdle, with his 20½ seconds. In the 220-yard dash, Wendell, with his 24 2-5 seconds, would be thirty yards behind Kelly and Wefers, with their 21 1-5 seconds.

Stevens of Williams, who won the quarter-mile in 1876 with 56 seconds, would be short of the 400-yard mark when Maxey Long, with his 47 4-5 seconds, was breasting the tape. Green of Princeton, who won the half in that same year with 2 minutes 16½ seconds, would not have come around the last turn in time to see Lunghi finishing with 1 minute 52 4-5 seconds.

The man who could just reach 5 minutes in the early seventies in the mile would be almost lapped in another turn of the quarter-mile track by Tommy Connell, with 4 minutes 15 3-5 seconds.

Pryor of Columbia won the running high jump in 1876 with 5 feet 2½ inches; Sweeney, with his 6 feet 5⅝ inches, could give Pryor a handicap of over a foot and be perfectly safe.—The Century.

Men Lifted Car Off Boy.

"An accident that I saw has interested me very much," said Dr. H. P. Wilkins of East Lake in reply to the above question. "The accident occurred at First avenue and Twenty-first street, Birmingham. A small boy on a wheel ran into a North Birmingham car and was knocked under the car. Before it could be stopped he was pinned to the ground by the brake beam on the rear trucks. When the car stopped the wheels were not two feet from his body. The little chap let out a squall that would have waked the dead. Men gathered around the car and taking hold lifted it high enough to get the boy out. I did not think that enough men could get hold of a car weighing several tons to raise it from the tracks. The boy was more frighte:ed than injured."

Gift To State Normal.

Recognizing the excellent work which that school has done toward the dissemination of knowledge throughout the state of Alabama, Mrs. Fannie E. Atkins, of Jacksonville, has donated 123 acres of valuable farm land and three comfortable houses to the State Normal College of Jacksonville, deeds for which have already been received by President C. W. Daugette. The property is located within two miles of Jacksonville and is considered to be one of the best plantation sites in the county, being assessed at several thousands of dollars. The donation was made by Mrs. Atkins for the purpose of aiding worthy young men of limited means to avail themselves of the advantages which the normal course offers.

After an inspection of the Masonic homes in Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and Missouri, the sub-committee of the home building of the Alabama Masons' committee, at a meeting of the full committee to be held at Montgomery, will report a plan for the Alabama home. It is proposed to use the cottage idea and to ask for architect's plans so that the corner stone may be laid in December next, when the grand lodge meets here. The site near this city was selected some time since. Ben M. Jacobs, of Birmingham, chairman of the general committee, and A. D. Block of Mobile, who compose the sub-committee, are making up their final report here.
